SLUMP OF FRENCH FRANC AFFECTED STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 20.—(AP)—The flight from the franc which has attracted only passive interest in Wall street for the past few weeks, suddenly assumed major importance today when it was held responsible for the heavy selling of stocks, which carried scores of issues down 1 to 7 3-4 points below yesterday's final quotations. The franc itself crashed below 2 cents for the first time in history. Total sales crossed the two million mark for the first time since June 15.

Wall street heard wild rumors of rioting in French streets and a panic in the Paris bourse, which, while lacking confirmation from responsible sources undoubtedly caused considerable speculative uneasiness. Regardless of any developments abroad, a reaction in stocks had been widely predicted on the theory that the recent rapid advance in many issues had placed them in a top heavy speculative position.

The day's domestic news was largely favorable. The Federal Reserve report of a reduction in brokers' loans last week was followed by a lowing of the call money rate with the supply of funds greatly exceeding the demand. Directors of the Pere Marquette approved the revised "Nickel Plate" merger terms, the Kansas City Southern, the first road to report its June earnings, showed an increase of over $16,000 in net, but Union Pacific, while showing an increase of over $2,000,000 in gross, reported a reduction of nearly $300,000 in net. June was the fourth consecutive month to show a reduction in the world supply of zinc. Earnings reports, comparing favorably with those of the first half of last year, were published by the Crucible Steel Company, the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation and several other companies.

Private reports of another sharp increase in Crude Oil Production last week caused heavy selling of the oil shares. Atlantic Refining and Pan-American B each broke about 4 points, while the latter recovered half of its losses, while General Petroleum, Houston, Mariand and Union Oil of California showed net declines of 1 to 3 points.

U. S. Steel common was hammered down over three points to 141 but it snapped back above 142 at the close. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe broke from 244 1-4 to 234 and then rallied to 237, off 7 1-4 net. General Electric showed a net loss of 6 points at 358 1-2. Sharp recessions also took place in Case Threshing, Commercial Solvents B, Lorillard, Tobacco, Manhattan Electrical Supply, Sloss-Sheffield Steel, United Drug and United Fruit.

Bullish demonstration in Baldwin, which was run up over 6 points to 124 3-4, and Hudson Motors, which closed 3 3-8 points higher at 61, were attributed to a pool headed by William C. Durant, automobile manufacturer.

Rails lost ground with the industrials. Rock Island showed independent strength by climbing over 3 points to 55 3-4.

A drop of 2 to nearly 3 cents a bushel in active wheat futures featured the commodities markets. Cotton eased 3 to 9 points net higher, raw sugar was unchanged and coffee fell back 16 to 36 points.

Call money renewed at four per cent. and held steady at that figure. The New York Stock Exchange reported there was a large supply all day but very little demand. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Renewed weakness of French francs, which touched a new record low level at 1.95 1-2 cents, again featured the Foreign Exchange Market. Strength of demand Sterling and Dutch Guilders, which ruled around $4.86 1-16 and 40.20 cents, respectively, was construed as an indication of the interest of capital from Paris to London and Amsterdam. Other scandinavian paper currencies yielded in sympathy with French francs.

MONTVILLE MAN LOSES SUIT AGAINST TOWNSMAN

A decision in favor of the defendant in the case of Anistari Zagorski of Montville against Felike Gutkofski of Montville has been handed down by Judge C. B. Waller of the court of common pleas. The suit, in which damages of $175 were asked by the plaintiff, was heard several weeks ago by Judge Waller.

The complaint alleged that Zagorski had purchased a farm in Montville several years ago, with a stipulation in his deed that Gutkofski should have the right to draw water from a well on the farm. The water was obtained by hand drawn buckets. Later the well failed to yield a sufficient supply of water and upon joint agreement of the plaintiff and defendant, the former installed a hand pump at an expense of $210.30, of which the defendant agreed to pay half. This sum the plaintiff alleged was never paid.

NORWICH BOY SCALES MT. RAINER AS TERRIFIC STORM WAS BREWING ON SUMMIT

(Special to the Bulletin)

RAINIER NATIONAL PARK, Wash., July 20—Battling his way over a wilderness of ice, across bottomless crevasses and along rocky ledges at the very edge of infinity, to three miles above sea-level, L. B. Mousley, of Norwich, Conn., reached the summit of Mount Rainier, 14,408 feet high, in Rainier National park, a few days ago.

Rainier is the third tallest peak in the United States, but though Mount Whitney in California and Mount Elbert in Colorado exceed it in height by a few feet, neither approach it in difficulty of ascent. Rainier is rated as one of the most difficult mountains in the world to scale and prospective climbers are submitted to a thorough scrutiny before permission to attempt the ascent is given.

The start of the long trip was made from Paradise Inn, 5,557 feet above sea-level, at 1:30 in the afternoon, and Camp Muir, the stone shelter cabins at the half-way point at the 10,000 foot elevation, was reached shortly before 6 p. m. Here the party rested until shortly after 2 the next morning, when the drive for the summit was begun. After a gruelling pull, first in the eerie moonlight and later in the rising sun, the party attained the crater in the summit of the mountain at about 8:30 a. m. An indication of the difficulty of the climb may be gained from the fact that as the party neared the summit, only 20 or 30 steps could be taken between rests. They were forced to rest standing, as reclining in the snow and rising again would consume too much energy.

A terrific storm was brewing on the summit when the party arrived, great streamers of clouds blowing across the mountain top in a driving gale. Only half an hour, instead of the usual hour, was spent in the fantastic steam caves in the crater of the extinct volcano before the descent was begun.

The party was under the direction of Thomas G. Hermans, veteran Rainier National park summit guide. The trip made with Mr. Mousley was his 35th to the top.

Rainier National park is 18 miles square and surrounds the great mountain from which it takes its name. This is one of the highest perpetually snow-capped mountains in the United States, 14,408 feet above sea level. The glacial system of this mountain is one of the principal park attractions. There are 28 of these glaciers, seven of them "live" or moving glaciers. These seven "live" glaciers originate in the summit snows of the mountain and move down its slopes, in their separate canyons, at rate of from 16 to 20 inches per day.

During the summer months Rainier National park offers a duel appeal to visitors. Great snow-covered areas for winter sports of every sort, and broad, flower carpeted meadows that actually border against the glaciers and snow fields. The glaciers, snow-field and wild flower conditions all exist in the near vicinity of hotels and camps.

Mr. Mousley is the son of Frank Mousley, formerly superintendent of the Uncas Paper Board company of Norwich.

CONNECTICUT HAS NINETY-SIX COM. OFFICERS IN ARMY

The sun never sinks upon Connecticut's proud contribution to the olive-drab clad ranks of the American army; north, south, east, west, from the rugged coast of Maine to the barren sand-swept wastes of the southwest, beneath the snow-capped peaks of Alaska, beside the lulling waves upon the tropic sands or the South Pacific, or even at the citadel of American soldiery in the inscrutable Orient, Tientsin, one will find many gallant defenders or Old Glory who hail from the Nutmeg state.

Inspired by the glorious traditions of their native state which has written so many stirring pages in American history from the very birth of the United States, many Connecticut men have risen to commissioned grades. In all, there are 96 commissioned officers in the army to whom this state means home. Of these 96, no less than 96 were commissioned by availing themselves of the opportunity which the government affords every youth to attain his commission from the ranks of enlisted men. Twenty-four of the 96 were graduated from the United States military academy at West Point and the remaining 46 were appointed from the state at large, from the National Guard, or from the Organized Reserves.

The state's contribution of commissioned officers in the army today includes three colonels, four lieutenant colonels, 21 majors, 33 captains, 23 first lieutenants and 13 second lieutenants.

Connecticut's sons are to be found in every branch of the service—the infantry, signal corps, medical corps, coast artillery, field artillery, quartermaster corps, corps of engineers, cavalry, judge advocate general's department, chemical warfare service, finance department, air service, ordnance department and veterinary corps may all point with pride to the fact that they number among their personnel men from the original Yankee state.

The state's proverbial valor upon the field of battle is attested to by the fact that four of her officers have been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal, an honor conferred "for exceptionally meritorious service in a duty of great responsibility."

Of the three colonels who claim Connecticut as their home state, two are graduates of the Military Academy at West Point and the other was appointed from civilian life.

ISSUES TYPHOID WARNING FOR AUTOMOBILISTS

For the first six months of 1926, 53 cases of typhoid fever were reported to the Connecticut state department of health. While this number is three more than were reported for the first six months of 1925, it is also 30 less than were reported for the corresponding period of 1923.

According to the health bulletin, the first half of the year does not include the period of greatest typhoid prevalence, and for that reason figures for the first half do not include what may be expected during the second half of the year. The bulletin sounds the following warning to vacationists:

"Now that the vacation season is on, special emphasis should be placed upon precautions by individual citizens to prevent typhoid fever.

The automobile has greatly increased the roaming radius of individuals. It has also increased the chances for individuals to spread communicable disease as well as to pick up infection during their travels. In a single day a man in an automobile may traverse the jurisdictions of many health authorities and thus the activities of no individual health officer can fully protect him from the danger of infection. The result is that he must protect himself by precautions based upon his own knowledge of the situation."

Miss Margaret Reardon of New London entertained twelve guests at dinner at the restaurant at Ocean Beach in honor of Mrs. Margaret O'Grady of Long Island, cousin of the hostess, and the former's son.

WATER SUPPLY IN STATE IS SAFE

Every town and city served by the water companies of Connecticut is a safe place to spend a vacation without fear of a contaminated water supply, but on the other hand Connecticut people going out of the state for vacations should be especially sure that the place where they are going has a supply of pure water, is the advice of the Connecticut committee on public service information. Connecticut people having become accustomed to the efficiency and perfection of the water supply in this state are apt to drink the water in places without thought of its source and are also apt to suffer the consequences.

Water which is pumped from wells, unless the wells are sunk in the proper locations, is very likely to be contaminated, for impurities can be drained into them from some distance. Latrines and garbage disposal cans must be located far from the wells in order to insure pure water. Drinking from streams and brooks should be tabooed by all vacationists, according to the committee, for although the supply may seem to be clear and pure, it may nevertheless have been sullied by the location of a pig sty, a latrine, or other like things several miles further upstream. Campers who intend to use water from such sources are advised to boil the water before drinking it and subject themselves to a typhoid inoculation before going on the trip.

As a precaution against endangering the Connecticut water supply, the committee urges all citizens of this state to immediately report to police authorities any campers or picnickers who are discovered disposing of garbage or other waste materials in Connecticut streams or brooks, for it is very possible, although the point of this action may be many miles from the nearest reservoir, that the stream empties directly or indirectly into the public water supply of some town or city.

POETRY

The Message

All the happy daisies
That frolicked with the breeze
In the golden hours
That were fleet to pass
Are flitting; and the shadows
That danced beneath the trees
Mournfully are swaying
Everywhere the beauty
That soothed the weary mind
Wanes 'neath the soft clouds
Drifting from the blue.
I seem to hear a message
Breathing in the wind:
'Harvest now your memories,
For the Summer's through—
Through,
Through,
Through;
And Autumn's fleet to go,
Gather in,
Fancy's bin
To last through the snow.

Don't forget the merry song
That made the summer gay,
The jest that woke the laughter
In the morning heard;
Garner well the pleasant thoughts
In the woods astray,
And most of all—ah, don't forget!—
Keep every loving word.
Those that pleasure wisely
Never need to fear,
If one will heed the warning
There'll be naught to rue.
Why should love and laughter
End in a bitter tear?
Happy he who reaps well
Now the Summer's through;
Through,
Through,
Through,
And the Autumn's fleet to go,
Gather in
Fancy's bin
To last through the snow.

Perfection Place is a lovely street
Where mortals promenade
In faultless suits and perfect gowns
And all are tailor-made;
Pedestrians, tall, well-formed,
With shoulders broad, and necks
Full-throated or like fabled swans
Depending on the sex;
There is no trouser leg uncreased
No old or ugly face,
No gowns but hang like saintly robes
In all Perfection Place!

The motor cars that dash about
Are always limousines—
There are no dirty runabouts
Or greasy truck machines;
The pavements all are spotless, too,
And always clean and sweet,
In short, Perfection Place is just
A real ideal street!
'Tis true I have no residence there—
I've not sufficient means,
But I have seen it pictured in
The back of magazines.

Treatment with organic compounds of mercury during the operation of grafting apple nursery trees has been found by department of agriculture experts to reduce materially subsequent infection of the stock with crown gall. Formaldehyde has been used in the past for this purpose, but the more recently developed mercury compounds have proved much more efficacious in checking the spread of the fungus growth.

POPULACE OF FRANCE IN AN UGLY MOOD FOLLOWING DEFEAT OF HERRIOT GOV'T IN CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES 290 TO 237

More Than 3,000 Persons Surrounded the Chamber—Reserves Were Called Out as the Crowd Hooted Herriot and Members of the Government and Tried to Rush the Police Guards—M. Poincare Has Consented to Form a New Ministry.

PARIS, July 21—(AP)—The Herriot cabinet was defeated tonight 290 to 237 in the chamber of deputies after barely two days' existence.

Outside, while the vote was in progress, police reserves curbed a crowd of several thousand Parisians who hooted the premier and members of his government ent The temper of the crowd was described as "ugly" and it was seen as typifying the mounting apprehension of the country at large.

The Herriot cabinet was formed to succeed the tenth ministry of Aristide Briand and to rehabilitate the financial position of France

The Herriot ministry lasted but a few hours longer than the Francois-Marsal ministry, which in 1924 was formed to present the case of the president of the republic Alexandre Millerand to parliament, after M. Herriot had refused to receive a mission to form a cabinet at his hands.

Significant references to the historic event of M. Millerand's departure from Elysee palace, where he was succeeded by M. Doumergue, were made today when the man who played an aggressive part in this event fell with a disastrous crash from the pedestal to which the elections of 1924 lifted him.

The reverse the radical leader met with today was all the more serious since it followed so quickly upon the assault he made with success on the Briand cabinet last week, and because it may mean the return of M. Millerand to power with a national-union cabinet comprising all the former premiers and presided over by M. Poincare.

While the premier was pleading his case before the chamber, crowds gathered in front of the Palais Bourbon. They grew to serious proportions and before the vote was announced at least 5,000 persons had massed in front of the chamber, along the Quai D'Orsay, in the Rue Bourgogne and the Rouleard Saint Germain. They hooted Herriot, and there was an occasional cry of: "On to Elysee."

It was a well-dressed orderly crowd, which obeyed the police, but its presence caused considerable anxiety inside the chamber building. It began to disperse when news came that the government had been overthrown, but many remained, and police reserves were summoned, in the fear that some of the deputies might meet with harsh treatment on leaving the chamber.

The Herriot ministry was defeated on the question of its declaration of policy. This dealt entirely with the salvation of the franc and the general financial situation. Immediately after the vote M. Herriot went to Elysee palace and presented the resignation of his ministry to President Doumergue.

M. POINCARE CONSENTS TO FORM NEW MINISTRY

PARIS, July 21—(AP)—Raymond Poincare, former president of the republic and former premier, will now take up the task of organizing a new cabinet to replace that headed by Edouard Herriot, which failed to receive the support of the chamber.

President Doumergue, in deference to the general desire of parliament, the press and public decided tonight that the time was ripe for a national ministry representing all, or as many parties as possible to work for the rehabilitation of the finances of France. He asked M. Poincare to organize such a ministry, and this Poincare agreed to do. He will consult with the political leaders tomorrow morning.

The Herriot ministry went down to defeat in the chamber by a vote of 290 to 237. Herriot's declaration of policy was not acceptable to parliament, and he handed the resignation of his ministry to the president.

Despite the resignation of the cabinet, M. De Monzie, finance minister, continued his efforts for the passage of his bill authorizing the transfer to the Bank of France of the balance of the $100,000,000 Morgan loan, amounting to approximately $25,000,000. The chamber adopted this, to which the finance committee had added a clause permitting a further note issue of an equal amount. This bill has yet to go through the senate.

FRENCH SENATE VOTES TO USE MORGAN FUND

PARIS, July 22—(AP)—The senate early this morning adopted the bill of Minister of Finance D. Monzie, providing for the transfer to the Bank of France of the remainder of the Morgan loan. As the chamber of deputies had previously passed the bill, it now becomes law.

HEAT WAVE PREVAILS IN SOUTHWESTERN ONTARIO

Sweltering thousands sought relief at bathing beaches and playground bathing pools, the latter being kept open for longer periods to accommodate the crowds of children.

A WEALTHY BACHELOR COMMITTED SUICIDE

BAY SHORE, N. Y., July 21.—(AP)—Elliott Stellingworth, wealthy bachelor was found dead in his apartment today. A rifle was found beside his body, and after an examination, Coroner Moore pronounced him a suicide.

Stellingworth's relatives recently had a guardian appointed for him in an effort to conserve his large estate. The body was discovered when a constable forced an entrance to the apartment to serve papers on Stellingworth in a civil suit. Coroner Moore said Stellingworth had been dead several days.

N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE UPSET BY REPORTS FROM PARIS

NEW YORK, July 21—(AP)—The stock market was completely upset in the midst of a promising rally today by the publication on financial tickers of Paris reports that the Bank of France might be forced to suspend payments to the French government within a day or two in order not to exceed the legal maximum of not circulation or advances to the state.

Early gains of 1 to nearly 10 points in many stocks were wiped out, or substantially reduced, the general market closing lower on the day. At the same time the French franc dropped from an early high of 2.20 cents to 2.09 cents and then rallied slightly when it became known that the early Paris reports had been exaggerated.

The first dispatches on the tickers quoted the French finance minister as saying that the Bank of France might suspend payments without making it clear that it applied solely to payments. After an appreciable delay the ticker "explained" the statement applied solely to payments to the government and had no connection with the solvency of the central banking institution.

FALSE RUMORS ABOUT BANK OF FRANCE SUSPENDING

PARIS, July 21.—(AP)—A probable explanation of rumors that the Bank of France might be forced to suspend payments tomorrow is contained in a misinterpreted statement of Finance Minister De Monzie before the chamber of deputies today.

The finance minister said that by ordering the sale of the remaining funds of the Morgan loan would have "prevented the cash windows from closing tomorrow." The minister plainly referred to the cash windows of the treasury where national defense bonds are reimbursed. His words were erroneously interpreted in some quarters as meaning that the cash window of the Bank of France would close.

SPEAKEASIES IN NEW YORK OUTNUMBER OLD SALOONS

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP)—There are more "speakeasies" in New York city than there were licensed saloons in the whole state, before prohibition, according to an estimate of the local prohibition administrator.

Chester P. Mills, federal prohibition administrator, placed the number of "speakeasies" at 15,000. Records for 1918 compiled by Excise Commissioner Herbert W. Sissons show that only 13,005 licenses for saloons were issued for the whole state that year.

The 15,000 speakeasies are more than double the number of licensed saloons in the five boroughs in 1918, when only 6,966 licenses were granted.

HURRICANE KILLED 100 PERSONS AT RUGOVO, SERBIA

VIENNA, July 22.—(AP)—One hundred persons are reported to have been killed at Rugovo, Serbia, when a hurricane, accompanied by a cloudburst, struck the town, says a dispatch received here from Belgrade. Forty bodies have been recovered. The river rose suddenly, inundating the town. Several houses collapsed upon people who had taken shelter in them. Many cattle and sheep perished.

A similar cloudburst has done enormous damage at Krusevao, near Belgrade. The soap works there was destroyed, together with its stock of ten carloads of soap.

DECLARES THE "WORLD IS GOING PLUMB TO HELL"

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP)—Hillyer Hawthorne Straton, son of the Rev. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, declared today at his examination for ordination that the "world is going plumb to hell."

His examiners voted to recommend him for acceptance in the ministry.

Young Mr. Straton dodged only one question. It came from a Negro who wanted to know what he thought of "sanctification." He admitted later he did not know what sanctification was.

CHICAGO COMMUTERS SOON TO RIDE I. C. ELECTRICS

CHICAGO, July 21(AP)—The 70th anniversary of the time when Chicago first began to need suburban passenger train service will be celebrated July 19-24, when the Illinois Central, which ran the first suburban train in 1856, changes from steam to electricity on its lines for commuters.

The first train made three round trips daily to the "outlying village" of Hyde Park, six miles away, and on the first trip, the record says, "nary a passenger" was carried. Now there are 400 suburban trains a day.

The change to electrification marks the completion of an odd contract between the Illinois Central and the city of Chicago. Seventy years ago the city urged the Illinois Central to build its roadbed along the outer edge of Michigan Boulevard, to keep Lake Michigan's stormy assaults from washing away the then budding residential section.

A generation later the city fathers were dickering with the Illinois Central to regain the immensely valuable lake front they had been anxious to give away. One or the provisions in the new contract was that the Illinois Central must electrify its down town lines by January, 1927, and the job has been completed seven months ahead of schedule.

Since the recapture of the lake front, the city has built a 300 acre park beyond the railroad by filling.

Death of Constructor of Brooklyn Bridge

Col. W. A. Roebling, Aged 89, Died of Infirmities of Age In Trenton, N. J.

TRENTON, N. J., July 21—(AP)—Colonel Washington A. Roebling, famous builder of the Brooklyn bridge, and President of the John A. Roebling Sons company, died at his home here this afternoon. He was 89 years old. Infirmities of age were responsible for his death.

Colonel Roebling had been in failing health for the past few years. At the time of his birthday anniversary in May he was confined to his room and has gradually grown weaker. He suffered a turn for the worse yesterday, and this morning passed into a coma from which he did not rally, dying at 3:25 p. m.,

The end came peacefully. At the bedside were Mrs. Roebling, the colonel's so nand daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Roebling, of Bernardsville, and his grandson Siegfried Roebling, another grandson, Donald of Bernardsville, is the other immediate survivor.

Funeral services will be held at his home Friday at 3:30 p. m., with burial late at Cold Springs-on-the-Hudson, N. Y.

Colonel Roebling made an excellent record during the Civil war. He received three brevets for gallant conduct, including that of colonel. At the outbreak of the war he enlisted in the Sixth New York Artillery and served for a year with that battery. During the remainder of the war he did staff duty. He was on duty at general headquarters during the battle of Chancellorsville and each morning ascended in a balloon to reconnoiter the enemy. From one of those ascensions he was the first to discover, and announce, that General Lee was moving toward Gettysburg.

Colonel Roebling was born at Saxonburg, Pa., May 26, 1837, the son of John A., and Johanna Herting Roebling.

On January 18, 1865, Colonel Roebling married Emily, daughter of Sylvanus Warren of Cold Spring, N. Y. They had one son, Mrs. Roebling, who died in 1903, was a sister of Major General Gouverneur K. Warren.

Several years ago Colonel Roebling married again, his bride being Cornelia Witsell Farrow of Charleston, South Carolina. She survives him.

CHANGES RECOMMENDED AT LAKE DENMARK ARSENAL

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP)—Radical changes were recommended today by Captain O. C. Dowling, commandant of the Lake Denmark, N. J., arsenal, if the devastated munitions depot is rebuilt.

The naval court of inquiry investigating the disaster in which 21 persons are known to have died, met at the naval hospital at Brooklyn to obtain the testimony of Captain Dowling and several of the marines who were injured.

Captain Dowling said the Lake Denmark reservation is not large enough to store safely more than a quarter of the quantity of explosives concentrated there when a series of explosions, following a thunder storm, practically wiped out the depot ten days ago.

Captain Dowling recommended the use of much smaller magazines, perhaps a quarter the size of those which were destroyed, and the increasing of the distances between magazines of from three to five times. He stressed the importance of eliminating wood from shell houses, both in their construction and in the packing of their contents. The presence of large quantities of wood aided the spread of fire and explosions at the destroyed arsenal, he said.

FICTITIOUS TRANSACTIONS BY ATLANTA TRUST CO.

ATLANTA, July 21.—(AP)—John W. Boyken, Fulton county solicitor general, announced today that evidence of "fictitious transactions" and use of bank funds for bucket shop speculation was being disclosed by the investigation his office is making into the affairs of the Bankers' Trust Co., against which bankruptcy proceedings last week resulted in the closing of more than 50 small banks in Georgia and several in Florida.

"The investigation, up to this period has disclosed that many fictitious transactions have been resorted to in an effort to hide funds which were unlawfully used and this seems to be one of the favorite systems whereby large sums have been diverted to the benefit of the Bankers' Trust Company and certain of its officials," Mr. Boyken said in discussing the investigation in his department.

"Everything indicates that bank funds involving large amounts have been squandered by certain individuals in Atlanta in bucket shop speculations," he said.

Hanson, declared yesterday he was "absolutely innocent of this charge."

11 Boys Drowned At Peterboro, Ont.

They Were Out in a Canoe Which Capsized — Four Boys Reached Shore.

PETERBORO, Ont., July 21.—(AP)—Eleven boys were drowned today in Balsam lake. Ten of the lads were reported to have come from Toronto, while one, Raymond Allen, lived in Peterboro.

According to a report from the scene of the tragedy, the boys were from the St. Andrews camp. They were out in a war canoe which capsized. Four reached shore and there is still hope that some of the missing ones may have swum to safety.

LINDSAY, Ont., July 21.—(AP)—Reaching land after a five hour struggle on an upturned canoe on Balsam lake, four exhausted campers today told a grim tale of seeing eleven companions sink, one by one, after the capsizing of their war canoe last night.

Nine of the missing young men and boys, whose ages ranged from 16 to 22, were from Toronto, one from Peterboro, and another from Galt.

The party set out from a camp conducted by the brotherhood of St. James' cathedral, Toronto, heading for Coboconk to get food supplies. A stiff breeze blowing across the lake made the water choppy and although some of the men at the camp advised against the trip, the party insisted on going, since they were all fair swimmers and experienced canoeists.

The four survivors said they ran into a squall off Carnegie point on the Gull river and the canoe capsized when it was struck suddenly by a heavy wave. All the party clung to the upturned canoe and attempted to propel it to shore, but the survivors said their companions became exhausted, lost their hold and sank.

Ray Shea-Butcher, of Toronto, director of the camp was one of the last half dozen left grasping the upturned boat.

The survivors say that suddenly he shouted to them that he was dead weight. He was only a fair swimmer, but regardless of the fact that they were at least a quarter of a mile from shore he let go the canoe and stroked out for land. He had gone a few yards when he was forced to give up and immediately disappeared in the water.

The craft continued to drift with the wind until beached on Grand Island with the four survivors some time after midnight. The four men, Artaur Lambden, George Waller, W. Wigginton and Benjamin O'Hara, all of Toronto, declare they were so utterly exhausted from their experience that as soon as they crawled to dry land sleep overcame them. When they awoke they set out on foot and reached the camp this afternoon.

Word was at once sent to Lindsay and a hastily organized party headed by Chief Coroner Logan set out for the lake. Police and firemen were recruited to help drag the water for the bodies, but at 8 late hour tonight, none had been recovered.

SENATOR FESS' VIEWS ON AGRICULTURAL PROBLEMS

PAUL SMITH'S N. Y., July 21—(AP)—Leaving the summer white house where he had been a guest for 24 hours, Senator Fess, republican, Ohio, indicated today that the administration in the next session of congress would seek to improve agricultural conditions by legislation along sound economic lines but would not favor price fixing of crops as advocated by farmers organizations in the west.

Undoubtedly there will be a move at the next session, Mr. Fess said, to strengthen measures already taken in behalf of the farmers and it will be along "sound lines" designed to facilitate the marketing problem.

The views of the Ohio senator were given a few hours after the mid-west farm conference at Des Moines, Iowa, had been concluded but he did not comment upon that meeting and its stand for legislation along price-fixing lines. It was said, moreover, that during a discussion of many questions between President Coolidge and Mr. Fess, who has been a prominent supporter of the administration's agricultural policies in congress, the farm relief question, was not gone into.

Arrangements for the senator to receive newspaper correspondents were made before he left White Pine camp and he drove to meet them here with Mrs. Coolidge who accompanied him to Tupper lake, where he is spending several weeks with friends.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO IS BENT ON FIGHTING DUEL

NEW YORK, July 21—(AP)—Despatche sfrom Chicago that the writer of an editorial which linked the movie sheik with pink powder puffs had not revealed his identity, have failed to dissuade Rudolph Valentino from his intention of forcing a duel, American fashion. There is just one possible development, he said, which might force him to "laugh it off."

"I'm going back to Chicago," he said today as he received reporters in his suite clad in an orchid bathing suit and lavender lounging robe, "and I'll have satisfaction.

"Unless the scoundrel who wrote that foul stuff is an old man, too feeble to take a man-sized licking, I'll give him what he's earned."

"But what," some one asked, "would you do if the scoundrel turned out to be a woman?"

Mr. Valentina achieved a gesture of supreme gallantry.

"Ah, that goes without saying," he responded, "I should just have to laugh it off."

REPUBLICANS IN IOWA BURY THEIR HATCHETS

DES MOINES, Ia., July 21—(AP)—Iowa republicans in their state convention today buried all their hatchets, voiced approval of all candidates chosen at the June 7 primary clasped to their bow. Brookhart, unseated United States senator once termed a party outcast, and again their senatorial nominee, demanded equality for agriculture, and commended the national and state administrations.

BOSTON BOYS BOMBARDED SCHOOLHOUSE WITH STONES

BOSTON, July 21.—(AP)—Just to show that they preferred vacation to school, boys of the Quincy school in the South End marched on the school and bombarded the building with stones. Seventy-two panes of glass were broken, to a total damage of nearly $300. Ten of the boys were fined $15 each by Judge Cabot in juvenile court today.

SWELTERING HEAT WAVE ALONG ATLANTIC COAST

Many Heat Prostrations Were Reported in Various Sections of New England—Hottest July 21 in History of Boston Weather Bureau—In Boston the Mercury Mounted to 98 Degrees, in New York 96 Degrees, in Philadelphia 100—Relief is Promised in Shape of Thunderstorms.

(By The Associated Press.)

Easterners took what comfort they could Wednesday night, the hottest day of the year in most sections and the hottest July 21 ever recorded in many, in predictions of the weather bureau that rain was on the way.

Showers were expected out of the west and there seemed justice in that source to the wilted east, as the heat wave also had rolled down to the Atlantic seaboard from the western plains.

In New York city the mercury mounted steadily all day until it reached a new high for the year of 96. There it stayed and dusk came without any suggestions of relief. Almost a dozen prostrations were reported during the night and one man, a laborer, fell dead in the ditch where he was digging.

In northern New York the weather was moderate but in the southern tier sweltering heat was experienced. All records for the summer were broken at Hornell. Factories had to close on account of the heat in Lockport. One death was reported in Utica. The eastern Catskills and the Hudson river valley reported blistering temperatures.

Boston passed all previous records for July 21 when the mercury mounted to 98 in the next hour and a half, noon. Portland, Maine, had an official temperance of 93 but reported low relative humidity tempered the heat.

The official thermometer in Philadelphia mounted to the century mark, at 3:04 o'clock, the hottest weather since June 5, last year, but then receded to 97 in the next hour and a half. Temperatures above 90 were recorded generally in eastern Pennsylvania cities.

The heat wave rolled across the northern border and Canada reported temperatures in Ontario ranging from 90 to 96. The hottest spots in the province were Windsor and London. One death and scores of prostrations were reported.

HEAT RECORDS FOR THE YEAR IN THE MID-WEST

CHICAGO, July 21.—(AP)—New heat records for the year were hung up in the mid-west today while the hot weather moved eastward, and the northwest was released from the terrid wave with the coming of rain and coller weather.

Weather forecasts indicated that relief might be expected throughout the middle west before tomorrow night, shifting winds within a few hours being expected to bring thunder showers and much cooler weather.

During the past three days, upwards of 50 deaths in mid-west states have been attributed directly or indirectly to the hot weather and farmers throughout the corn belt said that unless there is heavy rain within the next few days much damage will be done to corn and other grains.

For the third time in as many days the mercury climbed to a new record for the year in Chicago late today when it touched 96. It was the hottest July 21 in Chicago in 25 years, the mercury on the same day in 1901 standing at 102.5.

Two suicides at Champaign were attributed in part to discomfort caused by heat, while Illinois, Nebraska, Indiana, Iowa and Wisconsin continued to swelter, the cool wave had overspread almost the entire northwest.

At Denver, top-coats were in demand after a 34 degrees drop from 88 yesterday.

In Milwaukee the top was reached at 95 1-2 and four drownings and three heat deaths were recorded in Wisconsin.

HOTTEST JULY 21 IN HISTORY OF BOSTON WEATHER BUREAU

BOSTON, July 21.—(AP)—The hottest July 21 in the history of the weather bureau today drove many thousands in New England to the refuge of beaches, inland resorts and parks. When the temperature in Boston reached 98 degrees at 4 o'clock, the previous heat record for the date—92 degrees on July 21, 1885, had been surpassed by five degrees. It was the second day of an extreme heat wave, yesterday a maximum of 91 degrees having established a new mark for July 20.

Many heat prostrations were reported in various sections of New England, the Boston total reaching nine in the early afternoon. Relief was promised for the evening in the form of thunderstorms, but in the meantime the beaches were thronged and all city dwellers who were able to leave had sought the cooling breezes of seashore and lake.

With the mercury hovering high in the nineties, the weather bureau made public the comforting assurance that the maximum marking for the month of July was yet many degrees distant. It was recalled that the peak temperature for the month in bureau records was 104 degrees on July 4, 1911. At 1 o'clock today the mercury had climbed well above yesterday's high to 93, in the next hour there was a jump of two degrees. At 3 o'clock the mercury had reached 96 and in the hour that followed came the rise to the top point of 98.

More than 1,000 persons took advantage of Mayor Nichols' permission to sleep on Boston common last night and other city parks all had their quotas of families fleeing from the stifling atmosphere of flats and tenements. Many more prepared to seek the great outdoors tonight, taking advantage of the city's hospitality. Today hydrants were tapped and impromptu shower baths in city streets arranged for thousands of children.

Many stores and other places of business were closed several hours earlier than usual to enable employes to reach the beaches. A number of brokerage offices closed their doors at 3 o'clock.

One drowning in the New England area was attributed to the extreme heat at Keene, N. H., Charles Driscoll, a youth, was seized with cramps while bathing in the Ashuelot river and sank before help could reach him. Nearly 200 bathers were in the water close by at the time.

REPORTS OF HOT WAVE FROM CITIES OF STATE

NEW HAVEN, July 21.—(AP)— New Haven today saw the second hottest day in July in the history of the weather bureau.

At 2:10 this afternoon the thermometer stood at an official 98.8, or .2 of a degree below the official 99 of July 31, 1917, which was the highest the mercury has climbed here during July. During the latter part of the afternoon, the temperature was well above the 90 mark.

The hottest day New Haven has seen, according to records at the weather bureau, was September 2, 1881, when the thermometer registered an even hundred.

Little hope of relief is in sight, it was believed by weather observers, unless thundershowers, which might come tomorrow, materialize.

While men and women sought what comfort they could in the heat of the day, municipal showers at six of the local fire department headquarters were enjoyed by more than 10,000 children.

No heat deaths or serious prostrations had been reported up to an early hour tonight.

MERIDEN, July 21.—(AP)—Today was the warmest day of the season, the thermometer registering about 95 in the shade and well over the 100 mark in the sun. No prostrations were reported.

WATERBURY, July 21.—(AP)—The mercury soared to a new high mark of 102 today. No signs of relief are in sight, although the temperature dropped six degrees at 6 o'clock tonight. No prostrations were reported.

BRIDGEPORT, July 21.—(AP)—Mercury rose to points ranging from 96 to 94 about Fairfield county today, forcing thousands to shore resorts along Long Island sound. No heat prostrations were reported here, but hospitals reported all patients were affected by the torridity.

THREE MIDWEST CRIMINALS ARRESTED IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, July 21—(AP)—The police net held securely in its mesh today three alleged "big time" criminals from the midwest whose combined depredations were said to approximate $1,000,000.

Two of the men were said to have operated a gigantic system whereby loot from banks and brokerage houses was palmed off on country banks as collatera foir loans. They were held for police of Milwaukee, where it was said they had robbed a bank of $300,000.

The other man was charged with being head of a gang modelled after the notorious Whittemore band and was said to have directed robberies which totalled $400,000 in the past six months. He asked to be sent back to Chicago where he said he had shipped a trunk full of jewels yesterday and where he said he could give the district attorney valuable information about the bootleg ring. He also intimated he might have information to divulge about the recent slaying of Assistant District Attorney McSwiggin in a bootleg war.

The Milwaukee men were Joseph Feurstone, alias Firestone, and Henry Sternfeld, alias Arthur Kassin. They were arrested a week ago and charged with the theft of bonds valued at $40,000 while the securities were being taken to a Wall street brokerage office on May 5.

Earlier in the day George Cohen of Chicago was arrested with Solomon Brofman of New York Lane jeweler last Monday. He denied any part in the robbery here but told police it would be best to send him back to Chicago where he had information concerning crime conditions.

ARREST MADE IN THE MELLETT MURDER CASE

CANTON, Ohio, July 21—(AP)—The first arrest in the Don R. Mellett slaying case was made by police here today when they held Peter Magraf, of Akron, known as a gambler. Magraf is said to have admitted havin ghbeen in Canton the night of the slaying, and is alleged to have been near the Mellett home.

Magraf asserted he was with John Demos, known as "Blackie," also of Akron on that night. Two detectives went to Akron immediately to locate "Blackie" and bring him to Canton. Demos is out on bond of $6,000 after having been arraigned on a white slavery charge.

TWO GYPSY WOMEN HELD FOR THEFT IN STRATFORD

STRATFORD, July 21—(AP)—Two gypsy women charged with theft of $500 in cash from a desk in the Stratford Trust company were arrested in Worcester, Mass., today, according to word received here today from the Worcester police. Authorities of all large cities in this vicinity had been asked to watch for a high powered car of expensive make bearing the license numbers Indiana, 968852, in which the gypsies were reported to have made their escape after filching the bundle of money from the desk in the local bank.

The information was given out by the banking department upon direct query and in order to refute statements that seven banks had failed, it was stated.

DALEY, BOER WAR HERO DIES AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

WILLIMANTIC, July 21.—John B. Daley, aged about 50 and a hero of the Boer War, died at his home, 185 Union street here, about 8:30 o'clock this morning after eighteen hours illness which culminated in a hemorrhage. Mr. Daley had previously been in excellent health. He was born in Central Village the son of Mark and Mary Brennan Daley and had come to this city when a youth. He was a member of Company E, Third Regiment Connecticut National Guard, under Captains Patrick Fitzpatrick and John H. Morrison. Late in the 90's he went to visit Ireland and England. The Boer War in South Africa broke out about this time and he joined the English Army. He was cited for bravery three times, receiving medals. He distinguished himself in the battles of Spyn Kop and Pareburg.

He returned in 1904 to make Willimantic his permanent residence and was employed by the American Thread Company for years. Several years ago he married Mary Hagen, who survives him, as do three brothers, Hugh Daley of New Hampshire and Thomas and William Daley, of this city also a sister, Mrs. B. Loveland of Windsor.

MRS. EDWIN GILLETTE, 97, HAD GREAT-GREAT-GRANCHILD

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 21.—Mrs. Sarah J. Gillette, 97, one of the oldest residents of Lebanon, died at her home there early Wednesday of infirmities resulting from age. She had been in fair health and able to do light housework at times. She sustained a shock a few days ago. Mrs. Gillette was born in Lebanon, August 12, 1829, the daughter of John C. and Nancy Chamberlin Randall. She was the widow of Edwin Gillette who died some 15 years ago. Surviving her is a son, Arthur Gillette of Hebron; a daughter, Mrs. Hattie S. Robinson of Lebanon; a sister, Mrs. Lucius Robinson of Columbia; five grandchildren, eleven great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild. She was a member of Hebron Congregational church.

All is now well with the taxicab parking ordinance adopted at the July meeting of the common council. There is every reason to believe that the ordinance was adopted above and over the sanction of the standing committee on streets. The three committeemen, Alderman William E. Jackson, Charles H. Beebe and Arthur J. Dubreuil stood pat, three against four in disfavor when the resolution was adopted. It looked for a time as if they would simply have to comply with the new order which proposed ten parking paces for taxicabs, six on Church street, four on North street, to be divided equally on both sides of these thoroughfares. Then came the finding of a hoop-hole in the resolution. It failed to make provision as to just where on those two streets these parking spaces should be marked off, other than to specify between Valley and Main streets. Then the fun started. Wednesday forenoon the street committee with City Engineer Robert E. Mitchell and Street Superintendent Irvin M. Ford looked the streets and set off on an independent selection of taxi parking spaces, and it is evident that those business houses which will have a taxi stand in front of the door are not at all pleased. It is understood that the original idea in the resolution had been to place the taxicabs near the Main street entrances to North and Church streets. This idea is not carried out in the committee's selections which follow: North street, west side, 20 feet from Main street corner in front of the Willard H. Smith, Inc., store; east side, 20 feet from corner in front of Whittemore block; Church street, east side, 20 feet from corner, in front of Acme Electric Company store and in front of Moriarty & Rafferty's shop; west side, in front of The Chronicle Building and in front of Blanchette & Blanchette's store in Pomeroy Block. Each parking space is 20 feet long and is reserved strictly for the use of taxicabs. The committee announced that the ordinance would go into effect this Thursday morning but according to Mayor John C. Tracy it will not take effect until Sunday July 25, the ten-day limit after the first public printed notice. Other than in the designated spaces, taxicabs are not allowed to park on Church, North or Main streets in the area between Walnut and Union street entrances. Unquestionably the last of the ordinance has not yet been heard. Mayor Tracy's plan, now twisted entirely out of its purpose through the alleged loophole, is not meeting with his favor nor that of the business men who feel victimized, and it is apparent that these men, while trying to rid themselves of the taxicab nuisance will be unwittingly assisting the street committee to break the ordinance and sanction one that is favorable to the committee.

Wednesday was the hottest day thus far this year. As early at 7 a. m. the mercury had climbed to 74 degrees and by noon they weren't making heat registers tall enough to show a true reading. Some of the boys at the postoffice exposed a thermometer in the baking sun against the building. They saw the mercury rise and rise until it touched the top, 120 degrees, and they ran off looking for ice-water. The average temperature was 102 degrees.

Interesting jottings of the doings of Company C of this city at Camp Trumbull, Niantic, are received here. Private A. Gill, who has been confined to his quarters for a few days with injuries, was taken to Lawrence hospital, New London, in the ambulance, accompanied by Corporal Richard Moriarty. It is reported that Private Gill is a patient for neuralgia or rheumatism. Every one else in the camp is in tip-top condition, even Private Armand Vertefeuille hopping around as if he really did not have a broken leg. Mess Sergeant Paul C. Webb continues to receive many compliments for his cooking. Captain Morrison is conducting a personal investigation into the alleged failures of an alarm clock in the mess department of the company. It is indicated that Company C has been selected for guard duty on Governor's day again this year, because it is the largest unit and considered one of the most efficient in point of general knowledge. Corporal John Ahern and his squad took part in the camp-motion picture filming and was also part of the special company which executed manoeuvers before Governor Trumbull Wednesday. This "honor" squad consisted of Privates Adrien LaChance, Bassett, Felix, LaFlamme, Triska and Blouin. Billy Edwards, company mascot and veteran camper at Niantic, has broadcasted a sweeping challenge to any other company mascot for a sparring bout. His redoubtable mit is not welcome, however, and the challenge remains unanswered. Friday night is anticipated, for then a court martial trial will convict or free Private Lucas and Blanket Sergeant Martin of trivial infractions. Lieutenant Quish of South Manchester will be the judge, Harold and Donald, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Amos E. Lewis of Willimantic, have been guests on the company street.

SHAW AT SEVENTY SAYS SIMPLE FOOD FOR HEALTH

LONDON, July 21 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw will be 70 years old on July 26, but he will not overload his stomach with an elaborate birthday dinner.

In fact, the eccentric dramatist never eats a heavy dinner. That is the reason he says he is in good health and is able to work steadily without exhaustion. He rarely accepts an invitation to dine out, and if he does he only eats simple food. Vegetables and fruit make up his diet. He never eats meat.

BOUNDARY COCKFIGHTERS ARE KEPT ON THE JUMP

Mains are usually set for very early hours in the morning and the pits are located in whichever state seems to be free of police control. But the officers of the two states are cooperating and keep in such close touch by telephone that the fight promoters are kept dodging across the boundary with their birds.

DANIELSON

JUDGE RUSSELL A TRUSTEE OF BROOKLYN SAVINGS BANK

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 21—This afternoon, the annual meeting of the Brooklyn Savings bank was held at the institution's banking rooms here. J. Arthur Atwood presided at the meeting of the corporators and the annual report was presented by Treasurer Sidney W. Bard. Attorney Sabin S. Russell, Judge Oscar F. Atwood, Brooklyn, and Herbert H. Pepler were elected corporators.

At a meeting of the trustees immediately following the meeting of the corporators the following officers and trustees were elected: President, J. Arthur Atwood, of Wauregan; vice-president, Frederick A. Jacobs, Danielson; treasurer, Sidney W. Bard, Brooklyn; assistant treasurer, Arthur F. Hughes, Dayville; trustees, Charles Bragg, Central Village; George H. Call, Danielson; Dr. George M. Burroughs, Danielson; Frederick E. Bitgood, Danielson; Ernest R. Warren, Danielson; Joseph N. Lavallee, Danielson; Herman M. Coulter, New Bedford; Irving W. Davis, Danielson; Fred W. Tillinghast, Central Village; Thomas J. Seaton, Moosup; Edward A. Sullivan, Danielson; Judge Sabin S. Russell, Danielson.

Judge Russell is the new member of the board, succeeding Fayette L. Wright, who had served for many years, and who recently resigned because he has left Pomfret and taken up his permanent residence at St. Petersburg, Fla.

Treasurer Bard's annual report showed that the bank's earnings the past year have been at the highest point in the 54 years of the institution's history. The bank was established in Brooklyn in 1872, and did business there until about 13 years ago, when its quarters were removed to the West Side and later into Danielson, that the opportunities for growth might be improved. At present the bank's resources are in excess of $3,000,000 and there is constant growth. During the years of its existence the bank has had more than $50,000,000 in deposits. At the present time there are more than 7,000 depositors representing all sections of eastern Connecticut and many places outside this section of the state.

The territory served considered, the Brooklyn Savings bank has had an amazing growth during the past decade and has gained in strength and stability in a degree that has earned it rank among the soundest of the savings institutions of the state.

"HOLE IN ONE" PLAYER GETS MANY PLAUDITS

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 21—Alfred Pate, one of the Danielson members of the Putnam Country club, has stepped right out into the limelight of golfing fame and is taking his bows before an applauding multitude that appreciate just what it means to make a "hole in one."

Mr. Pate accomplished that very unusual feat at the club links one afternoon this week, shooting the second hole, a distance of about 120 yards, in one. Such a thing is very unusual anywhere and has occurred only a very few times in all the years that players have been going over the Putnam county club links.

Mr. Pate is a comparatively new player, so his achievement is all the more joyful to him. Among other distinctions he becomes a member of The Hole-in-One Club and incident to that will receive, among other things, a case of ginger ale, a safety razor, a hole-in-one pipe, suitably engraved, and an allotment of golf balls. "Now," says Mr. Pate, "I am going to try to make the 19th hole in one."

A bell that has been swung in a metal tower on the roof of the central fire station for many a year was taken down during Wednesday and will no longer figure in the sounding of Danielson's fire alarms. It will be replaced this week by the new diaphone, that will be heard far and wide.

The old bell has figured in sounding alarms for fires in Danielson for more than half a century and after such service may be regarded as something of a local historical relic. Prior to being mounted on the central fire station it was in the belfry of the old borough hall on Water street. In those years, which was before the installation of the fire alarm telegraph system, it was the sole means of sounding fire alarms here, though church bells later came into use. It has rung out for such disastrous fires as the one that wrecked the Hyde block, more than 35 years ago, for the destruction of many structures, large and small. It has been rung after presidential elections and many other special occasions now holding outstanding places in the history of the nation.

Chief A. F. Woodward said Wednesday he did not know just what would be done with the bell. It likely will be stored at the central fire station until someone comes along with a suitable suggestion for its use and preservation in connection with the public life or interests of the borough.

The new fire alarm box to be installed on upper Maple street, as recently authorized by the warden and court of burgesses will be No. 12. This box is of the very newest type and is being installed to give quick access for fire alarms to a steadily developing residential section of the borough.

At St. James' church Wednesday morning, Miss Alida Guimont and Herve Gendreau were united in marriage by Rev. Joseph Daschaux, M. S., the pastor. The nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. Fr. Richards of Canada, an uncle of the bride. The wedding was attended by numbers of relatives and friends of the bride and groom.

The prolonged heat wave again punished humanity in Danielson and all the surrounding country Wednesday, with a maximum temperature of 97 degrees. It was such a day as tempts the average person who can find some excuse for doing so, to lay down ordinary cares and devote no energy at all to keeping cool and otherwise as comfortable as possible. For those who sweltered in business places, there was consolation in the fact that today brings the weekly half-holiday.

Wednesday morning the funeral of John Choquette was held from his home in North Sterling with a high mass of requiem at All Hallows church in Moosup, with Rev. J. E. McCarthy as the celebrant. Burial was in All Hallows cemetery. The bearers were Chester Billington, Alphonse LaParle, Sr., Alphonse LaParle, Jr., and W. E. Minnaugh. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

A miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Loretta Lambert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lambert, was given Wednesday evening by a number of girl friends at the home of her sister, Mrs. William Reddy, of Mechanic street. Members of the party present Miss Lambert a variety of gifts. Entertainment and refreshment added to the delight of the evening.

The new fire alarm was connected up and had pressure in the tanks, late Wednesday afternoon, when the installers were checking up the installment and making ready for the test of the new apparatus, which is practically ready for use. The work has been underway for several days. The main pressure tank in the apparatus room of the central fire station carries 100 pounds of compressed air.

All along the trunk line highway between Danielson and Putnam the state highway department is applying a sort of tar and asphalt mixture to the shoulders of the highway. In due time this material will harden and serve in effect to widen the traveled way, giving operators of motor vehicles more leeway in passing other machines and lessening the chance of accident through running off concrete or macadam in the soft dirt.

Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home in Brooklyn, Rev. John R. Pratt of the Congregational church in that place conducted funeral services for James Lowry. Burial was in the South cemetery. The bearers were Judge Oscar F. Atwood, George Parker, Fred E. Miller and Frank Spaulding. A. E. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

After work Wednesday evening there was an exodus from Danielson of those who could arrange to quickly get to some place where bathing is permitted.

William S. Brown has a newly freshened cow at his Shepard hill farm near Wauregan that is producing 100 pounds of milk a day.

Governor Smith is the name that King George W. Jacques has given a young rooster he recently acquired, and he says the bird will be crowing for "Al" in 1928. We shall see what we see."

The demands upon Danielson's icemen for their product Wednesday, rating the hottest day of the season here, kept them on the jump until well after most everyone's day's work was done.

Little chains dragging along the ground and hung from the rear axles of motor trucks especially gasoline trucks, are a safety device against possible explosions of gasoline.

It was said Wednesday that the tax collections in the town of Killingly have been exceptionally good this year, and it is hoped to make even a better showing before the end of the fiscal year on July 31.

Twilight leaguers playing games here this week have been getting some real tough workouts because of the consistently high temperature.

A fairly good thermometer placed high above the ground in the central section of Danielson was showing a temperature of 104 degrees at 4:45 Wednesday afternoon—and it was not directly exposed to the sun.

Out of some of the gardens of Danielson are coming ripe tomatoes, a product that has developed very slowly this season, but has come forward with a rush during the past fortnight.

PUTNAM

SEVENTEEN YEAR OLD BOY CAUGHT WITHOUT LICENSE

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, July 21.—Henry Bonin, 17, of Putnam was fined $10 yesterday by Judge Louis O. Rieutord at Webster, Mass., on the charge of driving an automobile without a license.

When asked by the judge if he had forgotten his license, he replied that he had never had a license, as one had to be at least 18 years of age in Connecticut in order to obtain a license. He further said he had never before driven a car without someone with him who held a license, but this time the other members of the party were none of them as old as 13.

The police officer when asked how he happened to stop the young man, stated that he looked rather small behind the wheel and when stopped he had no license. Young Bonin when asked if he did not know that he should not drive a car, replied that he did. Judge Rieutord assessed him $10 which the young man paid.

BALL TEAM LOST TO GIRLS— TOO GENTLEMANLY TO WIN

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, July 21.—The Putnam twilight baseball season opened when the "Dearest Enemy" baseball club of Boston, a club composed entirely of girls, won from the B-H Silk Sox of this city in a game played on Adams field. About 2,000 fans turned out to see what the fair sex could do on the diamond. To say that the Boston aggregation performed with exceptional grace and confidence is hardly giving them their just deserts. However, the silk men seemed to be anxious to be gentlemen on the field and being thus occupied forgot the score until the last inning, when they were forced to admit that Miss Guadreau could work a beautiful drop on the third strike.

Beginning July 29th, twilight games will be played every Thursday evening throughout the season. By starting at 6:30 fans will be able to see the games, which will last for seven innings. Next Saturday the Putnam team will play at Montville against the strong Gairs of that town.

The quarterly meeting of the Northeastern Fish and Game club was held at the town hall in East Woodstock. Many matters of importance were talked over. There was a large attendance.

COAL LEGISLATION

Through congress is not in session and no legislation can be enacted for a number of months, there is nevertheless interest in the coal situation and a belief that some provision should have been made for dealing with any emergency that might arise is a matter of protection to the coal consumer.

When the president indicates that he would like to see the same method tried out that has been adopted for dealing with railroad disputes, there is apparently disclosed one of the plans for dealing with the coal situation, which every now and then leaves the consumer high, dry and coal because of the stoppage of production.

Repeatedly has it been shown that the miners and the operators would have been much better off had they been willing to submit their differences to arbitration and to have continued production which adjustments were being made. This would have been showing some consideration for the consumer at the same time, but the consumer get no thought or consideration. When increases are demanded it is known that the consumer will have to pay them if granted. When opposition is manifested to demands by employers they point out that the burden ought not to be placed upon the consumer, but it makes no difference wether the miners or the operators win the consumer always experiences a boost in the price of coal. Just as long as he continues to burn coal he is in a merciless grip. Just as long as there is a shutting off of production the consumer feels the effect, and the time has long since passed when he should get protection against such highhanded methods.

Legislation that would make it possible to meet the situation in case of an emergency is greatly needed. It should have been provided before the last strike, but failing that congress should have found time to have done something in the last session. Coal legislation is greatly needed and it should be set in motion before another emergency prompts the withholding of action in order to avoid injustice in the stress of an emergency.

The president is certainly right when he says that coal users need protective laws.

ANOTHER POLAR DISPUTE

The green eyed monster is now at work among the north pole visitors, and curious enough among those who went with the same expedition. There have been controversies between leaders of rival expeditions which have engaged the attention of the whole world, but now it is a question of the respective services performed by members of the same party, those who went over the pole in the Norge by way of Spitzbergen to Alaska.

The trouble seems to have precipitated by General Nobile, regarding whose part in the construction of the airship and the taking of it to Spitzbergen there is no question, when in a description of the flight he claimed the credit for the navigation of the craft across the polar region. He doesn't claim to have held the wheel all the time, or any great part of it, but as commander he maintains that the operation of the Norge was under his directions.

Lincoln Ellsworth, who furnished a considerable part of the money to make the flight, looks at the situation differently. He insists that Nobile was taken along chiefly to please Mussolini, that he was not the navigator, in fact he questions whether he knows much about navigation, and insists that the credit for navigating the Norge should go to Riiser-Larson. Full credit is given General Nobile for building the craft and providing the dirigible that made the trip possible, but the general rates Ellsworth as no more than a passenger.

Thus we find that those who should have been of one mind regarding the details of the trip concerning the operation of the craft are divided. Perhaps other members of the party who looked after important details might raise a similar argument if they could get anyone to dispute with them but it will amount to little. The flight was made. It accomplished what was undertaken and there was glory enough for all without anyone trying to claim what belonged to another or to belittle it, but there's no telling what small jealousies will do when they get started.

DEFENDERS OF CRIME

On repeated occasions attention has been called to the part which lawyers and in some cases courts play in aiding those who set out to deliberately violate the law and to menace public life, and safety. This is possible through failure to take action to stop or penalize it, as well as through co-operation in the commission of crime.

This matter was brought up at the recent meeting of the American Bar Association in Denver when the attorney general of Illinois declared that fraternally organized professional bank robbers and safe blowers, numbering 300, had retained as their permanent chief legal adviser and defender one of the most brilliant members of the New York bar.

That is a matter which might well have the attention of the American Bar association for such efforts as it can make to change it. It is a bit surprising that one of the most brilliant of the New York bar should be willing to identify himself with such business however large the retainer might be and yet it is probably no different than in being done by some of the lesser lights in the profession.

It is to be expected that all who get into the clutches of the law will have the benefit of legal advice and be protected in their rights, but when organized criminals have lawyers apparently guiding their acts and ready to hurry into court to make all kinds of pleas for leniency, delay and kind treatment and to implore the courts to ignore the protection to which the public is entitled to, it is a question whether those who plead for such robbers, holdup men and yeggs are not just as much involved in the lawless schemes as those who actually perpetrate them. The dollars that come from the criminals are able to make lawyers perform all kinds of antics and ill gotten loot is thus once more divided.

The bar association was not given the name of the brilliant New York lawyer whose conduct was discussed. Probably it would not be difficult to obtain it if the association desired to go further into the matter and exert its influence in an effort for betterment.

EVERYONE SHOULD SWIM

When it is reported in the news that six drownings occurred in New England one day this week it indicates a wholesale removal of children which might have been prevented. Certainly they were untimely deaths and they occurred after the manner in which children and adults even have been losing their lives for many years.

When children step in holes, carrying them from shallow to deep water, when they fall from a raft, or a boat, when a canoe upsets or when through some accident are thrown into water over their heads those that can swim stand a much better chance of coming out alive. They know how, in fact, to take care of themselves, in the water. They are not as panic stricken as those who cannot swim. They can make the best of such a situation and get themselves to places of safety, or sustain themselves in the water until help reaches them.

All but one of the six who lost their lives one day this week were unable to swim. They lacked that bit of instruction which is important for each and every one. They were in perilous places for children without such ability and yet they were no different than many others who have a similar handicap.

It is because of just such deplorable losses that all persons in Sweden must learn to swim, and the importance of being able to take care of oneself in the water has prompted many colleges to insist all students who are physically able must learn to swim before they can get their diplomas.

Had all six of those referred to been able to swim it is firmly believed that there would have been no such record of losses by drowning that day. Everyone should know how to swim.

HERRIOT QUICKLY DROPPED

It may be observed in connection with the fall of the Herriot ministry in France, an end which was duly forecast, that inasmuch as it was unable to accomplish anything or get the support of parliament it might better not have been created. Such a view is entirely proper insofar as the accomplishments of the ministry is concerned, but through the organization of such a ministry and the plan it put forth it has been possible for a protest to be rendered by the people as well as parliament against any such manner of solving France's financial problems.

There was lack of confidence in Caillaux when the last Briand proposition was turned down. There was the same, or more emphatic, feeling toward the Herriot plan; even at it seemed inevitable that there would be.

But French politicians have been foundering all over the lot in their failures. They have been playing a political game, been guided by party jealousies, and in the meanwhile conditions in France have been going from bad to worse. That policy cannot be continued indefinitely. It would seem to be time to get down to a common basis of understanding, to sink petty jealousies and to unite for the salvation of France before conditions are made any worse.

The calling of Poincare to form a new ministry means the return of an old hand at the helm. Possibly he can present a policy that will under existing conditions be endorsed and thus permit constructive action for the stabilization of the franc and the settlement of those financial problems that have been hanging fire too long. It is at least time that the French parliament woke up to its responsibilities.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: You'll be cooler if you keep away from the thermometer.

If you are looking for that frost in July just remember there are more than ten days left.

Talk of introducing a Stagger system in New York City has nothing to do with prohibition.

Now that a trip around the world has been cut to 28 days, who will be the first to do it in 20?

Probably the least disturbed of any because he has no control over radio is Mr. Hoover himself.

Even if we are having a cool summer it is a bit better than those 22 feet of snow in Argentina.

Considering the loss of $75,000,000 worth of ammunition at Lake Denmark perhaps lightning is what is needed to hasten disarmament in Europe.

There's an exceptional heat wave in London and an unusually cold and snowy spell in Argentina. There are downpours in some parts of this country and droughts elsewhere, and yet there's dissatisfaction.

USING SYSTEM

"Well, well," remarked that pretty young person's brother. "A sheik is pitching his tent among us. Degrone! He puts me out of the game entirely. I'm outclassed."

"Geoff, darling, what drivel," expostulated the pretty young thing. "Not in this select boarding house! I don't see why Miss Melrose took in such a person."

"He's highly ornamental. You'll fall for him at once."

"Nonsense, Geoff! You know I never like brunette men." Laura reached up and pulled one of her brother's sandy locks. "I dare say he is frightfully conceited. Those sleek dark men always are."

After dinner when Geoff and Laura had returned to their own living room Laura gave her brother one of what he called her most "I told you so" glances, and remarked that Mr. Belton was absolutely insufferable. She said she simply could not stand him.

"Aren't you a trifle sudden, my dear?" asked Geoff laughing. "He seemed harmless."

"Couldn't you see how bored he was when Miss Melrose introduced him to everyone?"

"I didn't notice. Maybe the poor fellow is shy."

"Shy, with those piercing black eyes?" asked Laura so scornfully that her brother was much surprised to find her in the general living room late the next afternoon conversing in French with Belton.

"I didn't suppose you would ever have anything to do with him," he said to her when they were alone together.

"From something he said," she explained, "I saw he fancied he was the only one in the house an fait in French. I though I'd relieve him of that idea."

"How is his French accent? Will it scratch the furniture?"

"No, he really speaks very well," admitted Laura relustantly. "I think he's proud of it, for it said he likes to sing in French, if he has some one to play his accompaniments. Of course, he thinks there's no one here equal to the task, but I intend to show him that I know a little about music myself. He's coming up here to try over some bergerettes tonight—you know, those charming little shepherd songs."

"I won't be here to chaperon you."

"Don't worry about that, old dear. At least three of the women boarders who heard us talking about it have invited themselves up here to hear him sing. If it weren't for me that man's ego would grow too fast for safety, with all these women hanging on to every word he says and looking at him with open admiration. Honestly, Geoff, it's nauseating to see what idiots even middle-aged women make of themselves over a handsome young man."

"You admit that he's handsome?"

"Why, yes, in a way, of course. I never said he wasn't."

"Oh," said Geoff, and on Saturday afternoon when he met his sister and Belton coming into the house with glowing cheeks and skates clanking over their arms he said "Oh" again, but this time inaudibly.

"Do you know, Laura began at once, when she was taking off her furs in their own rooms, "Mr. Belton was telling me about the winter sports in Switzerland, so I just decided to show him that an American girl in Chicago can skate as well as that young English duchess he took a prize with at Davos."

"I'm glad you're teaching him to appreciate home talent," grinned Geoff, and that evening after Laura had convinced Belton that he was not the only one in the house who could do the Charleston, he said to her gravely that he thought she had taken most of the conceit out of the shiek, "I think it's about time you laid off. It isn't sporting, Laura, to lead on a chap the way you're doing when you feel toward him the way you do."

"Why, Geoff, I—I don't dislike him." The color rose swiftly in Laura's pretty face. "You know he's really—he's really very—"

"Dont struggle any more, my dear. All I have to say is that you have some system."—Chicago News.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Declaring that the Protestant Episcopal church is incomparably rich in money, organization, influence, power and yet it is failing to produce anything like apostolic results, a group of bishops and other leaders has launched a plan for a nation-wide campaign to bring the church to greater effectiveness. Out of the 135 bishops of the church the one chosen to lead the crusade is the Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, bishop of the diocese of eastern Carolina. Though comparatively young in years, Bishop Darst has earned a wide reputation for his organizing abilities and his enthusiastic leadership in the church. He is 50 years old and a native of Virginia. His academic education was received at Roanoke college and his theological training at the Theological Seminary of Virginia. After his ordination in 1903 he filled pulpits in Richmond, Newport News, and other Virginia cities until his election to the bishopric in 1925.

Stories That Recall Others

The Whole Family.

They tell funny stories about Florida. One of the recent visitors there brought back the following as an example of the one family restaurants that are run there and branded by him the best he had ever seen.

"I was driving along one day in Florida," he said "when I saw a lunchroom with the following signs on it: 'Mother's Place; Daughter's Pies, and Pop on Ice.'"

One Way to Get Them.

Little Bobby was absorbed in playing marbles with his childhood pal, Jack, on the front veranda. Presently his older sister, carrying a sliced juicy lemon, came out of the house.

"Bobby," she interrupted, "stop your playing for a minute. I'm going to put some lemon juice on your face to take the freckles off."

"Honest, will his freckles come off?" wide-eyed, Jack questioned. Bobby's sister assured him they would.

"Then," said Jack with determination in his attitude, "I'm going to stay here and catch them when they drop off."

AS OTHERS SEE IT

SPEED AND SAFETY
(Woonsocket Call)

It is interesting, if nothing else, to note that on the same day a British physician made bold to assert that there is safety in speed and that there is less danger at 90 miles an hour than at 45, the fire commissioner of the city of Boston caused to be issued an order warning drivers of fire trucks in that city they must, under no circumstances, drive faster than 25 miles an hour. While many will be convinced, to use a slang expression, that the physician over in England is "talking through his hat," they will approve of the order which directs the drivers of Boston's fire apparatus to cease reckless driving.

It is, of course, the duty of Boston's fire department and the fire departments of other cities to reach the scene of any fire, for which an alarm has been sounded, in as short a space of time as possible, always with the hope that the blaze can be checked before it assumes alarming proportions. At the same time no fire department should permit the drivers of its machines to accomplish this feat at the expense or human life or damage of property. The Boston fire commissioner holds that fire apparatus has, under all conditions, the right of way, and that there is, therefore, no reason for reckless driving. He limits the speed to 20 miles an hour in "in-town" sections and then only under the most favorable conditions and in other sections to a speed which shall, under no conditions, exceed 25 miles an hour. Apparatus returning to the station, following a fire, is limited to 15 miles an hour.

It is frequently true that drivers of fire trucks, some of whom do not get an opportunity to "step on the gas" any too often, appear to hold the opinion that it is their inviolable right to drive their apparatus through city streets at break-neck speed. Were it not for the fact that this may result in damage to the apparatus, other private or public property and possible injury to citizens and were it not for the fact that some of these spectacular drivers have families dependent upon them, many of us would permit them to continue the practice and break their own necks if they saw fit.

Fire apparatus, on the way to answer an alarm of fire, should have the right of way. It should be permitted to reach the scene of fires as quickly as possible just as long as this is accomplished with safety to the men on the truck and those who may be in its path. That cannot be disputed. However, the driver of a fire truck has no more right to engage in reckless driving than has any other individual even if the whole town is burning down. Especially is this true in cases where apparatus is returning to the station from whence it came. The sooner the drivers of fire trucks learn this the better off they and the rest of us human beings will be. There is absolutely no excuse for reckless driving on the part of operators of fire trucks, and the fire commissioner of the city of Boston does well to warn the members of the Hub department against it. Fire commissioners and fire chiefs elsewhere will also do well to consider this matter.

IN DAY'S NEWS

THE MAN-MADE "FLOATING ISLANDS" OF THE ATLANTIC

"Crossing the Atlantic has become different from what it was when the first steamship made the passage barely three generations ago, or even when men and women not yet old made their first transit," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. "The larger ships have come to be called 'ocean ferries,' and the name is in many ways appropriate. You do not expect to be tossed about much on a ferry; and you needn't be shaken up much now in crossing the Atlantic, unless you choose the stormiest seasons. Ferries run on close schedules; and when you go aboard a crack trans-Atlantic liner nowadays you know pretty well within a few hours when you will step ashore 3200 miles away.

"The two biggest of them are practically great wandering steel islands that, defying the usual rules of geography, make themselves now a part of the Eastern hemisphere, now a part of the Western. Their length approaches 1,000 feet, almost a fifth of a mile; their beams are 100 feet, as wide as a boulevard. Many a proud building, housing the population of a town, rises from a land area smaller than the hulls of these great ships.

"The ships are themselves practically great buildings, whose land as well as their superstructures was fashioned by man; and they, too, house the population of a town. When you cross to Europe on such a boat it is no longer a matter of being marooned for a week or ten days with a small group of people. It is as though you spent six fleeting days (they are days of 23 hours) in a town whose population was far above the average in culture, prosperity, and intelligence; whose government functioned perfectly; and which maintained numerous attendats to look after your comfort.

"There are few shore comforts that you cannot have on such a ship. You sleep in beds, not bunks. There is running water in your stateroom. You dine as you would at a great land hostelry; and you will feel uncomfortable if you are not prepared to dress the part of a metropolitan diner. There are good orchestras which play for tea, and for dances in a great ball room each evening. The promenade deck on which you take your walks is nearly a quarter mile in circuit.

There are numerous deck games, including two sorts of deck tennis, and even golf tournaments for the championship of the boat. On the lowest deck is a large swimming pool. There is a card room for votaries of bridge; a well stocked library, and a smoking room that surpasses in comfort that of many an exclusive club. There is a barber, a hair-dresser, a tailor, a doctor and dispensary of course. Whether you are well or ill, and whether you crave mental diversion, athletic sports, or luxurious ease, you can find what you wish.

"Operating a ship of this sort is a tremendous enterprise. In the linen closets and in use are close to 200,000 pieces of linen. On the trip from New York to Cherbourg the biggest liners might throw overboard a piece of linen every three seconds, leaving a 'hare and hound' trail of towels, sheets, stewards' aprons, and the like entirely across the Atlantic, no two pieces many feet apart. And the ship would arrive on the other side with several thousand pieces lift.

"Far down in the hull of such a ship in the section seen by few passengers, and well below the water line is the tremendous, complicated machinery that shifts these 'islands' from hemisphere to hemisphere; in effect, huge power houses.

"Four great shafts 16 1-2 inches through and more than 100 feet long are spinning around at 180 revolutions per minute, nakedly between their bearing and the turbines that turn them. Toward the rear of the hull you see them disappear, the big propellers are churning, pushing nearly 60,000 tons of steel and humanity through the ocean at 25 miles an hour.

The briny ocean trickles in about these final bearings in sturdy streams. You ask the chief engineer about it with some nervousneuss. He laughs reassurance above the din. It is necessary that the packing be not too tight. And the pumps are always busy. They suck up these rill and many more like them and spew the water back into the sea.

"As a matter of fact the machinery reaches out in the ocean and sucks the sea into the ships in Gargantuan gulps. A pipe three feet through is the intake. Through it are pumped 22,000 tons of sea water per hour to condense the steam. As soon as it has served its purpose out it is pushed on the other side.

"The hull has a double bottom. Between the two floors are pumped before each voyage 6,000 tons of fresh water to serve machinery and passengers."

Some people are so ill natured that they feel annoyed when forced to smile.

NEW LONDON RESTAURANT MAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 22.—Charles H. Baldwin, about 60, of 579 Bank street, one of the best known restaurant proprietors in the city, was found this morning at 1 o'clock unconscious as a result of his having attempted suicide in the vacant store at 33 Atlantic street and formerly conducted by him as a restaurant. He is now a patient at Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital, having been removed to the institution at 1:20 o'clock and where it was said it could not be told whether Mr. Baldwin would survive. He is married but has no children. No reason could be assigned by his intimate friends for his attempt at self destruction.

Mr. Baldwin about two months ago opened a high class restaurant at 3 Railroad avenue and the place was doing an excellent business, so that financial troubles are not believed to have been the cause of his rash act. Mr. Baldwin left his place of business earlier than usual last night and is believed to have gone direct to the vacant Atlantic street building on which he holds a lease until next October. When his body was found it was behind the counter at the front of the store and a gas cock was open. Felice Bruno, owner of the building and whose residence adjoins that of the store returned to his home about 11:30 o'clock. When he entered his home there was a strong odor of gas. He caused windows of his residence to be opened and an hour later when the gas fumes still existed he caused the police to be notified. In the mean time an employe of a restaurant, which abutts the vacant store had caused the Connecticut Power company to be notified of an apparent gas leak in the building. The gas was traced to the former Baldwin place and entrance to it was gained by smashing a rear window. When the employe of the power company entered he found Mr. Baldwin unconscious. Dr. J. C. Satti was summoned and after partially reviving Mr. Baldwin, caused him to be rushed to the hospital in an attempt to save his life. Mr. Baldwin has been in the restaurant business as proprietor about 45 years.

Beware of the man whose dog crawls under the house when his master enters the gate.

Mr. Darby had not been in good health for the past three years but had been able to continue at his business despite his trouble. Friday of last week he was engaged in cutting the grass on the lawn at his home and during the evening seemed to be in about the same condition. During the night however he suffered a shock and this gradually led to a decline which caused his death.

Mr. Darby was born in Middlebury Vt., July 3, 1874, the son of George C and Jane E. Darby. When he was four years of age his parents moved to Windsor Locks and he received his early education in the schools in that place. He was raised in Somerset lodge No. 84, F. & A. M. of Norwich. He was a true husband and gave much thought to the welfare of his family. In his death the telephone company loses a valuable employe, the community loses a trusted and worthy citizen and his family a loved one whose place can never be filled.

Besides his wife Mr. Darby is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Mary Shepard of Hartford and Miss Jennie Darby of Windsor Locks, and two brothers, George and Melvin Darby of Windsor Locks. There are also several nieces and nephews.

FLETCHER POST CALLS ATTENTION TO RECENT CHANGES IN LAWS

Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, calls to the attention of the ex-service men and women of this locality the principal amendments to existing laws which are taken care of in H. R. 13175, signed by President Coolidge on July 2nd, 1926. They are as follows:

Compensation

1. Section 202.

(a) That any ex-service person shown to have had a tuberculosis disease of a compensable degree, who, in the judgment of the director, has reached a condition of complete arrest of his disease, shall receive compensation of not less than $50 per month; providing however, that nothing in this provision shall deny a beneficiary the right to receive a temporary total rating for six months after discharge from a one year's period of hospitalization; provided further, that no payments under this provision shall be retroactive and the payments hereunder shall commence from the date of the passage of this act or the day the disease reaches a condition of arrest, whichever be the latter date.

(b) Reduction in compensation to $30 a month for insane veterans without dependents maintained by the bureau in an institution for six months, changed to read, "maintained by the government", to make the provision applicable to men in soldiers' homes. It also provides that where such person recovers his reason and is discharged as competent, such additional sums shall be paid him as would equal the total sum by which his compensation has been reduced through the operation of this section.

(c) The organic loss of speech deemed to be a total and permanent disability.

2. Section 200.

(a) Includes spinal meningitis as one disease to be conclusively held to be of service origin, where entitled to ten per cent degree of disability rating prior to January 1, 1926.

(b) Includes under the benefits of the act women citizens assigned to the medical department of the United States army, who were sent overseas by the war department and who served in base hospitals over there.

3. Section 206.

(a) Amended to extend the time to June 7, 1927 for the filing of proof of the service origin of a disability.

4. Section 209.

(a) This required that a claim for compensation must be filed within five years after discharge or resignation from the service or in case of death during service within five years after the death is finally recorded. The director was allowed to extend this time for two years for good cause shown. The present bill amends this to allow the director to extend this time for five years.

Hospitalization

1. Section 10.

(a) Authorizes the director to hospitalize woman veterans, entitled to hospitalization, in other than government hospitals so that these woman veterans may be hospitalized adjacent to their homes when in need of treatment of this character.

2. Section 31.

(a) Beneficiaries who have lost personal effects through fire at veterans bureau hospitals to be reimbursed for this loss by the bureau.

Rehabilitation

1. Section 408.

(a) Persons receiving placement training on June 30, 1926 may continue in such training until January 1, 1927.

(b) Persons receiving educational training in schools or institutions on June 30, 1926, may continue in such training for not more than two years after passage of this amendatory act.

(c) The language of this section clarified so as to permit payment of two months' training allowance following rehabilitation, as provided by section 404.

Guardianship

1. Section 21.

(a) Director authorized to go to court through his attorney where, in his opinion, a guardian is not properly executing the duties of his trust and authorized to suspend payments to any such guardian who shall neglect or refuse to render an account to the director showing the application of payments for the benefit of the beneficiary.

Insurance

1. Section 304.

(a) Extends time for the reinstatement of insurance for men suffering from service connected disabilities to one year following the passage of this amendment.

(b) Provides that a person suffering from service connected disability who is now permanently and totally disabled may reinstate his insurance for one year after the approval of this amendment by having the amount of the unpaid back premiums charged as an interest bearing indebtedness against the face value, of the policy where proof satisfactory to the director is furnished showing that the applicant is unable to pay the back premium.

(c) The limiting date for the reinstatement for yearly renewable term insurance extended from July 2, 1926 to July 2, 1927.

Any veteran benefitting by these changes in the laws who wishes any assistance should call on Fletcher post at any time and the service committee will gladly do all in their power to push the cases through the proper channels.

DR. PENNIMAN GIVES YALE A BOOK OVER 400 YEARS OLD

It was announced Wednesday from New Haven that a very rare book on the history of the University of Paris has been given to Yale University library by Dr. James Hosmer Penniman of the class of 1884, N. F. A. 1880. It shows that modern American academic traditions, among them the commencement parade of today, were customs 400 years ago at the University of Paris.

This volume, one of the gifts by which the donor is building up the Penniman Memorial Library of Education at Yale, is a small quarto of 24 leaves of Latin text, in black letter, printed in Paris in 1517. It is the earliest account of the University of Paris since the 12th century as a centre for the students from all parts of France and from beyond its borders. The author, obviously an alumnus, was Robert Goulet, Doctor of the Faculty of Theology of Paris. His edition of the works of Josephus, historian of the Jews, printed in 1514, is also in the Yale library.

Modern authorities state that the University of Paris arose from a trade union of the masters who were teaching under license from the Chancellor of the Cathedral of Notre Dame. Goulet picturesquely joins these ecclesiastical and trade guild origins with the tradition that Charlemagne was the founder.

He says that one day two Scottish monks came to France with traveling merchants and asked if any one wished to buy wisdom. Most people thought this proved the monks to be fools, but the king, hearing of them, had them sent for and asked if they indeed had wisdom to sell.

When they replied that they had the king asked, "What do you wish for it"

To this the monks answered:

"Three things we wish: A convenient place, bright pupils and food with clothing."

The academic procession of Goulet's time tells the story of the university's organization. First comes the cross carried by a Bachelor of Arts, who wears a gown and is conducted by a "bidellus" or beadle of the Faculty of Arts. Then follows an "innumerable throng" of youths not gowned, proceeding two by two, as the undergraduates to today.

Groups of monks of many orders and bearers of sacred relics, who carry candles and sing as they go, alternate with groups of Master of Arts and Bachelors of different faculties, until finally comes the rector, and then the highest officials of the university, in red gowns.

Before the rector and his companion, the Dean of Theology, go five beadles, the "great beadle" a little in advance of the others. Each carries a silver mace corresponding to the gilded mace carried before the president of Yale university in the annual commencement procession.

LEWIS PAYS FINE AND STARTS TEN DAY SENTENCE

Ten days in jail and a fine of $200 and costs was the penalty imposed on George F. Lewis by Judge Arthur F. Libby in the city court Wednesday morning when Lewis entered a plea of guilty to a charge of violation of the liquor laws. Lewis was arrested Tuesday night at his place on Telman street, the local police securing evidence of an actual sale. About $100 worth of liquor was seized by the police in the raid. Lewis paid his fine which totalled $212.55 and went to jail to serve the ten day sentence.

Joseph Pina, 27, Portuguese, of Jail Hill, was presented on a charge of statutory rape on a 15 year old Portuguese girl. The hearing was held in chambers and at the request of Attorney T. J. Kelly, counsel for the accused, the case went over a day. The offense with which Pina is charged, is alleged to have taken place several days ago. Pina is said to be married. He was born in Taunton, Mass., but has been living here for some time.

A coal barge captain who was picked up by the police early Tuesday evening was presented in court on an intoxication charge. He informed the court that his financial resources are not very large and, that his wife is ill on the barge. How to Lose Freckles, Tan or Redness

A day's motoring, an afternoon on the links, golf or tennis, a sunbath on the beach or exposure on a sailor trip, often brings on a deep tan or vivid sunburn, or, more perplexing still, a vigorous crop of freckles. A very necessary thing then is Mercolized Wax, which removes tan, redness or freckles quite easily. It literally peels off the affected skin—just a little at a time; so there's no hurt or inconvenience. As the skin comes off in almost invisible flaky particles, no trace of the treatment is shown. Get an ounce of Mercolized Wax at your druggist's and use this at night as you would cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Soon you will have an entirely new skin, beautifully clear, transparent, delicately white.

DEMPSEY-TUNNEY BOUT WILL BE HELD AT CHICAGO SEPT. 11TH OR 18TH

CHICAGO, JULY 21— (AP) —Jack Dempsey, world heavyweigh boxing champion, will defend his title against Gene Tunney in Chicago in September, in a ten round decision bout, Tex Rickard, New York promoter, announced today after three days of conferences here.

The date, first announced by Rickard as Saturday afternoon, September 11, will be either Sept. 11 or a week later, Sept. 18, Rickard said, subject to the wishes of the principals. Rickard preferred the earlier date, but Gene Normile, here to represent Dempsey asked that the fighter be permitted to meet on the later date if they preferred. The date will be chosen, Rickard said, by tomorrow, when he plans to go before the Illinois boxing commission, name the Chicago group in whose name he is offering the bout and ask that body to approve the match.

Soldiers' Field, Chicago's municipal stadium in Grant park, is expected to be the location of the fight, though Rickard said that, also, must await definite announcement tomorrow.

The principals will divide 55 per cent of the gate receipts, with an option or cash compensation, Rickard said. He preferred not to announce the proportion of the division.

Normile, Dempsey's manager and spokesman, expressed gratification at the arrangements, and announced that as soon as the boxing commission approves the bout he will get training quarters a short distance north of Chicago.

Tunney, Rickard said, had assured him he would come to Chicago immediately to begin training. Dempsey, who trained a month at Hendersonville, N. C., and has been training since July 1 at Colorado Springs, Col., will come to Chicago soon after August 1.

A guarantee of $100,000 of the fight receipts has been made by Rickard to the widows' and orphans' fund of the Chicago firemen and police.

If the match is held at Soldiers' Field, Rickard plans rearrangement of the stadium to furnish "a hundred thousand good seats," and he anticipates receipts to run toward $2,000,000.

His projected price scale, still indefinite, runs up to $50 with the minimum price about $3.

Rickard's announcement brought protests from B. F. Clements, president of the Chicago Coliseum club, who asserted that Dempsey is under contract to the club to meet Wills in Chicago, and that, unless the champion fulfills that contract, steps will be taken under the law to prevent his entering the ring against anybody else.

TUNNEY PLEASED WITH ARRANGEMENTS FOR BOUT

New York, July 21—(AP)—Gene Tunney, challenger for the world's heavyweight championship, received the news that Tex Richard has definitely selected Chicago as the site for his title match with Jack Dempsey, Sept. 11, with mingled joy and disappointment.

"That's just great" he said. "I have been pulling for Chicago all along because I would rather fight where there is no political interference but at the same time I am disappointed that I can't fight for the title in my own home town."

Tunney said he expected to scale about 187 1-2 for the fight. He is engaging in light work at Summit, N. J., where he will remain until Rickard orders him west to establish his training camp.

WARRIORS AND YANTIC IN CLASH THIS EVENING

Judging by the large crowds that have swarmed to the Duwell field this week, in spite of the torrid weather, twilight baseball is again coming into its own. It is estimated that over five thousand have attended the games played this week, the grandstand and field being packed every night. The huge crowds that have attended the games have been well rewarded as the games this week and last week have been real close and exciting, the outcome of each game being uncertain until the last man has been called out.

The game tonight between the Warrior and the Yantic A. A. gives promise of being every bit as exciting if not more so than those played during the past week or so, as both Yantic and the youthful Warriors have been playing mighty good ball all season. Although the Warriors have not been winning many ball games they have been turning in without a doubt the best games seen at the field this season. It seems that these boys have one bad innings in each game which has been the cause of them losing some real close games to the leading teams in the league. The game last week between these youngsters and the East Ends, runners up for the league leadership was lost in the last inning after these boys held a healthy lead over their opponents throughout the game. Either Pavalack, Couture or Shea all boys under 18 will do the mound work for the Warriors with Jab Burns on the receiving end.

Yantic during the past few weeks has als obeen followed by a jinx losing two games which have been the cause of considerable discussion. It was rumored last week that Yantic was about to pull out of the league but Yantic has denied all such reports and claims that they will prove it tonight by giving the Warriors a real sound trimming. Mgr. Peckham will send his ace "Camonball Gill" Jones to the mound and Hamil behind the bat for tonight's game.

GENERAL LEE CAPTURES FEATURE AT EMPIRE CITY

NEW YORK, July 21—(AP)—General Lee, chestnut son of War Cloud-Nancy Lee, captured the Wakefield handicap, $5,000 guaranteed, at the Empire City track today. Charade was second and Northern Pass third. Afterglow, Turf King, War Flame and Recreation also ran. The time for the 5 1-2 furlongs was 1.05 2-5.

The Detroit handicap at Kenilworth went to Huntsman, the 1 1-16 miles being run in 1.46. Deronda was second and Panic third with Son Ami and Lieutenant 2nd out of the money.

Red Heart accounted for the feature of 5 1-2 furlongs at Maple Heights, leading Strut Miss Lizzie and Centimeter in 1.07.

Beau Butler outran Paula Shay and George De K an event of a mile and one furlong at Homewood. The time, 1.43 2-5, provided a new track record. Spanish Lay, Prince Hamlet, Dancing Fool and Arabian also ran.

Jockey D. Smith had a field day in the closing program at Raceland, achieving two victories and four seconds in the first six races.

Calcria, candidate for the Coney Island and American derbies, worked the Raceland track in the following time: Quarter 24 2-5; half 48 3-5; six furlongs 1.16; mile 1.39 4-5; mile and a quarter 2.07 3-5.

The Coney Island track near Cincinnati opens tomorrow.

WHITE SOX DIVIDE DOUBLE BILL WITH YANKS

New York, July 21—(AP)—The Chicago White Sox and New York Yankees divided a doubleheader here today, the visitors winning the opening tussle by 4 to 3 and losing the second, by 5 to 4.

Blankenship had a slight edge on Hoyt in the first melee. The latter started in the box for the first time since his injury three weeks ago. Babe Ruth brought in all the New York runs when he hit his 9th homer of the season in the first inning with two on base.

Koenig's homer in the first inning of the second struggle gave the Yankees a lead until the eighth when the White Sox scored four runs. However, in their half of the inning, the New Yorkers chased Edwards off the slab and with the bases full, relief hurler Lyons passed Gazella and Koenig for the tying and winning runs. Score:

BABE RUTH TO TRY FOR ALTITUDE RECORD

New York, July 21—(AP)—"Babe" Ruth is going to try to establish a new world record for altitude catching.

The right fielder of the New York American baseball club will make the attempt at Mitchell field tomorrow. An army aviator in a bombing plane will drop regulation base balls from altitudes up to 700 feet. Below him, in his uniform of a private in the national guard, Ruth will attempt to catch the ball.

The event was arranged by the Citizens' Military Training corps. The balls dropped will be autographed by Ruth and rushed by plane to other training camps.

TAFTVILLE A. A. EVENS UP SERIES WITH EASTERN CONN. POWER TEAM

The Taftville A. A. took a loose twilight game, 8 to 4, from the E. C. P. of the Norwich Twilight league at Duwell field on Wednesday evening before the banner crowd of the year. The contest was a free hitting affair, 12 bingles being chalked up for the losers and 11 for the winners making a total of 23 safe hits.

Lefty Dugas on the mound for the losers was hit hard in the early part of the game and it was in the first few stanzas that Taftville chalked up the victory. Lefty Buckland who was on the mound for the Taftville Team was also hit rather hard but he managed to pull himself out of the hole without much damage done.

As the result of a questionable decision by Hank Morin on a ball hit back of third base, Taftville managed to count up three runs in the first inning. One more run was scored in the second inning by Taftville on a hit batsman, a single and an error. Taftville kept up the attack by counting three more in the third on hits behind errors at critical times. Their last score of the evening came in the fourth inning on a double and a single.

The E. C. P. broke into the scoring column in the second inning with one run, as a result of two hits and an infield out. Their last scores came in the third inning when 3 runs crossed the plate on three doubles, a triple and a single.

Eccleston with 3 singles out of three trips to the plate, Dong and Gauthier with a single and a double led in the hitting for Taftville.

Murphy with three singles out of four trips to the plate and Clabby with a triple and a single lead in the hitting for the losers.

PIRATES AND DODGERS SPLIT DOUBLE HEADER

Pittsburg, July 21—(AP)—Brooklyn and Pittsburg split a double bill before 20,000 fans today, the Pirates taking the opener by 1 to 0 and the Robins getting a 6 to 2 verdict in the second game. Petty, who appeared in the box for the first time since his recent suspension, allowed the Pirates but four hits in the initial combat, but two of them in one inning, a single followed by Gooch's double brought the only run of the game. Songer yielded five safeties.

In the second contest, Vance held the Pirates to six hits. An anti-Pittsburgh decision by Umpire Rearden in the final game caused a pop bottle barrage in which a spectator was injured. Score:

ROSE SCOTT WINS $10,000 RACE IN STRAIGHT HEATS

KALAMAZOO, Mich., July 21—(AP)—Rose Scott came out of retirement long enough to gather in first money in the $10,000 Exchange Club trot today for Tommy Murphy. The Pittsburgh mare took the race in straight heats and went to the second mile in 2.03 1-4, equalling the record for the event.

In 1915 Peter Scott, sire of Rose Scott, also driven by Murphy, won the same event.

Rose Scott hung up her best race record in defeating Great Bells, driven by McDonald in the second heat. The two horses were nose and nose all the way down the stretch but at the finish the eastern mare had just enough shove left to outlast the Indiana contestant.

DUNDEE PRESENTS CLAIM FOR FEATHERWEIGHT TITLE

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP)—Johnny Dundee, veteran little Italian who once held two world's ring championships, not only plans a come-back but intends to go before the State Athletic Commission tomorrow to seek recognition as featherweight title holder.

In making this announcement today through his new manager, Joe Jacobs, Dundee declared that since he had not lost the feather crown in the ring he felt he should have first claim to the honors which have been voluntarily relinquished by his successor, Kid Kaplan.

Kaplan gave up the championship recently for the same reason that was given for Dundee's withdrawal—inability to make the 126-pound weight limit. Dundee, however, always has disputed the action of his former manager, Jimmy Johnston, in forfeiting the title on that account in August, 1924. He parted company with Johnston over the tissue and insists now through Jacobs, that he can and will make the feather limit, prepared to meet all-comers in an active campaign this summer.

Jacobs contends that Dundee, outside of New York, is still widely regarded as the legimate featherweight champion. He said today he had received an offer of $33,000 from a middle western promoter for DUndee to defend the title against a leading challenger.

The New York commission, however, is expected to turn a deaf ear to Dundee's plan for title restoration. It did so once before and is expected to tell the veteran he must take his place in the ranks of contenders.

The commission already has taken steps to select a successor to Kaplan by designating the match next Tuesday at the Queensboro stadium between Red Chapman of Boston and Babe Herman of California as the result of a series or elimination tests.

Hermit Gets a New Home

'Tis nice when you can so arrange
To have in life a little change.
—Hermit the Crab.

Danny Meadow Mouse didn't find it easy to get acquainted with Hermit the Crab. Hermit was bashful. Every time that Danny came near, Hermit ran away. Then when Danny ran after him Hermit retired inside his shell and closed the door in Danny's face. So finally Danny gave up trying to get acquainted and his curiosity had to go unsatisfied.

Perhaps, if Danny had had a little more patience, he might have seen Hermit in a new house. You know, the house that he carried about with him on his back was an empty snail shell which he had found. He carried it about with him because he had no shell of his own. No, sir, he had no shell of his own. This funny little crab has a soft body, and if he were not protected in some way he would soon be robbed up. Not having a shell of his own given him by Old Mother Nature, he remedies the latter's oversight by finding a shell for himself; and he is actually better off than are some of his crab cousins who have shells of their own.

You will remember that Danny Meadow Mouse found out how other crabs grow by getting out of their old shells and hiding until new and bigger shells formed. Hermit grows, and occasionally he has to get a new shell of new house, but he has the advantage of his crab cousins, because he gets a new shell already hardened. He doesn't have to run any risk waiting, while his shell is soft and he is helpless, as the others do.

Hermit had been getting uneasy. He had realized for some time that he was outgrowing his house. The very day that Danny Meadow Mouse discovered him Hermit was house hunting. That is what he was doing, house hunting. Of course, Danny interfered. But just as soon as Danny left, Hermit started out again.

First he peeked out very cautiously to see if Danny was watching him. Danny had disappeared. So Hermit started off in his usual hurry. Presently he came to a shell. The first thing he did was to look to see if it was empty. The shell looked just about the size he wanted. It was a little bit bigger than the one he was now occupying. He examined the opening to it. It was occupied. There was another crab in there. Hermit tried to pull him out. Yes sir, he tried to pull that other crab right out of his house. But he didn't succeed. So finally he gave up and went on his way.

Presently he came to another shell. This one was empty. Hermit looked it all over as he had the first one. Then he looked all around to be sure that no one was watching him. Finally, sure that he was alone, he came out of his house and backed into the other one, and he did it so quickly that had you been there you would hardly have known what he was doing. Then he started off with it. He stopped. He wiggled around. He didn't like the way it felt. He came out and backed into it again. Then he went over to his old house, backed into that, adjusted himself, and away he went still with his old house.

By and by Hermit found another shell that looked about right for him. He tried this one. This one didn't suit. He tried two or three others. Finally he found one that looked about right, but there was another crab in it. Hermit undertook to pull him out. For a few minutes they had a great fight. Then Hermit managed to get hold of the other crab just right and out he came. Quick as a flash Hermit was out of his own house and had backed into the other one. The other crab, feeling helpless without any kind of a house, backed into Hermit's old house, and then in his turn went looking for another.

Hermit was satisfied with his new house. It was comfortable. He could

Then he went over to his old house grow quite a lot before he would have to get another.

HARTFORD LODGERS CAUSE OF COVENTRY COURT TRIAL

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 21.—The Coventry town court, Judge A. M. Gilman presiding and Grand Juror Robert G. Brooke prosecuting, did a rushing business in the town building in south Coventry today, in a session that lasted nearly two hours. State Policeman Clifford C. Willis and Eugene R. Burns of the Stafford Springs barracks figured in all the arrests. The first case tried was that of Max Gleseing, R. F. D. No. 2, Rockville, charged with operating an unregistered car and having no number plates. He explained in pleading guilty, that it was an oversight. Judge Gilman imposed a fine of $25 and costs remitting $10. The total was $26.55.

Mrs. Natalie D. Newberry, who conducts an employment agency at 38 Church street, Hartford, was charged with intoxication and breach of the peace to which she pleaded not guilty. She was fined $5 on each count, a total of $21.40. Testifying in turn was State Policemen Burns who made the arrest. Mrs. Rufus Reed, who resides on the old Henry Walker place in North Coventry and was complainant in the case, and Mr. Reed. As the star witness, Mrs. Reed testified that Mrs. Newberry came there with Leslie R. Shields, of Hartford, intending to spend the night and created a disturbance while accusing witness of lascivious conduct. Mrs. Reed said that she took in summer boarders and was preparing dinner for Mrs. Newberry and Shields Tuesday evening when the trouble started.

In her own behalf, Mrs. Newberry denied being drunk, stating that she had had two glasses of cider earlier in the day, but nothing else. She described how she and Shields had played and won in a barnyard golf contest just before going to the Reed home. Although it was her first experience Mrs. Newberry said she had thrown horseshoes for a ringer every time, establishing this as evidence that she was not intoxicated. She said that on previous occasions Shields had told her things against the character of Mrs. Reed. She did not know the woman until she found herself in the Reed home, having been taken there by Shields and she became almost hysterical to find that she had been led into such surroundings. She wanted to leave the house at once and took occasion to tell Mrs. Reed why she was going.

Leslie R. Shields of 139 School street, Manchester, and manger of the Adding Machine Service and Sales company at 190 Pearl street, Hartford, was scheduled to appear in court but by arrangement with the authorities was two hours late in arriving. An original charge of driving while under the influence of liquor was nolled for lack of witnesses. Shields pleaded guilty to intoxication, breach of the peace and he also was fined $5 on each count. He paid $20.50.

While awaiting the arrival of Shields, Officers Willis and Burns accosted two motorcycle drivers who drove past the town hall while court was being held and arrested both. They were Robert VonDeck, 19, and Carl Johnson, 19, both of South Coventry. They were taken before the court immediately on various charges, including driving without legal lights without license or registration and without proper exhaust mufflers. There were three charges against Von Deck and five against Johnson. Both pleaded guilty through their respective guardians ad litum, Zoeth Smith and Fred Freeman, including costs, Von Deck paid an assessment of $24.30 and Johnson $29.30.

MISS YEOMANS' CASE NOLLED BY ANDOVER WOMAN JUSTICE

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 21.—The continued case of Alice M. Yeomans, 17, daughter of Superior Court Judge and Mrs. Edward M. Yeomans of Andover, charged with operating a motor vehicle without a Connecticut driver's license reached its final chapter Wednesday night behind closed doors in the town hall, Andover, when Justice of the Peace Mrs. A. H. Benton of the Andover town court nolled the case, on the grounds of insufficient evidence. The girl's first apprehension was in this city, late last month, when she was halted by Constable Joseph Peck, who was accompanied by Police Officer Albert Monti, then off duty, and Deputy Sheriff Allison L. Frink, of Andover. No action on the alleged misdemeanor was taken by the local court officials. In the afternoon of the same day Sheriff Frink set out to secure a warrant for the girl, charging her with operating without a license in the town of Andover. He testified that he could not be certain whether or not Miss Yeomans was accompanied by anyone else when she drove past his house in her roadster, Nathan Gatchell, of Andover, who was with Sheriff Frink at the time, testified in court that Mrs. Catherine Newton of Hartford was with Miss Yeomans in the car. Mrs. Newton testified that she was a licensed operator and was sitting in the front seat with Miss Yeomans when the latter was seen driving by Sheriff Frink.

Justice Benton then announced her decision. The accused was represented by prominent attorneys.

DEMANDS "ECONOMIC JUSTICE" FOR FARMER, AS BROOKHART PRAISED

DES MOINES, Iowa, July 21 (AP)—Demanding "economic justice" for the American farmer before the Iowa republican convention, Dan W. Turner of Corning temporary chairman, in his keynote address today also sounded a warning to the "protected regions" of the industrial east that "the congressional fight to aid the farmer had just begun."

Smith W. Brookhart, insurgent former U. S. senator who defeated Senator Cummins for the senatorial nomination, was recommended to the voters. Senator Cummins was praised, while the "failure of President Coolidge to espouse the cause of the agricultural states," Turner said, was regarded more "in sorrow than in anger."

"It is hard to believe," Turner declared in referring to the president, "that he will remain obdurate in the face of our demand. However, we will continue with all our resources to battle for recognition of the principle that injustice to one section will inevitably bring disaster to all."

At the same time the temporary chairman lauded former governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, sometimes mentioned as a possible presidential candidate, declaring "we are grateful beyond measure for his virile leadership and sage counsel."

Although factional differences were not touched on in his prepared address nor was the word "harmony" mentioned, the pre-convention predictions that peace would be sought at the convention was indicated by his praise of Cummins and Brookhart. The latter, in 1924, was branded as a party "traitor" by the republican state central committee because of his opposition to President Coolidge.

The agricultural issue was mainly stressed. Advocating an agricultural surplus control bill, Turner called attention to the pledge of the republican national platform for the enactment of measures to place agriculture on an "economic equality with other industry" and declared that "in the face of this explicit promise, republican congressmen of the eastern states, last month, joined with the majority of democrats in congress to defeat a bill embodying the principle for which we contend."

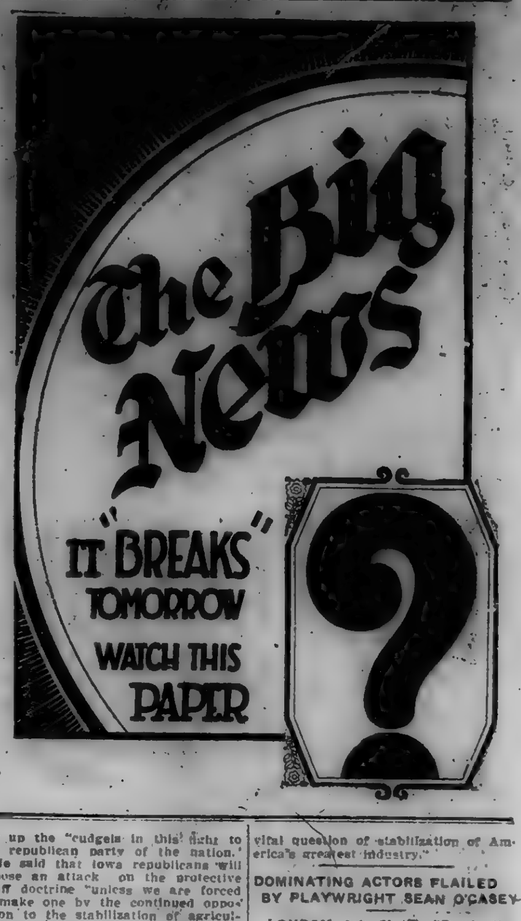
This, he said, presented the "interesting spectacle of a coalition not now in the American congress, when the representatives of special privilege join together, regardless of politics, to defeat sound legislation."

The fight for economic justice for the farmer, he declared, should be made a non-partisan matter with farm interests lining up the "cudgels in this fight to the republican party of the nation."

He said that Iowa republicans will oppose an attack on the protective tariff doctrine "unless we are forced to make one by the continued opposition to the stabilization of agriculture" on the part of beneficiaries of protection in other industries.

"They say the middle west is pioneering in legislation. If our plan to stabilize agriculture is unsound, the whole theory of a protective tariff is unsound. The cry has gone out that the born belt is asking for special consideration. What specious argument is this? How can the east long prosper unless the west prospers also."

To defeat Mr Brookhart now, Turner said, "would be interpreted by statesmen or the Atlantic seaboard as evidence of a division in Iowa on the vital question of stabilization of America's greatest industry."



DOMINATING ACTORS FLAILED BY PLAYWRIGHT SEAN O'CASEY

LONDON, July 21 (AP)—"Dominating actors" are the curse of the London stage and ought to be "hit on the head."

At least this is what the Irish playwright, Sean O'Casey, thinks. He says that actors who want to make their roles the dominating parts thereby "hogging" the play for themselves ruin many a performance.

Sean O'Casey views have been widely heralded in theatrical circles and many dramatic critics are giving their opinions about the criticism.

FORMER U. S. SENATOR LIPPITT TO HEAD COTTON-TEXTILE INSTITUTE

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP)—Former United States Senator Henry F. Lippitt, of Pawtucket, R. I., was elected president of the Cotton-Textile Institute when it was organized in the Hotel Biltmore today.

The object of the organization, according to its articles of association, is to bring about a co-operation among cotton textile manufacturers and growers, to institute trade research, cope with commercial problems and prepare a mobilization in national emergencies. Legislative and political questions will be excluded from its activities, the articles provided.

Leading cotton manufacturers of 17 states were represented at the convention which was regarded as the first step in a movement to organize the industry on a national scale.

The personnel of the organization formed was elected to serve until the first annual meeting of the institute to be held in October. Committees were appointed to form definite plans for the initial activities of the association, but it is not expected that much of the proposed work can be put into motion until after the meeting next fall. The permanent headquarters of the institute probably will be in New York.

Those behind the movement expect to have mills controlling 18,000,000 spindles, or almost half of the total in the United States, soon enrolled in the institute.

POETRY

Misplaced

Around this lovely valley rise
The purple hills of Paradise.

O, softly on your banks of haze,
Her rosy face the summer lays!

Becalmed along the azure sky,
The argosies of cloudland lie,
Whose shores, with many a shining rift,
Far-off their pearl white peaks uplift.
Through all the long midsummer day
The meadow sides are sweet with hay.
I seek the coolest sheltered seat,
Just where the fields and forest meet,—
Where grow the pine trees tall and bland,
The ancient oaks austere and grand,
And fringy roots and pebbles line
The ripples of the rivulet.

I watch the mowers, as they go
Through the tall grass, a white-sleeved row,
With even stroke their scythes they swing.
In tune their merry whetstones ring.
Behind the nimble youngsters run,
And toss the thick swaths in the sun.
The cattle graze, while, warm and still
Slopes the broad pasture, basks the hill,
And bright, where summer breezes break,
The green wheat crinkles like a lake.

The butterfly and bumblebee
Come to the pleasant woods with me;
Quickly before me runs the quail,
Her chickens skulk behind the rail;
High up the lone wood-pigeon sits,
And the woodpecker pecks and flits.
Sweet woodland music sinks and swells
The brooklet rings its tinkling bells.
The swarming insects drone and hum,
The partridge beats its throbbing drum.
The squirrel leaps among the boughs,
And chatters in his leafy house.
The oriole flashes by; and, look!
Into the mirror of the brook,
Where the vain bluebird trims his coat,
Two tiny feathers fall and float.

As silently, as tenderly,
The down of peace descends on me.
O, this is peace! I have no need
Of friend to talk, of book to read;
A dear Companion here abides.
Close to my thrilling heart He hides;
The holy silence is His Voice;
I lie and listen, and rejoice.
—John Townsend Trowbridge.

To a Lily

Go bow thy head in gentle spite,
Thou lily white,
For she who spies thee waving here,
With thee in beauty can compare
As day with night.

Soft are thy leaves, and white; her arms
Boast whiter charms,
Thy stem prone bent with loveliness
Of maiden grace possesseth less;
Therein she charms.

Thou in thy lake dost see
Thyself; so she
Beholds her image in her eyes
Reflected. Thus did Venus rise
From out the sea.

Inconsolate bloom not again.
Thou rival vain
Of her whose charms have thine outdone,
Whose purity might spot the sun,
And make thy leaf a stain.
—James M. Legare.

A library mounted on a motor truck will travel into the rural districts of Iowa this summer to demonstrate the educational value of county circulating libraries. The Iowa Library Association, which seeks to establish circulating libraries in each county now without library service, is sponsor for the demonstrations. In that time, the books will be moved to different parts of the county, to fairs, private residences, and to meetings of farm bureaus, boys and girls' clubs, and schools. Books will in most cases be supplied by, town, libraries and expenses paid by community clubs, farm bureaus, and private citizens. The library van will be lined with book cases facing outward and protected by glass windows to allow the maximum display.

Air mail pilots who daily skirt over the Rocky Mountains have ideas that clash with the popular idea of good flying weather. They prefer to ride ahead of a strong wind, such as sweeps through Wyoming during the winter, to the fair, warm weather of summertime. The mail birdman likes to finish his job as quickly as possible and a strong wind at his back although it may produce bumps and rough flying speeds him to his destination. The best flying times of the Rocky Mountain division of the transcontinental air mail route have been made in the winter, air mail field officials report. In crossing the Continental Divide from Cheyenne to Rock Springs, a distance of 253 miles, a record time of one hour and thirty minutes was hung up in December, 1925. During fair weather this spring the average flying time has been two hours and a half, with the best time only ten to 15 minutes less.

Even in mid-July there comes the first suggestion, surely indicating the season's advance. Wednesday afternoon, over a hundred white-bellied swallows were seen sitting in a shining row, on one of the long distance telegraph wires, that runs through the town. In a few days they will be starting to leave their summer quarters.

A Boston daily of June 18th contains the following story:

JEWETT CITY, Conn., July 14—Mammoth black bass are being caught in all directions around here. The record catch of Jewett City is by Bill Magel, a local expert angler, who caught six that weighed 20 pounds following thatu p the next day by two that tipped the scales at 12 pounds. L. Brown caught one in Beach Pond of 6 1-2 pounds, three have been caught at Bennetts Cove, two miles above here weighing 4 1-2, 5 and 5 1-4 pounds, and Sam Lupnik caught one in the Quinebaug River 6 1-4 pounds. All were what is known as big-mouthed bass.

Somebody must have had a poor spell or has been affected by the heat. The original story was printed in the Jewett City column of The Bulletin, the day after Bill Magel got the big one, but no one locally knows anything about the L. Brown and Sam Lupnik catches.

A big bit of an annual job that has to be accomplished at the A. A. Young greenhouses every summer, is nearing the planting stage, which is the last part of the preparation for next season's market. Not many people are aware that each year, during the midsummer months, the hundreds of cubic feet of soil must be removed from the long rows of benches and replaced with fresh earth. Not only has the soil given its fertile usefulness, but the carnation plants as well have produced their finest blooms, and are taken out to make room for the new.

In the carnation benches alone, Mr. Young is busy, with a crew of men, who are starting this week on the same job of transplanting from forty-five to fifty thousand new plants. These are first rooted in moist sand in the greenhouses, then are all set out in the big Ashland street fields, being later transferred to the new soil benches, where, when the winter season's trade begins, several thousands will be cut every day for more than six months.

Mr. Young, as one of the leading carnation growers in New England, is supplying choice blossoms of four standard varieties, with three to six try-outs each year, to determine what the leading winners will do in our soil. During these changes Mr. Young has a payroll of over $100 a day for several weeks.

Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Reynolds returned home Friday after a visit with Mr and Mrs. William Hoag and family at their summer camp at Cranberry Lake, N. J. The camp was in the zone of the great explosion, being only eight miles distant but on the other side of a mountain. As the first explosions occurred during a terrific thunder storm people in that vicinity did not realize what had happened until the storm cleared and the flashes and deafening reports continued. Some of the people then went across the lake to make inquiries.

Windham was fortunate in escaping the worst of the storm which swept over New England Sunday. It thundered and rained most of the time from one o'clock until late in the evening and a high wind about six o'clock blew over plants, took off a barn door and brought down dead limbs. But no serious danger was done and the rain was needed.

NEW LONDON, July 21—Peter Lakowski 55, of Uncasville, died at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital this morning, death resulting from a broken neck. He is survived by three sons, John, Stanley and Frank Lakowsky, all of Uncasville. Lakowsky was fatally injured several days ago when he was descending a flight of stairs at his home. SLOOP FRANCIS STOLEN WHEN SKIPPER GOES ASHORE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 21—Sloop Francis, a boat of 26 feet in length and nine feet beam, was stolen from its place of moorage in the harbor, last night or this morning, for Capt. Julius Ortman discovered the boat missing this morning, when he went to a pier for the purpose of boarding the sloop. The boat had been anchored off the lumber pier of the F. H. & A. H. Chappell company since Sunday and last night, about 6:30 o'clock, Captain Ortman came ashore, remaining away from the sloop all night. About 8:30 o'clock this morning, when the master went to the pier he found the boat missing from where it had been anchored and there was no sign of it anywhere in the harbor. Captain Ortman reported the theft to the police. It is believe that Ortman was seen to leave the yacht by the thieves and when he did not return the crook took possession of the boat.

This afternoon a sloop was sighted on a sand bar off Crescent Beach by a state police officer and investigation revealed that the craft was the stolen boat. There was no one aboard the sloop when officers boarded it. Capt. Ortman was notified of the grounding of the sloop and has made arrangements to attempt her being floated tomorrow.

Sailors were responsible for the plight of three young women who were compelled to appear in the police court this morning. Two of the girls were white while the other was black. The colored girl was accused by a sailor when she was taken into custody of being a person of lascivious carriage, but when he came to testify against the accused he failed to make good and said he could not identify her. He accounted for this by saying that he was drunk at the time the girl was arrested. As it requires evidence to convict, the girl was discharged and the complaint was nolled. The sailor who accused her is stationed at the submarine base. He did not display even ordinary intelligence when he was placed on the witness stand. Two young girls from Brooklyn, arrested as being of evil character, represented that they were induced to come here on promise of marriage by sailors. Here the sailors "shook" them, the girls said, and they were thrown on their own resources. The court had sympathy with them and they were placed in the custody of Probation Officer Mansfield, that he might arrange for sending them to their home. They left here on the boat for New York at 11 o'clock tonight, a great deal wiser than when they arrived here.

Commander E. J. King, commandant at the submarine base, who was transferred to a southern station some time ago, was relieved of his duties at the base yesterday afternoon and with Mrs. King and children left for Washington, D. C., prior to assuming his new duties.

Arthur Dual, from the Coast Guard Academy, was at Ocean Beach where he imbibed liquor so freely that he was found drunk there and was arrested. He was released on a suspended judgment as he had overstaid his leave of absence and was liable to punishment for that.

Oliver Bessenault told the Fishers Island story in court, but he was allowed to get away with it and judgment was suspended in his case.

John Scuris, for several years in the candy business in the Crocker house building, left here this evening for Greece where he will take a wife and then return to New London. His absence will be for a considerable period. John Chio, another New Londener, is now in Greece, but he is understood to be a charter member of the Bachelors' club.

Stanley Reede Sawtelle, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Sawtelle, 58 Winthrop street, died this morning at the residence of his parents, his death ending a lingering illness with tuberculosis. Besides his parents, Mr. Sawtelle is survived by five brothers, Walter S., Arthur H., Harold A., Irving L., and Roger L. Sawtelle, and by a sister, Miss Mabel Sawtelle, all of this city. Mr. Sawtelle was born in Berlin, Mass., but had resided in New London a long time. He was afflicted with lung trouble in youth and was under treatment at Uncas-on-the-Thames, Norwich, several months and but recently returned to his home.

Elizabeth Heseltine has sold an undivided one-half interest in the property 79-81 Hempstead street to Charles H. Cooper and Clara Johnson.

A Hudson sport roadster owned by Stephen F. Zekas, an employe of the Garde Catering company, corner of State and Meridian streets was stolen from the latter street last night and no trace of the auto has been found. The automobile was parked on Meridian street by Zekas when he went to his work about 5 o'clock and when he concluded his labors about midnight he discovered the car missing. The police were notified, as were the state police at Groton and Centerbrook and at Norwich, Westerly and Hartford.

An automobile owned and driven by Thomas O. Connell, 779 Ocean avenue and an auto owned and driven by Leon Kosloski, 53 Squire street, collided last night, corner of Ocean avenue and Bank street. Both automobiles were damaged, but Connell and Kosloski escaped injury.

BOOTLEG ACCUSATION STARTS NEIGHBORHOOD SCRAP

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 21—As a result of Joseph Fidalgo, 68 Woodbridge street, remonstrating with his neighbor, Frank Pozzelo, 76 Woodbridge street, whom Fidalgo accused of selling liquor at the Pozzelo residence, Pozzelo was arrested tonight by Patrolman George Laboute charged with breach of the peace. Pozzelo furnished a cash bond of $50 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning. Fidalgo declared that Pozzelo had made a practice of selling liquor at the Pozzelo home a long time and that the nuisance became such today that it annoyed him. He stated that not only was liquor sold in the Pozzelo home by the drink, but that bottles of liquor were sold to Fidalgo's customers, who would often go to the street and sometimes in front of Fidalgo's residence and drink their purchases. This evening Fidalgo took Pozzelo to task for the alleged selling of liquor and Pozzelo resented the accusation. A serious argument followed and resulted in Fidalgo being made the target for a fusillade of stones, according to his testimony. When the stones came at him too fast, Fidalgo sought Patrolman Laboute and demanded the arrest of his attacker.

Later in the night Fidalgo engaged in another quarrel with Pozzelo and this time Fidalgo was arrested charged with breach of the peace for he is alleged to have attacked Pozzelo and administered a severe beating to him.

HADLYME SUMMER GUESTS IN AUTOMOBILE MISHAP

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 21—An automobile driven by Miss Irma Rosenberg, New York, but temporarily residing at Hadlyme, was wrecked and a woman companion injured though not seriously, this evening when the automobile collided with a telephone pole on Williams street.

Miss Rosenberg was driving the automobile in a southerly direction on Williams street, between Granite and Broad street. As the auto, a Ford coupe, approached Broad street, a main line trolley car of the Connecticut company, turned from Broad to Williams street. At that point the trolley tracks are laid close to the sidewalk on the west side of the street, which is the right hand side of the street for traffic in the opposite direction. As the trolley car approached the automobile, Miss Rosenberg became confused and excited, so that she lost control of the automobile, which climbed upon the sidewalk and crashed against the big pole. The automobile was rendered unfit for service and Miss Rosenberg's companion, who refused to reveal her identity, and who suffered a laceration of the chin, was taken to the Lena hospital nearby. There Dr. Lena advised the taking of one or two stitches in the wound that it might be closed, but the woman absolutely refused to submit to the ordeal. So persistent was the woman that she was brought in the police speed car to State street where she and Miss Rosenberg procured a public service automobile and conveyed the woman to Hadlyme.

Fred Stone, well known actor, of "Stepping Stones" fame, and the owner of a range for the raising of high-bred horses on the former Morton F. Plant estate, East Lyme, which Mr. Stone purchased two years ago, was in this city visiting his family today. Mr. Stone is occupying a residence at the Pequot for the summer.

Mrs. Wilson Cohen, and infant daughter, of 703 Huntington street; Mrs. Charles McKewen, 579 Huntington street; Miss Jeanville Sears, Lyme; Mrs. Arthur Anderson, Niantic; Mrs. George Ferguson, Groton, and Mrs. Ruth Mason, 241 Montauk avenue, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

Frank Gillooley was charged with intoxication and the abuse of his wife, and he admitted that he was guilty. The wife represented that her husband threatened to kill her, but in court he was so subdued when a jail term loomed in front of him that he was ready to promise almost anything. He said he would refrain from the use of liquor hereafter and that he would behave himself as a man should conduct himself. Judge Prince gave him to understand that the drink habit was one that Gillooley should abandon, and the accused saw the force of the statement and promised to be a white ribboner in the future.

John Harrington, out of jail but a week, where he served a sentence of 45 days, involving 10 days and costs of court for conviction of intoxication, has a good chance of going back there tomorrow, when he is presented in the police court on a charge of breach of the peace, made by his sister, Mrs. Harry White, 110 Shaw street. Harrington, who seldom works, went this evening to the Shaw street house, where his aged mother and brother reside in another tenement. Before going to the tenement of his mother, Harrington stopped at the tenement occupied by his sister. He had hardly entered the house when he engaged his sister in a quarrel and within a short time there was a vigorous disturbance. Mrs. White to end the quarrel made complaint to the police. Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray, who was dispatched to the place, failed to find Harrington, for the latter had heard that the police had been summoned and retreated through Shaw street, to Hamilton street, to the bridge of the New Haven railroad spanning Shaw's cove. Officer Ray observed Harrington enter upon the bridge, and instead of giving chase, drove the police car to Sparyard street and there waited the arrival of Harrington. The officer had to wait less than five minutes when Harrington appeared and was placed under arrest. At the police station Harrington denied having an altercation with his sister, but he had been drinking and is usually quarrelsome when in that condition. He will have an opportunity tomorrow morning to explain his actions to Judge Victor Prince.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel has granted John Werner, 13 Spring street, the right to operate his car. Werner was arrested and convicted in the police court recently of operating a motor vehicle without having a license. It then developed that Werner had never obtained a license. A few days ago Werner submitted to an examination to operate and was given a license, which today was approved.

An automobile driven by George Taner, of 133 Wainwright street, Newark, N. J., and an automobile driven by W. T. Jones, a chief petty officer of the crew of the U. S. S. McCall, state pier, collided this afternoon at Ocean avenue, corner of Smythe street. Both automobiles were damaged, but not extensively.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

Five acts, variety plus, opens today at the Broadway theater. Of course the well liked Keith Albee vaudeville.

Guests made a wild scramble for the exits. Some got out safely and some were not so fortunate.

Excitement! We should say so! The wildest sort.

This is one of the many outstanding scenes in the newest Jans production, Ermine and Rhinestones, which opens at the Broadway theater today. The famous roadhouse is shown going at full swing and the raid is the most realistic thing of its kind ever photographed.

In addition, Ermine and Rhinestones offers the most startling display of fashionable furs ever conceived. They were designed and exhibited by Hickson of Fifth Avenue, and include a marvelous ermine wrap trimmed with rhinestones, especially made for this photoplay production, and around which the plot of the story revolves.

Edna Murphy, Niles Welch, Ruth Stonehouse, Colt, Albertson, Sally Crute, Bradley Barker and Marguerite McNulty play the leading roles.

Breed Theater

June Mathis, master mind behind the production of The Four Horsemen and Blood and Sand, is sponsor for what is now acclaimed as the most colossal production of them all. This is The Greater Glory, a new First National superfeature, which will be shown at the Breed theater here on Sunday.

Founded on the celebrated novel, Viennese Medley, by Edith O'Shaughnessy, wife of the American ambassador at Vienna, Miss Mathis has reconstructed and expanded the story into what is perhaps destined to be the most psychologically correct and gigantic work of drama ever shown before an American picture audience.

Miss Mathis picked as her nucleus for the cast five principals who were seen in The Four Horsemen. These are Jean Hersholt, Nigel de Brulier, John Saimpolis, Isabel Keith and Bridgetta Clark. Their performances are pleasantly remembered by film fans.

Of a cast of 90 to be seen in her new opus, pivotal roles go to Anna Q. Nilsson, Conway Tearle, May Allison, Lucy Beaumont, Ian Keith and Jean Hersholt, in addition there are Marcia Manon, Edward Earle, Virginia Southern, Katherine Chamners, Hale Hamilton, Cora Macey, Carrie Daumery, Thaw Fairfax, Boris Karloff and George Billings.

Coal Oil Jennie at the Lyceum

Coal Oil Jennie will be the attraction at the Lyceum theater, New London for the half week beginning Monday evening, July 26th, with a matinee on Wednesday.

Coal Oil Jennie is by Frank Craven, the actor-playwright-manager. Mr. Craven will not himself appear in the new piece, but he will stage it and A. L. Erlanger will present it. The cast will include Ernest Glendinning, Blyth Daly, Lee Donnelly, Maude Granger, Fred Graham, Adora Andrews, and John Ravold. Miss Daly cut short her summer vacation in Europe just to come home to play in this production.

What is the play about? Well, the author refuses to divulge the plot. He says he intends it to be a comedy, but as to the story, he is superstitious, like all playwrights and actors, and he thinks it is bad luck to tell too much—or even anything much about a play before it is put on the stage. It is quite safe to assume, though, that it is a comedy, because that is the kind of thing Mr. Craven writes. Witness his The First Year, and Too Many Cooks and New Brooms.

And note that Mr. Craven has another superstition. He insists that the title of the play be written—Coal Oil Jennie, Jennie, please, not Jenny. Why? Well, chiefly because with the "ie" instead of "y" there are just 13 letters in the title. Now are you on? Well, then.

PICNIC SUGGESTIONS GIVEN COOKING CLASS

Very timely, Miss Gladys L. Peckham, home service expert, gave a demonstration of picnic goodies to a class of 30 housewives, at the lecture room of the Norwich gas and electric department Wednesday afternoon. She began with sandwiches, recommending bread a day old—white, brown, rye, graham, raisin, date or nut bread, as preferred. Twenty different sandwich fillings were suggested.

Four delicious iced drinks were demonstrated—pineapple, lemonade, currant cool, Quaker ade and mint julep. The Quaker ade was sampled by the class, and was made from one cup of grape juice, the juice of three oranges, one cup sugar, one cup mashed raspberries, grated rind of one orange and two quarts of water. This forms a delicious summer drink.

Next week, with her Wednesday afternoon class, Miss Peckham is to demonstrate jelly making, in her series of free weekly lessons.

Tuesday evening, at St. Joseph's Community house, her class numbered 51, each striving for the diploma to be awarded at the end of the course of six lessons. The demonstration was on vegetables—baked potatoes in half-shells, glazed carrots, and Harvard beets. Next Tuesday evening this class will be instructed in canning.

At the Wednesday afternoon class session, in the absence of Mrs. C. D. Sayin, Miss Peckham had the assistance of Mrs. R. Day Fillmore, cashier in the G. and E. Dept. office. Practical questions and answers always form an important feature of these lessons.

HOMELESS DOGS GIVEN INDEX CARE OF HUMANS

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 21 (AP)—More than 800 dog owners and friends here operate a unique organization which looks after the welfare of dogs. It is the Rochester Dog Protective association.

A lost dog or a "yellow cur" in Rochester is not one of the forlorn objects of this world. He is card-indexed, he is put in a kennel of one of the 800 when found, and his human backers go farther than merely finding his owner, or getting him a new home.

The association also teaches outsiders how to care for dogs, not dogs in general, but the individual wants, tastes and doggy emotions of each rescued or recaptured animal.

Stolen dogs are traced through cooperation with police and detective agencies. Dogs found injured anywhere in the city or vicinity are given surgical attention and hospital care by the association.

Calls for assistance in caring for dogs run to a goodly number each month, and the secretary finds plenty of work to do in assuring the animals of proper treatment.

When a home is found for an ownerless dog, the new owner becomes a member of the association and takes the canine waif under the agreement that he will be given proper care and treatment and will be surrendered should the real owner be located. The association supplies the new owner with information as to the best means of caring for his new pet and generally supervises the treatment of the dog thereafter.

Members of the association, many of them kennel owners, volunteer their services in the care of the dogs.

Funds for maintenance of the work are obtained largely through the dog show held annually and from small membership fees.

FRANCISCAN MONKS GAVE ORANGES TO CALIFORNIA

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 21 (AP)—A few orange trees brought from Spain by Franciscan monks in 1769 and planted in mission grounds marked the beginning of a citrus industry in California which last year approached a turnover of $100,000,000.

The first orchard of any size was planted in 1804 or 1805 near the San Gabriel mission ten miles from where Los Angeles now is. Four hundred seedlings covered six acres.

Early records say extensive orchards were developed and were exceedingly prolific, although John C. Freemont, who visited the Franciscan establishments after their secularization in 1834, said little remained of the orchards then.

The navel, California's winter orange, was planted extensively in the seventies on desert land which had been considered worthless. The navel orange of today is one of the big four of citrus fruits.

The valencia orange was brought from the Azores islands in 1865. Lemons were imported from Australia and Sicily.

FIRST CAFETERIA IN LONDON IS A SUCCESS

LONDON, July 21 (AP)—London's first cafeteria has been a success.

It has a seating capacity of 500. While Londoners at first shied at the idea, within two weeks of the opening the cafeteria had all the noon business it could handle, and most of the arm chairs also were filled at tea time.

The cafeteria is in the shopping district, and has proved exceedingly popular with women who are eager for a quick lunch.

A fragment of a stone monument set up at the field of Armageddon by a victorious king, some 3,000 years ago, was discovered recently by workmen connected with an archaeological expedition, who were building a house

The new DIETZ BREAD baked with the old Dietz skill -

Fresh from the oven twice a day!

WHEN Mr. Walter Dietz purchased the Dolly Madison bakery, he at once set about reorganizing it and equipping it to supply the fine bread which, for forty years, has been associated with the Dietz name.

This new Dietz Bread Mr. Dietz honestly believes is the best he has ever baked.

He used to consider his old loaf perfect—with the perfection only years of experience, the finest ingredients and a wonderful recipe could give. But new experience has brought him even further skill—taught him the secret of new improvement which he has used in making the new Dietz Bread.

He has installed in the Dolly Madison bakery a wonderful new type of oven. It insures a new uniformity and dependability in baking which give added tenderness to the firm loaves, greater crispness to the evenly browned crust. With this new oven two bakings a day are possible, so that the delicious loaves reach your grocer twice a day—fresher than ever before!

Your own choice of ingredients

Dietz Bread is made of the same quality of ingredients you would use at home. But the flavor and texture of the loaf are even better because, instead of just the one kind of flour you use, several fine flours are blended to insure uniform gluten strength and rich wheat nourishment.

Get Dietz Bread in its homey red and green wrapper from your grocer today. It has the wholesomeness and honest goodness you require for your family. Dolly Madison Baking Corporation, Springfield, Mass.

FORTY years ago some of the best bread makers in New England began buying Dietz Bread.

Because they recognized in the loaf made by Dietz the same choice of ingredients, the same honest care, which they gave to their own baking. Dietz Bread was at home with the other well-cooked foods on their tables.

Father and son, the Dietz family, has carried on the tradition of making fine bread. Always they have had before them an ideal—a loaf perfect in appearance, in nutriment, in texture and in flavor.

BREAK IN STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP)—Stock prices broke sharply just before the close of today's market after having given indications earlier of resuming their upward movement. The sudden drop coincided with the publication of reports that the bank of France might be forced to suspend payments to the government tomorrow because the legal limit of note circulation or advances to the state, or both, had been reached.

The early advance had been based on favorable domestic trade developments. The statement in the weekly trade reviews that July production and demand were exceeding expectations was followed, after the close, by the resumption of dividends on Republic Steel common. The Chrysler Motor Car company reported deliveries of 91,857 cars in the first half of 1926 as against 68,250 in the corresponding period of last year. Money continued relatively easy, with large supplies available for stock market purposes.

The so-called "Durant stocks" featured the afternoon rally. General Motors was bid up from 164 3-8 to 170 1-4, or within a small fraction of the record high, only to fall back to 166 1-4, off half net on the day. Hudson dropped from 67 1-8 to 63 1-2 and then rallied to 64 1-2, off 2 1-2. American Safety Razor was bid up 3 points to a new top at 66, but cancelled over 3 points of its gain. Baldwin closed 3 1-4 points lower at 121 after having touched 124 3-4. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe was run up from 236 to 246, closing at 239, a net gain of 3 points.

U. S. Steel common closed over a point lower at 161 after having sold as high as 163 7-8. Early buying revived rumors of Melon-cutting at the July meeting of directors, but in conservative banking quarters no special dividend is expected before the October meeting. Republic Steel crossed 60 and then slipped back to 57 3-4, up 3 3-4 net. Sloss-Sheffield lost 3 points on an early five point gain.

New peak prices for the year were recorded by a number of specialties including Air Reduction, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Brunswick Balke Collender and Greene Cananea Copper. Anaconda Copper duplicated the year's high of 51 while Lorillard tumbled over 4 points to a new low at 32 3-4 on reports of disappointing earnings. Marked heaviness also was shown by Dupont, General Electric and Pullman.

Rails lost ground with the industrials, but the declines were not as large. Pere Marquette preferred broke 4 points to 85, presumably on liquidation inspired by speculative disappointment of holders of that issue over the revised "Nickel Plate" merger terms of exchange, and Buffalo and Susquehanna preferred collapsed to a new low at 43 3-8. Such recent favorites as New York Central, New Haven, Canadian Pacific and Rock Island sagged a point or more.

Commodity prices continued mixed. Wheat futures eased further, the July option getting back to $1.41 3-4, while cotton rallied 10 to 23 points on unfavorable weather reports. Raw sugar was unchanged and coffee futures sagged 15 to 25 points.

Call money remained at 4 per cent all day. The New York stock exchange reported that new borrowings were small and that offerings were ample at all time. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged. A sharp rally of nearly 20 points in French francs from the low record level established yesterday half of which was later lost, featured the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling sagged below $4.86, but most of the continental paper currencies moved in sympathy with the Paris rate.

BETTY BUDNICK SIGNS UP FOR VAUDEVILLE

Betty Selwyn, heretofore prominently identified with numerous parts in sundry picture scenarios and with radio vocalizations, will be seen in vaudeville this season as a soloist in a singing act, accompanied on the piano by Jane Roth, says the New York Morning Telegraph. The act will be exploited by Mr. LaFree, who discovered Betty via the air, traced her whereabouts and, sensing a find, induced her to try the varieties in order to allow radio fans a chance to get a glimpse of her in real life. Betty has a distinctly brunette personality, which she can readily add to her other histronic assets. Another Belle Baker, perhaps.

Betty Selwyn is Miss Betty Budnick of this city. Miss Budnick is planning to visit Norwich this week end, arriving Friday night or Saturday.

BOXING BOUTS BRING K. OF C. LAWN PARTY TO A CLOSE

The patrons of the lawn party given at the Knights of Columbus grounds on Broadway, Wednesday evening, under the auspices of White Cross council, were treated to seven fine exhibition bouts, the fighters being some of the best in the state. The boxing bouts brought the two day lawn party to a close.

It was expected that Jack Delaney, world's champion light heavyweight fighter, would be present during the evening but at the last minute word was received that he was in Holyoke to attend a celebration for members of his family and was therefore unable to come to Norwich.

Previous to the various bouts of the evening the several booths offered attractions and they were will patronized by the large crowd that had assembled at the grounds.

The boxing bouts went on shortly after 10 o'clock when Announcer Edward T. Connelly thanked the crowd for their attendance and stated that the bouts had been arranged through the cooperation of Thomas E. Donohue, of New London, state boxing commissioner and that the third man in the ring would be Michael Kelly of this city.

The first bout of the evening was a third round affair between Babe Slattery of New Haven, champion middleweight of the state and Charlie Anderson of Bridgeport, champion lightweight of Connecticut. This bout proved a popular one and was a clever exhibition of the fistic game.

The second bout was also of three rounds and was between Mickey Travers of New Haven and Young Connelly, champion fighter of the Pacific coast fleet and now with the Coast Guard at New London. This fight produced some fine in-fighting both men being well matched and willing to mix it for the crowd.

The third bout, one of two rounds brought together Kid Kaplan of Meriden, former champion feather-weight of the world and Eddie Lord of New Haven. This was the star attraction of the evening and gave the fans a chance to see Kaplan exhibit his craft which brought him to the peak in his class.

The three round bout between Sheik Leonard of Norwich and Young Leonard of New Haven also proved an interesting bout although the Sheik had weight on the New Haven lad. The crowd enjoyed the battle however as both boys went at it in fine shape during their rounds.

The fifth bout of the evening proved to be the fastest and brought the crowd to cheers when the fighters hammered away in real style, mixing it from the bell in each of the three rounds. This bout was between Mickey Travers of New Haven and Johnny Mack of New Haven, amateur featherweight champion of Connecticut. The boys were well matched and punches were let drive at will. It was the best bout of the evening from the viewpoint those who craved action.

Scotty Carroll of New London, champion of the army, Atlantic section, now recruiting officer in this section met Young Puchini of Norwich in the sixth bout. Carroll is a clever boxer and allowed Puchini to sail in and hammer away at will, flashing out once in a while on his own account to bring the local lad to a quick stop with a jab or hook to the chin. It was a fine exhibition and the local boy showed up well.

The final bout of the evening was between Johnny Mack of New Haven and Joe Saberline, of the Nutmeg Athletic club of that city, both boys fighting fast and giving the crowd action.

All bouts were purely exhibitions and despite the intense heat the fighters furnished the sports more than their money's worth and the Knights of Columbus are to be congratulated on bringing so many fighters to Norwich to give an exhibition for the entertainment of the public.

NORWICH ELKS HOME FROM CHICAGO CONVENTION

Attorney Charles W. Cassidy, delegate from the local lodge of Elks, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Hoelck and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. O. Hoelck, all of this city, have returned home after a ten days trip with the Elks' tour.

The party left Norwich July 9th for Boston, where a special Elks' car took the New England delegates and other Elks to the convention at Chicago. The first day out the party reached Montreal where a stop was made and sight seeing trips enjoyed. The following day a stop was made at Niagara falls. On Monday the party reached Chicago where the convention was held and the new Elks home was dedicated.

The hospitality shown the Norwich people and others from New England was of the best, everything possible being done to make their stay a pleasure.

While in Chicago Attorney Cassidy met Attorney John Hughes of Chicago. Attorney Hughes is a former Norwich boy and a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy. He is now practicing law in Chicago and is counsel for the Central Union Trust company which is controlled chiefly by Vice President Dawes.

During the parade the Norwich people were fortunate and secured seats on the reviewing stand with the high officials of the Elks.

On the return trip stops were made at Toronto, a boat trip around the Thousand Islands was enjoyed, the tourists had the pleasure of shooting the rapids in the St. Lawrence river and enjoyed many side trips. The convention trip was voted ideal by the Norwich party.

NORWICH MEN VISIT CAPE COD GOLF LINKS

Attorney Edward G. McKay and Charles J. McKay of 23 Spalding street have returned home after spending a week at Cape Cod, where they visited many of the best golf links. Among the clubs visited was Westward Ho at Chatham, which has a course which cost over a million dollars. The professional at Chatham comes from Aberdeen, Scotland, which was also the home of George Falconer, for several years professional at the Norwich Golf club, and he knew Mr. Falconer very well. The visit at Chatham was made very pleasant for the Norwich men the club extending them every possible courtesy.

WEDNESDAY WAS HOTTEST DAY OF SEASON

Wednesday was the hottest day of the summer the mercury climbing to the 100 mark during the hottest part of the day. With the humidity high the heat was almost unbearable. Until Wednesday the heat of June 9th had held the record for the season. Wednesday morning the heat became too intense for the employes at the Richmond Radiator company and that plant was closed before noon. Cooler weather is forecast for today (Thursday) with fresh winds blowing from the southwest.

The hot weather cost Harold Roscoe, of Chicago, $1.23¢ yesterday. He started downtown to buy an automobile, decided he would take a plunge in Lake Michigan, and when he emerged his trousers containing the money were gone.

WHEN YOU WANT to put your business before the public, there is no medium better than through the advertising columns of The Bulletin

Fred S. Duesenberg, one of the world's greatest builders of racing cars and manufacturer of the $7000 Duesenberg automobile, told George W. Sutton, Jr., America's leading automotive writer, "The Auburn is a Darn Good Car." They both agreed upon it 100%.

Add Mr. Harry Miller's statement that the Auburn is the smoothest stock car he has ever driven and you have samples of the kind of praise the Auburn is receiving from the most "hard-boiled" automobile critics.

But the greatest praise comes from Auburn owners. The engineering authority arrives at his estimate of Auburn's superior quality by his knowledge of the comparative way cars are built today. The owner may not be an engineer but he comes to the same conclusion by the unequalled satisfaction he gets from his car. You will find that to an Auburn owner his car is almost his religion. See the new Auburn, drive it, compare it and if it does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy.

TERRIFIC LIGHTNING AND WIND STORM AT ALBANY

Lightning, Wind and Heat Killed Three Persons and Critically Injured Two—Four Persons Were Overcome and a Score or More Less Critically Affected—In Various Sections of the East There Were Reports of Prostrations, Drowning, Suicides and Deaths of Persons Already Ill.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 23—(AP)—Three dead, two critically injured, four overcome and a score of more less critically hurt, was the toll taken in Albany and vicinity today by the record heat wave and the terrific lightning and wind storm which brought it to an end late this afternoon. Heat prostration, lightning and falling trees and structures caused the injuries. No estimate has been made of the property damage yet.

(By the Associated Press)

The hottest July 23 ever recorded in most sections of the east passed with long-promised cooling showers still only a hope.

As the third day of the summer's most intense heat wave drew to a close it left in its wake a record of offices and industrial plants closed, of men and women prostrated at their work and on the streets, of drowning among crowds that surged to the seaside and lake front, of both animals and humans demented by the scorching weather.

Although suffering was intense Wednesday, temperatures were generally several points higher Thursday. Records of 100 were unusual and scattered before but on Thursday such temperature became the rule rather than the exception.

From all the reports of prostrations, drownings, suicides, deaths of persons already ill, all to some extent attributed to the weather, it was impossible to compile any accurate list of deaths for which the heat could be held directly and solely responsible.

In various places in New York, New England and Pennsylvania, stores and industrial plants closed their doors so that employes might seek what relief was possible.

New York city experienced its hottest July 23 since the weather bureau has been in operations. After a rushing start with a 4 degree rise in three hours in the morning, the mercury reach 97 degrees at 3 o'clock. An hour later it had dropped one degree and some hope was held out for relief.

Formality went by the board and in many courts officers and visitors were permitted to remove their coats. Business was stopped in on New York court when a court room crowd, taking to literally the judge's permission to make themselves comfortable, removed their shirts as well as their coats and drew a sharp reprimand.

The record of the heat wave was one of mingled tragedy and humor. In Northampton N. Y., persons became temporarily deranged and had to be restrained by police; and in Lowell, Mass., an egg was fried on a brick roof. In Jersey City three heat-crazed dogs attacked two young boys and in St. Armande, Quebec, the nearest Canadian point for Vermonters, an American invasion was reported to the beer tables. And so through the whole record, tragedy walked hand in hand with farce and the sufferers found time to laugh at their plight as well as moan.

The weather bureau still spoke brightly of showers but the heat parched easterners were in a mood to be shown. Promises and predictions had ceased to satisfy.

THUNDERSTORMS AND GALES THROUGHOUT NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, July 22.—(AP)—Thunderstorms and gales, general throughout New England, tonight brought to a close a three day heat spell which set new temperature records, and caused many deaths and prostrations. The storms, breaking suddenly at the close of the hottest day in 15 years, caused widespread damage.

The maximum temperature for the day in Boston was 103 degrees, reached at 4 o'clock, one degree lower than the highest point on record here. On July 4, 1911, a temperature of 104 degrees was attained. Ten deaths and many heat prostrations marked the closing day of the heat wave in New England.

Tonight from many sections of the New England area came stories of wind and lightning damage in the wake of the storms which blasted out the three day high temperature wave. In Portland, Me., light and power failed for a time due to lightning damage and street car service was interrupted. Telephone and telegraph services in all parts of New England were curtailed. At Concord, N. H., Hampton Beach, N. H., Haverhill, Mass., and other points serious damage to trees and buildings was caused by sudden gales.

At Boscawen, N. H., a large barn was blown down. At Hampton Beach the roof of the Alpha hotel was lifted off and deposited on the beach 75 feet distant. In many instances little or no rain accompanied the storms. Several buildings were struck by lightning at Manchester, N. H., and train schedules were disrupted when trees were blown down across the tracks.

In Boston during the day four persons died as a result of the heat and ten cases of heat prostration were reported. In the larger cities of New England industrial and commercial activities were largely suspended. In Boston and Lowell experimenters succeeded in frying eggs on the roofs of buildings.

BRISTOL WAS VISITED BY SERIES OF THUNDER STORMS

BRISTOL, Conn., July 23—(AP)—The heat wave was broken here tonight by a series of thundershowers, during the first of which the large ice house of Thomas L. Ryan in Forestville was struck by lightning. The building was virtually destroyed by the fire that followed with an estimated loss of $10,000.

INFANT CRUSHED BENEATH LIMB BLOWN FROM TREE

LAWRENCE, Mass., July 22.—(AP)—Matthew Markowski, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. William Markowski of this city was instantly killed tonight when he was crushed beneath a heavy limb blown from a tree on the common during the worst gale that has swept this city since 1890. Mrs. Markowski was hurrying home and crossing the common when the wind reached a furious velocity. Without warning the limb dropped upon the infant's carriage, splintering it and killing the child.

A number of trees were blown down in the city, shingles were torn from roofs and the light and power lines crippled.

ONE LIFE LOST IN WIND STORM AT BRATTLEBORO

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., July 22—(AP)—One life was lost when a windstorm broke over this district late today following the highest temperatures in 20 years. James H. Thayer, farmer of Guilford Center, six miles from here, was killed when his silo was blown over by the storm.

More than 150 trees were uprooted or broken off in Brattleboro. Many telephone and telegraph wires were broken by falling trees and the streets were dark for a time through the failure of electric light and power wires. A part of the roof of the town hall building was blown off.

The maximum temperature here today was 103 degrees, at 2 o'clock.

WINDSTORM SEVERE IN VICINITY OF NORTH ADAMS

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., July 22—(AP)—The roof of the Boston and Albany railroad company's roundhouse here was blown off tonight by a "twister" which swept across the Berkshires from the northwest. All automobiles traffic was blocked by trees which were blown down, falling across the highways. The cross on the spire of Notre Dame church was broken off by the force of the wind and several windows in the business district were shattered in the gale.

LA GUARDIA DENOUNCES IMMIGRATION RESTRICTIONS

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 22—(AP)—Imigration restrictions which "were thrust upon the country by a narrow bigoted, race-hating minority," were criticised by Congressman Fiorello La Guardia of New York city, one of the principal speakers at a dinner given tonight in Tower Clerk Cataldo Masso at Mamaugium.

Nearly 500 persons attended the dinner. Other speakers included Lieut. Gov. J. Edwin Brainard, Francis A. Pallotti, secretary of state, and Congressman J. P. Glynn.

After predicting a political future for Mr. Masso, Congressman La Guardia pointing to the town clerk's widowed mother who had a place of honor near the speaker's table said:

"Just think if that dead woman there were in Italy, she would be unable to come here to see her honored, as the quota is filled. This separation of families is vicious, cruel and inhuman.

"When a foreigner has come to this country, learned its ways, has sworn allegience to this nation and has become a citizen, I say he should be permitted to send for his wife and children, and for his aged father or mother. Under the new arrangement, with the preferences as they will be, it will take some of these wives and mothers 300 years, if they could live that long, to await their turns to come here."

MRS. TAYLOR DENIES ALL HUSBAND'S CHARGES

LOS ANGELES, July 22—(AP)—Mrs. Charles A. Taylor, whose wealthy oil well supply dealer husband yesterday charged her with tackling Harold (Red) Grange in a kissing scene, and otherwise being more than ordinarily familiar with the football playing, ice-peddling, screen-acting star, today, through her attorneys, gategorically denied all the charges in her spouse's divorce cross-complaint.

Mrs. Taylor went considerably farther and promised "real fireworks" in an answer to her husband's bill which her attorneys now are busy preparing.

Taylor, although he charged that his wife used one of Grange's knees instead of an adjacent chair, rumpled the hair, patted the cheeks and kissed the lips of the line-busting football player, made it plain that he did not blame "Red."

Said the husband: "I am extremely sorry that this occurred. Charles Pyle, Grange's manager, is my cousin, and through him, I have come to be on very friendly terms with 'Red.'

"He is too much of a gentleman to do anything wrong, and he was named only to show how my wife acted."

FEW HEAT PROSTRATIONS REPORTED IN THE STATE

NEW HAVEN, July 22.— (AP) —All Connecticut sizzled and blistered in the sun's rays today as it had not done in years. Official thermometers gave the temperature at 101 but the street corner, front porch and store door instruments gave readings as high as 105 in the shade. It was the hottest day in the history of the local weather bureau established in 1872.

Energetic seekers after high records of Old Sol's direct rays quoted 118 at Milford and 125 at Hamden. On the other hand the beach resorts reported a comfortable afternoon as there were traces of breezes.

Factories and shops everywhere surrendered to the heat early and let their employes bustle to cooler places if they could find them. Heat prostrations of a serious nature were not many, due, it was explained by the weather sharps to the absence of excessive humidity.

BODY FOUND BESIDE GRAVE HE HAD DUG

MARLBORO, Mass., July 23—(AP)—The body of John Cainan was found beside a new grave he had dug in Immaculate Conception cemetery here today. The body was within a foot of the new grave and according to the medical examiner Cainan had been overcome by the heat and died of heart failure.

CABLED PARAGAPHS

LONDON, July 22.—(AP)— Phyllis Broughton, star of the Gaiety in the '80s and early '90s, died at her home in Picadilly.

ROME, July 22.—(AP)—The French situation is regarded by the Italian press as an indication of the collapse of parliamentary government. There is no suggestion that fascist methods be adopted there.

PRISON GUARD KILLED AND SIX CONVICTS FREED

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., July 22.—(AP)—Two men believed to have been former inmates, shot and killed a guard ath the Ferguson prison farm near here early today and freed six convicts, in one of the most sensational prison deliveries in the history of Texas.

The eight men escaped in a motor car under fire of other guards. All had eluded capture tonight.

After an investigation, Warden N. L. Speer of the Huntsville penitentiary expressed the belief that the two men who engineer the delivery were convicts who had escaped recently from the farm.

On information furnished by convicts he is seeking, Harve Ennis, who escaped ten days ago, and Charles Frasier, also an escaped prisoner.

The first inkling of the raid came when three shots from an automatic shotgun were fired point-blank into the body of the picket guard, Will Rader, 50 years old, the father of five children. Rader was killed instantly.

When the shooting began the building tender, aPt McCoy, a trusty, switched off all lights in the prisoners' quarters. The man who did the shooting called out the names of six prisoners and told them to strike matches and get ready to leave. He went directly to the inner compartment and unlocked the door to the prisoners' lockup, with keys taken from Rader.

When the first shots were fired, John Kittlebank, who was guarding the outside of the building from a point in the rear of the camp, made a dash for the front door. He was stopped by a shot from Rader's companion who was stationed in front of the building.

Frank Dowlin, a guard, awoke with the first shot and rushed out of his sleeping quarters. Ten prisoners and raiders had gathered in front of the building by this time and one of the men fired at him. Kittlebank began firing at the fleeing party at this juncture and Dowling also emptied his pistol at their backs.

The convicts and their liberators hastened to a parked touring car on the highway, fired two more shots and departed.

None of the other prisoners in the building attempted to escape.

380 MOTOR ACCIDENTS IN THE STATE LAST WEEK

HARTFORD, July 23.—(AP)— The state motor vehicle department announced that 380 accidents, three of them fatal, were reported last week which was 18 accidents and seven fatalities less than the record for the corresponding week of last year.

Hartford led the accidents list last week, 56 being reported from this city. Bridgeport followed with 37, New Haven with 29, Waterbury 25, New Britain 18, Meriden 11, Stamford 8, New London 7, Norwich and Greenwich 6 each, Danbury 5, Norwalk 3, and Winsted 1, the total of city accidents being 214.

The victims of the week's fatal accidents were Patrick Ryan at New Haven, Patrick Giannotti at Stratford, and Harry Siequist at Naugatuck.

ANOTHER OUTBURST OF ANTI-FOREIGN SENTIMENT IN PARIS

PARIS, July 22—(AP)—There was another outburst of anti-foreign sentiment in Paris tonight. Large crowds collected on boulevards near the point where the "seeing Paris" busses start. The demonstrators hooted and jeered and their attitude soon became so threatening that the occupants of two of the busses alighted.

Two other busses, however, started and attempted to force a passage though the crowds which barred the street.

Police reserves were hastily summoned, and rescued several American and English tourists, against whom the mob was particularly agressive. The police cleared the street, however, without making any arrest.

TWO DEATHS CAUSED BY HEAT IN PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 22.—(AP)—Evelyn M. Knight, two and a half years old of Cranston, R. I., and Charles W. Brown, 84, Civil war veteran of Foster, R. I., both died from the effects of the heat wave which sent the thermometer soaring to 100.5 here today. Mr. Brown was overcome while picking huckleberries. In addition to the two deaths, hospitals in this city reported four prostrations and numerous persons were temporarily overcome by the high temperature. Unofficial thermometers late tonight in this city showed the temperature had fallen to 78 degrees.

APPLE ORCHARDS WIPED OUT BY VIOLENT GALE

DOVER, N. H., July 22—(AP)—Several apple orchards were wiped out by a violent gale which struck this town tonight, causing a property damage estimated at $50,000. The orchards were left without a tree upstanding.

The town was in total darkness as practically all light and power lines were torn down. Traffic, both rail and automobile, was blocked by trees that had fallen across the roads and trolley tracks. Several buildings were blown down and the roofs were blown from others.

DEATH IN TORRINGTON ATTRIBUTED TO THE HEAT

TORRINGON, July 22T.—(AP)—Thomas Maher, 33, was found dead in the woods in the north end of the city this afternoon by two boys. He had left his home less than three hours previously. Death, according to Dr. H. R. Henchett, medical examiner, was due to cerebral concussion sustained in a fall and to heat prostration.

INVESTORS IN FLORIDA TO HOLD MASS MEETING

HARTFORD, July 22—(AP)—A mass meeting of investors in four real estate syndicates of Miami, Fla., has been called for to-morrow night at 7 o'clock standard time in lower United hall on Pratt street. An investors protective committee headed by Attorney Edward J. Daly of this city will make a report on an investigation conducted by it with the assistance of Charles A. Pease, certified public accountant.

C. W. Morse Accused of "Playing Sick"

Court "Mercifully" Gives Aged Shipbuilder Three Months in Which to Get Well.

NEW YORK, July 23—(AP)—Accused by a government prosecutor of "playing sick," Charles W. Morse, aged shipbuilder, was given three months in which to get well today by a judge who believed the court can afford to make a mistake on the part of mercy, but not in rigorous enforcement of the demands of justice."

A week ago today the case of Morse and 20 other defendants charged with using the mails to defraud in the sale of United States steamship stock, was called. Application was made for adjournment on the ground that Morse was too ill to come from Bath, Me., to New York to plead. He was ordered to appear today.

In the meantime, however, doctors' certificates had been sent the court that Morse, who is 70 years old, was ill neither physically nor mentally to appear in court. It was intimated that his condition was further weakened by the death of his wife on the same day the case was called last week.

At today's court session Fletcher Dobyns, special assistant United States attorney, expressed the belief that Morse was not really ill but had "made a fool" of the government and perpetrated a fraud on the court. He said that government investigators had heard that Morse had boasted that if he once got to Maine he had so much influence there that the government would never be able to make him come to New York to stand trial.

Mr. Dobyns said that although Morse was said to be too ill to come to New York from Bath, he had not been too ill to go to Bath from New York just before the ime set for his pleading.

"Certainly," he said, "it is no greater hardship to come to New York from Maine than to go to Maine from New York."

Morse's attorney, in presenting a certificate from Dr. B. F. Barker of Bath that his client was not well enough to face the ordeal, charged that Morse was the victim of persecution by persons "who regard themselves as constituting the government."

"The court can afford to make a mistake on the part of mercy," Judge Holmes announced after argument was ended, "but not in rigorous enforcement of the demands of justice. I will give this man the opportunity to get well. If he does so, he will be brought to trial. This matter will be put over to the first Monday in the October term."

Mr. Bobyns announced that whether or not Morse was brought to court on October 4th case will go to trial as far as the other defendants are concerned in the meantime it was arranged that a physician under direction of a government attorney, will examine Morse.

LATEST DEVELOPMENTS IN THE MELLETT MURDER CASE

CANTON, Ohio, July 22.—(AP)—Assassination of Don R. Mellett, of the Canton News a week ago was the result of a deep laid plot of the combined forces of the underworld of Canton and vicinity, investigators tonight said they are convinced.

This theory is opposed to the one generally adhered to thus far—that Mellett was shot by one small gang antagonistic to the publisher's editorial and personal fight against vice and criminality.

Mellett's death the investigators now believe was determined upon by the conspirators of various "rings" after they had agreed his removal was necessary because he constituted an economic barrier to their illicit trafficking.

One len the investigators are following points directly at the conspiracy. With various scattered leads discharded, temporarily at least, the investigators back tracked tonight to form a co-operative clearing house of evidence. Several conferences during the day led to the evolution of the plan.

One of the tangible items with which the combined investigators are now provided was a catalogue of all alleged gunmen known to have been in Canton at the time of the murder, or shortly before or after. This list is to be gone over systematically.

Coroner T. C. McQuate today left for New Haven, Conn., with the bullet which killed Mellett and one other, found at the scene of the murder, to get the opinion of firearms experts as to whether it was fired by a rifle or pistol cartridge.

LEADER ADVISES STRIKERS TO SEEK THEIR OLD JOBS

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP)—Edward P. Lavin, leader of the striking employes of the Interborough Rapid Transit company, advised the strikers tonight to seek their old jobs at their pre-strike standing.

The strike of the subway motormen and switchmen had been lost, he said, "because of Mayor Walker's failure to intervene and the steady desertions from the strikers' ranks." He urged the men to march in a body tomorrow morning to the Interborough yards and ask to be taken back.

The announcement of the proposed return of the strikers was made at the end of an all day conference of the general strike committee. Hope was given up, the committee said after the announcement that Mayor Walker's proposed conference to settle the strike would not be held.

One Man Killed, Two Wounded by Robbers

During Two Attempted Robberies in New York—One of the Thieves Later Died in Hospital.

NEW YORK, July 22—(AP)—Robbers killed one man and wounded two in two attempted robberies today. A man believed to have been one of the robbers later died in a hospital.

Aaron Rodack, who had declared his store would be robbed only "over my dead body," was shot to death and his clerk, Sidney Freifeld, was wounded perhaps fatally, when five men rushed into his Broadway jewelry store with drawn revolvers. Two hours later five men, flourishing revolvers, attempted to hold up a private banking establishment in the Bronx and shot Rafelle Ranlero, a clerk, because he did not raise his hands quickly.

The robbers in both attempted robberies escaped in an automobile kept waiting at the curb. They obtained no loot. Although five men participated in each attempted robbery, and used the same tactics, police had no proof that both "jobs" were conducted by the same band.

Rodack was felled in front of his store at 3630 Broadway with a revolver in his hand firing at the escaping robbers who had already wounded his clerk. He was known as "the fighting jeweler" and had killed a man who tried to rob his store a year ago. After that he had made public declarations that he "would shoot it out with any man that tries to rob me."

When the robbers entered, Rodack was waiting on a customer. He stooped and took from behind the counter his revolver. By that time the gunmen had opened fire and he fell with two bullets in his chest. The robbers ran from the store, but Rodack followed them to the street. As they clambered in to their automobile he exchanged shots with them. They fired back, and Rodack, shot through the head, fell across the threshold of the store he had defended.

As the robbers sped away in a gaudily painted touring car they sent bullets crashing through the windows of nearby stores.

Peter Barnowski, who was found lying in his hospital of a bullet wound. A witness said he had seen three men lift Barmowski out of an automobile similar to that used in the robbery of Rodack's store, and then sped away. Barmowski, before he died, told police he had been wounded in a bootlegger's feud.

Ranfeiro was shot when five robbers, wearing sun glasses, rushed into the private bank of J. Miccione, in East 187th street, the Bronx. Three clerks were in the banking room. Ranfiero, who was seated on a stool, did not raise his hands when commanded to do so and the robbers opened fire on him. He was wounded in the shoulder. The robbers fled without further attempt to rob the bank.

WARRANT FOR ARREST OF MISSING RUM CASE WITNESS

NEW YORK, July 22.—(AP)— Charles Augustus Smith who today halted the trial of William V. Dwyer and his associates by disappearing during the noon recess of federal court, has been located and will be produced in court tomorrow morning, District Attorney Buckner announced tonight.

A warrant for the arrest of Smith as a material witness in the prosecution of the alleged "members of a $40,000,000 rum running combine" was issued by Federal Judge Mack after Smith had disappeared. Smith was arrested on the warrant, Mr. Buckner said, and will be held in Ludlow street jail until resumption of the trial.

Smith, sometimes known as Charles Augustus, and sometimes as Charles Henry, had been branded a deserter from the navy and charged with wife desertion in open court.

Smith, who has testified he was employed by Dwyer to transport liquor from rum row in speed boats maintained by Dwyer and his associates, was under cross examination at the time of his disappearance. He had testified that he was a naval officer, joining the navy in 1917. Counsel for defense produced navy service records to sho what a Charles Henry Smith had enlisted in the navy in 1912, subsequently deserting.

CONVICT ESCAPED FROM VERMONT STATE PRISON

WINDSOR, Vt., July 22.—(AP)—Stephen H. Hoppe of Boston, "spooned" his way through two brick walls that would not a prison make and gained his freedom from the state prison here early today.

He was confined in a prison within a prison—the death house—because he had previously escaped and was also known to have broken jail at the Maine state prison. Every precaution was believed to have been taken by the warden to prevent his getting away again, but Hoppe outdid his keepers.

The first step in Hoppe's unusual escape was the larceny of two spoons from the prison dining room. Equipped with these tools and much patience he began picking and spooning the mortar from between the bricks in his cell wall.

Then in some manner he broke two pieces of iron from his cot and used them in the heavier work. The hole began to grow and soon gave him access to the outer wall which succumbed to the same method of attack and brought him his freedom today.

BOY SHOT WHILE PLAYING "HOLD-UP" WITH A GUN

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 23—(AP)—Shot in the chest while playing "hold-up" with a chum, Tony Girasulo, 7, of North Haven, was taken to the New Haven hospital today in a serious condition.

With Edward Miller, 12, Tony was playing near "The Pines" in North Haven. In order to make their game more realistic, the older boy is said to have gone to his home in the absence of his mother and to have taken two revolvers, one loaded and the other empty from a mattress.

A holdup was then staged. The Miller boy pulled the trigger of his gun, a .32 calibre revolver. Tony fell, not as in play, but with blood streaming from a wound in his chest.

Older persons took the Girasulo boy to the hospital where the bullet was removed. It was believed tonight that he would recover.

POINCARE ENDEAVORING FORM FRENCH CABINET

Will Hold a Few Conferences Before Returning to Elysee Palace Today With His Final Answer—It is Understood That M. Briand Has Accepted Portfolio of Foreign Affairs—Poincare Will Take Charge of the Finance Department.

PARIS, July 23—(AP)—M. Poincare, who yesterday accepted the invitation of President Doumergue to form a cabinet, spent most of the day in consultation with the various leaders, and this evening was able to say that his consultations were finished and that he had only a few conferences before returning to Elysee palace tomorrow morning with his final answer.

The ex-president smilingly told the newspaper correspondents that he did not have time to explain the distinction in his mind between consultations and conferences. He accepted the undertaking only in principle, which is taken to mean that his final answer will be in the affirmative only if he is successful in organizing the kind of ministry he wants and can come to agreement with certain powerful influences to support him.

It is deduced from the circumstances that M. Poincare has already recruited his ministers and will have no further consultations on that subject, but that a conference will be necessary with Albert Sarraut, the new senator from Carcassonne and part owner of ouse, which this morning declared the radical organ, La Depeche de Toulouse that the radicals could not accept M. Poincare as head of the government.

M. Sarraut will confer with M. Poincare in the presence of Louis Barthou, and the developments tomorrow may depend perhaps on the outcome of that interview. It is therefore possible that if the Depeche does not indicate a change in policy in its next issue, M. Poincare may say to President Doumergue that he cannot form a ministry.

It is understood that M. Briand has already accepted the post of foreign affairs. M. Painleve has agreed in principle to take a portfolio in the new cabinet, while M. Schraneck, one of the radical leaders, is slated for the interior department.

That is all that is known with any certainty regarding the ministry, except that M. Poincare will take charge of the finance department.

BRITISH TAKE ISSUE WITH SEC'Y MELLON'S STATEMENTS

LONDON, July 22.—(AP)—The British treasury department has taken issue with the statements recently made by Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the United States treasury, and Acting Secretary Winston of the treasury, in which the contention was set forth that Great Britain had negotiated a large part of her loan from the United States for "purely commercial, as distinguished from war purposes." An elaborate rejoinder was made public today by the British treasury department, which concludes as follows:

"Great Britain provided sterling and neutral currencies to meet all her own requirements throughout the war, and, in addition, bore the burden of covering the sterling requirements allies.

"But for the fact that the United States did not feel able on entering the war to relieve her of this additional burden Great Britain would have been able to meet from the resources she placed at the disposal of her allies, her expenditure in America and in all parts a preferably, the British debt to the United States would never have been incurred.

"The British treasury feels it necessary to set forth the foregoing facts because they seem to show that no case for discriminating against Great Britain can be founded upon her use of money borrowed from the United States for the prosecution of the war. No complaint has been made to Great Britain against the adverse discrimination with which she has been treated.

"It is recognized that this creditor is entitled to discriminate between debtors and that a debtor is bound to comply with the demands of the creditor up to the full limit of the obligations. It is only when reasons are assigned for such discrimination which clearly arise from misconception of the facts that necessary corrections of facts must be made."

RECOUNT ORDERED IN COOK COUNTY PRIMARY

CHICAGO, July 22.—(AP)—Charges of wholesale fraud in connection with the April primaries in Cook county took on a national aspect today when County Judge Edmund Jarecki ordered a recount of all votes cast in the county for both republican and democratic candidates for the United States senate.

At the same time a second special grand jury investigating election frauds returned indictments against 54 election officials, charging they conspired to make a false canvass. The indictments returned today increased the number of election officials thus far charged with making false returns to 109, including several women. Officials engaged in a recount of votes cast for county candidates, both democrat and republican, thus far have uncovered upward of 200,000 false ballots, and have estimated that nearly 4,000,000 individual votes will have been thrown out or otherwise changed when the count is completed. In many instances it has been charged that the election officials did not even bother to make a count but gave the various candidates an agreed number of ballots.

The recount of senatorial votes in the county was ordered at the request of Senator James A. Reed hea dof the senate committee investigating campaign expenditures which next month will open an inquiry here into expenditures of both major party candidates in the Illinois senatorial primary race following charges that more than $2,000,000 had been spent.

Colonel Frank L. Smith, republican senatorial nominee, George E. Brennan, his democratic opponent, and losing candidates opposed to them alongwith their campaign managers and officials of various organizations have been called to testify before the senate committee.

Little variation in the republican vote for senator was evidenced after a recount of 21 precincts in one ward. At that time Smith had lost 12 votes to William B. McKinley, unsuccessful candidate. In a recount of 11 precincts in the democratic senatorial race, Brennan, who won in the primary by a wide margin, lost only 15.

SHEIK VALENTINO MUST FOREGO POWDER PUFF DUEL

NEW YORK, July 22—(AP)—The powder puff duel of Rudolph Valentino, Sheik of the movie lots, and an unidentified editorial writer is all off.

While in Chicago recently Valentino read an editorial which linked his name with the use of pink powder puffs by men. He challenged the writer to a duel, the rapier to be replaced by boxing gloves.

When the writer failed to reveal his identity the movie star announced here that he would return to Chicago to hunt out his prospective adversary. But today he changed his mind.

"The heroic silence of the writer who chose to attack me," he said, "leaves no doubt as to the total absence of manliness in his whole makeup. I feel I have been vindicated because I consider his silence a tacit retraction, and an admission which I am forced to accept even though it is not entirely to my liking."

SPECIAL CITY MEETING TO DEAL WITH $290,000

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 22—An especially large attendance is anticipated at the special city meeting to be held Friday evening, to take action on several appropriations passed by the common council by resolution, for action by the voters. The majority of the appropriations called for are vital ones but there appears to be considerable opposition to several of them. The conservatives view with alarm the prospect of greatly increased taxes if the measures are voted. On the other hand there are those who assert that the burden will not be great as the major appropriations can be carried on serial bonds for a long term of years.

The notice and warning of the meeting calls for an aggregate appropriation of $290,000, divided into nine portions as follows: $15,000 for the installation and construction of a new sewer on West Main street in a westerly direction from Mansfield avenue; $3,000 (additional) for the police department; $8,000, or such part thereof as may be deemed necessary for the construction and equipment of a garage at the city yard on Watson street; $200,000 for the construction of permanent streets in the city and for the repair of streets; $30,000 for the purchase of new ladder trucks and equipment for the fire department; $18,000 for the purchase of land on North and Meadow streets, formerly occupied by the Lincoln & Bose Lumber and Coal company, now owned by the Willimantic Lumber and Coal company, to be used as an automobile parking space for the public, subject to such regulations as the common council may determine; $10,000 for the purchase of land between Pleasant street and the Willimantic river to be used as a public park; $3,000 for oiling the city streets and $3,000 for the opening and construction of new streets.

The third and most serious fire within a fortnight in the Hop River district of the town of Columbia occurred Wednesday at noon when a landmark, a two-story wooden building in the village proper, owned by Herman and Louis Schachowitz, with its contents, also and barn and shed attached, was destroyed. The building was purchased by the present owners from Jake Kaplan and Jake Applebaum, about three years ago. Previous to the latter owning the property, the lower part of the building contained the only store in the place. In former days when the paper mill was being operated in the village the store was conducted by members of the Slater family.

Shortly after noon, Chief Henry J. Culley of the local fire department received a telephone message asking for assistance as the entire village appeared to be in danger. Lieut. Michael I. English and Fireman William H. Smith made a quick run to the fire. The building was practically destroyed when the firemen arrived, so the local men turned their attention to saving a barn close by. An excited resident of the village demanded that the firemen's efforts be centered on another house. Lieutenant English waved at his work and in a short time all danger of the fire spreading was over. During their brief examination as to how the fire started, the local men could learn little, except that one of the woman tenants admitted that there was a leaky oil stove in the house. All the residents of the house were away when the building was discovered on fire.

The Willimantic Exchange club held its weekly session and luncheon at the tea room Wednesday evening with a good attendance. The newly elected president, Sherman P. Hollister of Storrs was in charge. President Hollister was chosen delegate from the club to attend the national convention of Exchange clubs to be held in Chicago in September. The speaker of the evening was Walter Stemmons of Storrs, head of the publicity department at Connecticut Agricultural college. He delivered an excellent address on the farm relief question. President Hollister announced the personnel of the standing committees of the organization to serve from July 1st to January 1st, 1927 as follows: Entertainment, Allen B. Lincoln, chairman, George H. Gurley, Patrick J. Twomey, Frank P. Fenton; membership, Robert A. Case, chairman, William P. Maine, Samuel Chesbro, Arthur T. Kelley, Oliver L. Willard; commissary, Dixon Van Zandt; education, Linton B. Crandall; music, Edward H. Spring, chairman, Harold C. Lincoln, Edwin J. Donnelly, Dr. Robert C. White; auditors, George E. Elliott, George Stiles; publicity, Edwin J. Donnelly, chairman, John E. Carr; extension, Arthur E. Morrill, chairman and Samuel Chesbro.

State Policeman Fred Taylor, who for some time past has been attached to the Hartford barracks, has been transferred to the Stafford Springs barracks, the change taking place Wednesday. Yesterday Officer Taylor was on duty at the patrolmen's room in the local police station for the purpose of registering and examining motor vehicle license applicants. About as many persons appeared for that purpose as last week.

NEGRO IS SENATOR CURTIS' OPPONENT; DAVIS OUT AGAIN

TOPEKA, Kan., July 22 (AP)—A Negro will be the only opponent of Senator Charles Curtis, republican floor leader, who seeks party renomination for a third term in the August 2 Kansas primary. The Negro is Nick Chiles, editor of a weekly newspaper in Topeka.

Senator Curtis has been twice reelected.

The democratic contest for senatorial nomination will be between George McGill of Wichita, and Charles Stephens of Columbus, both lawyers.

Former Gov. Jonathan M. Davis will attempt to return to political power. Democratic voters will find on their ballot the name of the farmer who was arrested two hours before he vacated the governor's chair early in 1925, charged with selling pardons, and later cleared by three juries. They will choose between him and a lawyer, Donald Muir of Anthony.

Governor Paulen, republican, is opposed for renomination by Golden B. Davis, a farmer.

JEWETT CITY

BOROUGHITES TAKE TO WATER AT ASHLAND CASINO

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, July 22—P. W. Chase, superintendent at the Ashland Casino, is authority for the statement that more people were in the water at the new beach Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, also in the evenings, than at any one time since the park was built. Thursday afternoon by careful count, there were over 300 enjoying the water at the same moment. During the evenings of both hot days, 250 and better, came to find relief from the stifling heat of the streets and houses. Wednesday afternoon, the bathers made so little of a sensation, for, as thick as they could stand, like a crowd at a circus, they mounted the big pontoon float. First they tried to sink it, then to tip it over. Life Guard Chase, seeing that the big stage was sailing sort of cranky under its living weight of 200 bathers, not only on the deck, but lined up on the diving scaffolds, like midshipmen in the maintop, had to clear the whole thing. Thursday morning the hold was pumped clear, leaks caulked, and new sand ballast put in place, so that the afternoon bathers enjoyed themselves to the full. The crowded gallery on the observation balcony, and some got nearer than that, had a good time. There was plenty to see and smoked glasses were rented at a low figure. Everybody was in. Well, most everybody. And the new Rayon garments, made on the premises—Oh Boy!

Once more the silver flirted with the 90's, and not the low ones either, for shade readings Thursday were variously reported at from 94 to 98, variously enough at 10, the mercury stood at 52, with not a breath of air stirring. Except a fortunate few, the boroughites found sleeping pretty well out of the question, until between 3 and 4 o'clock Thursday morning, when a drop to 74 gave a bit of relief until sunrise.

Thursday in Jewett City showed a degree or two higher temperature than Wednesday, but with a slight falling off in humidity and a considerable movement of the air following mid-afternoon. Men employed on outside construction work, masons and painters, found it unsafe to work on ladders and stagings because of the burning heat. Bricklayers found a reflected glare from the heated walls, that, as the day wore on, affected their eyes, causing sharp pains and dizziness. Some of the mills closed during the afternoon.

Never since the half holiday system was established in the stores here, has that Thursday noon closing been as welcome as this week. From the proprietor to counter boy, the putting up of the shutters for the day was not a sad duty. At noon a thermometer placed on a delivery truck top, showed a reading of 128, in the full glare of the sun. It was not prudent to hold one's hand too long on the polished heath of the cushion.

Next to the heat, black bass fishing is claiming attention in this section, and the lure of the latter is not outclassed by the fervor of the former. Early in the week a party came down from one of the neighboring towns to the north, with the avowed purpose of cleaning out everything of any size in the bass line from Hopeville pond.

The collection of lures, spinners, spoons and plugs which they exhibited as they arrayed them on the stern seat of the boat, was enough to move any ordinary bass to tears. For two hours the pair whipped the pond from the bridge to the dam, and unlike the fishermen of Galilee, they cast on both sides of the boat, and landed one fair sized perch. A week ago a plug bait caught six that weighed 20 pounds and two that weighed 12 pounds. As the men were packing up to leave, a small barefoot boy appeared, attired for the movies. Straw hat with a hole in the top, blue shirt with no buttons, overalls with one leg rolled up. He had three live shiners in a tomato can. Seated on the end of the west abutment, he hooked one on, and threw in, not however until he had carefully spat upon his bait.

Zippo!—A two-pounder took the shiner with a rush; the boy grabbed the pole by the butt and ran down the road, with his fish training in dust. Griswold's bass are not only weighty but they are educated to diet changes.

Mrs. J. H. McLaughlin has joined her daughter, Miss Elizabeth McLaughlin, who is the guest of Prof. and Mrs. Frank L. Farrell of New Haven, at their summer cottage at Woodmont.

Mrs. Edward Secor with her mother, Mrs. VanVeagh of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been a guest at the Whalley home in Lisbon. It is seven years since Mrs. Secor has visited Lisbon.

Mrs. George B. Hatch of Green's Farms, Conn., is a guest at her brother's home in Sylvandale.

Mrs. Earl Montgomery has received word that her husband has been advanced to the commission of captain at Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont.

One of the carpenters at work on the Minski block on Main street Thursday morning in the blazing sun was overheard to shout to a fellow workman on the stage below: "Who is the man that prophesied a summerless summer, I'd like to see him."

Joe Foy has purchased from Annie Drobiak her fine residential property on Brown avenue.

Dahlia growers in and about the borough are getting the second hot and dry set-back this season. The plants are developing slowly and blossoming short stemmed on low stalks. Mrs. Fred LaFobre won the ribbon for early blooms; she had a dozen red unnamed, variety in full blossom in June. The Old Cluey Watson gardens on Main street, have a Dariene and a U. S. A. in flower.

Avoid Poorly Balanced Breakfasts

That's Where the Great Dietary Mistake is Made

IF YOU feel tired, hungry, "fidgety" hours before lunch, don't jump to the conclusion of poor health. Thousands have unenergetic mornings because they start the day with wrong breakfasts.

To feel right, you must have a well-balanced, complete breakfast ration. At most other meals—lunch and dinner—you get it. But breakfast is a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder, 58% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamines and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning. Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers you.

Get Quaker Oats today. Grocers have two kinds: Quick Quaker, which cooks in 3 to 5 minutes, and Quaker Oats.

UNION

There is to be a box social at the town hall next week. Each family is to bring boxes of lunch, enough for their own group. There will also be ice cream, cake and coffee at the supper hour, and during the evening. An entertainment will follow the supper, to be carried out by the summer cottagers, largely by those around Lake Mashapaug. This social is under the auspices of the Benevolent association and the committee is: Mrs. Alexander Magoun, Mrs. W. Y. Brown, Mrs. Susie Mc Cree, Miss Evangeline Lawson and Miss Eleanor Lindsay.

It is expected that the cook book which the L. B. A. has been preparing will be in the hands of the printer soon.

The boys and girls have been invited to meet at the home of Mrs. S. M. Lindsay at Lake Mashapaug, each Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock (standard time). Mrs. Lindsay will train the boys and girls in singing and it is expected that they will assist in the morning service next Sunday. The male choir will sing as usual.

The change of the morning service from 11 (standard time,) to 10 (standard time) seems to be quite satisfactory. There was a very good attendance at both church and Sunday school last Sunday. The pastor, Rev. H. A. Coolidge always has a sermon very much worth while. He now is teaching the boys and girls' class and his pupils seem to enjoy the lessons more than ever before. The Bible class is having a rare opportunity in that Dr. E. M. Lindsay is acting as teacher this season. Mrs. Lindsay is assisting in the primary Sunday school which is held in the library.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ryan and son, Donald of Southbridge were at the Walker homestead for the week end.

Miss Mary Bradway, who has been the guest of her brother in Boston, has returned and is with her mother, Mrs. George Bradway.

Mr. and Mrs. Thornton W. Burgess and two grandchildren, of Springfield, Mass., were callers Sunday, at the homes of H. H. Howard and Ralph Bradway. Doubtless the little children of Union would have been glad to see the genial gentleman who is the author of their Bedtime Stories.

Mrs. Mary Soule of Stafford is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Holcomb R. Howard.

Last Sunday, Mrs. Alva Sandy entertained Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Simons and son of Worcester, and Walter Simons and his mother, of Monson.

Louis Veigaska, who has been in a Hartford hospital for three weeks, has returned. He had his knee operated and treated, and it is so much improved that he is anxious to get to work again.

Mr. and Mrs. Mosier and Mr. and Mrs. Cohen of Springfield were guests of L. M. Reed Sunday.

A very enjoyable all day sewing meeting was held by the L. B. A. at the home of Mrs. George Heck, Thursday of last week. There was a very good attendance and sewing was done in preparation for the Old Home day sale. An entertaining literary program was carried out at the time of the afternoon roll call. Among the good things offered during the afternoon was an instructive address given by Mrs. Sara White Dimock, extension worker on the work of the farm bureau and what it can do for a community. This was followed by a discussion. Ice cream and cake were served by the hostess during the social hour.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Geer their daughter Miss Myra Geer and Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Geer, motored to South Killingly Sunday to take Miss Florence Whitaker home after spending two weeks with her aunt Mrs. Geer. Miss Bernice Whitaker returned home with them for a visit.

Rev. Stanley Sellick took for his subject Sunday, Building a Highway and for his junior sermon, Lessons from a Lead Pencil.

Rev. A. G. Littlefield's sermon Sunday was on Moses and the Promised Land. The C. E. meeting was omitted at both churches owing to the thunder showers.

In spite of the rain Thursday evening there was a good attendance at the social at the parlors of the Congregational church. Cake, fancy cookies and punch were served.

Harold Bruce of Hartford is spending some time at L. E. O. Taylor's.

The death of Mrs. Gillette, mother of Mrs. Hattie Stark Robinson, occurred at the home of her daughter early Wednesday morning. She was the eldest person in town, being 94 years old.

DANIELSON

GATHERING OF 5,000 FINNS AT PLAINFIELD SATURDAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 22.—From all southern New England and from sections of New York state, Finnish people to the number of 5,000 or 6,000 will gather in the western part of the town of Plainfield, on the banks of the Quinebaug river, Saturday for a two-days' outing and get-together. Finnish societies having memberships in the towns of Killingly, Brooklyn, Sterling, Plainfield, Canterbury, Hampton and other towns hereabouts have in charge the arrangements for this affair, which promises to be the greatest gathering of Finns eastern Connecticut has heretofore known.

The advanced guards of the hosts of visitors converging on Plainfield from the north, the south, the east and the west will begin to arrive Friday afternoon. Many of those who will come are to be guests of friends and relatives in the towns mentioned or in other eastern Connecticut towns.

This great gathering will provide a constant round of pleasure and special entertainment for the visitors. Games, dramatic events, musicales, dances and many other diversions are on the program of events. There will be something doing every minute. It will be late Sunday afternoon before all those friendly people begin to think of getting back to their own firesides and the various occupations that concern them in the process of making a living. The exodus will begin Sunday evening.

Within the last few years Finnish people have quietly and unostentatiously taken a prominent place in the activities of eastern Connecticut. Even now the fact is not sensed by many outside the Finnish race that there are two Finnish families, largely engaged in agriculture and poultry raising on farms within a radius of 25 miles of Danielson. They have taken over scores of what have been termed worn out and abandoned farms and by their willingness to work, backed by rugged constitutions, have demonstrated as a fallacy the hackneyed statement that "you can't get a living on a farm any more." The Finns not only get a living—and a good one—but have enough reserve to build new homes, new barns, large poultry properties and other structures. And they have good clothes and automobiles and nice bank accounts in reserve. They have got strayed from the old basic principle that labor constantly practiced will produce gratifying results, and have got accepted the modern fiasco that the "world owes me a living, and I should worry."

The Finns are a prudent and far-seeing people. They have their farmers' co-operative organizations right here in eastern Connecticut and various other such organizations, including some of a fraternal character. They are group buyers, get the low price, pay cash and are making good. Among themselves, they will have great cause for mutual congratulations Saturday and Sunday when they gather on the banks of the Quinebaug in the town of Plainfield for a brief respite from really arduous work and steady application thereto. They have deserved their holiday.

WARNING OF TREACHERY GIVEN BOTH PARTIES

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 22.—Knowledge that a sinister political influence, not representative of either the republican or democratic party in Killingly, as such, is actively at work on a scheme to fill the town offices this fall with men and women of its own selection, has come to the ears of party leaders. The plan is to stampede the caucuses and dictate all the nominations—with the slogan all others must go. Town committee members are aware of this and have ample time to start an effective back-fire. The caucuses are but two months away.

Mrs. Adelie Jolicoeur, 78, widow of Louis Jolicoeur is dead at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Clara Eastman in Plainfield. Mrs. Jolicoeur was a native of Canada. Her husband died three weeks ago.

That beast of Balaam, reincarnated, it would seem, from back in Bible times let out a clamorous bray in Danielson Thursday morning. It were as though some conniving soul had reached into the dim and distant past to drag from musty recesses of obscurity a long-eared ass, and had deviously set within his bowels an air compressor and other devices increasing his capacity for disturbance a thousand fold. Which is a way of stating that the new diaphone on the central fire station in Academy street had its first tryout and left varying and various impressions upon the populace.

When the battleship Maine was sunk in Havana harbor on a February night back in 1898, there immediately followed from American officials there a cablegram counseling that judgment be withheld as to the cause of the disaster until an investigation could be made. Later came the Spanish-American war.

There was such a wide-spread diversion of opinion in Danielson after Thursday's tests of the new alarm that another withhold judgment warning edema due to be issued. Complaints Thursday that the alarm is a fizzle and that it can't be heard around the block are hardly justified. Perhaps advance publicity led some people to expect an earthquake or something approximating a thunderstorm. It is fact that people working in stores in the business section did not even hear the tests being made, and it is equally true that the alarm was heard more than two miles from the station, and above the hub buh of noisy traffic. And there you are. Chief A. P. Woodward and Richard D. Banigan of the fire committee of the board of burgesses pulled in boxes in various sections of the borough to test out the new device. It responded every time. Some day—and there need be no hurry about it—a real alarm of fire will come in, and then the horn, for it is such, will go into action. It will be heard far and wide—make no mistake about that. This device is in use in scores of towns and cities and is proving eminently satisfactory.

Wilted humanity, stripped almost to the limit of decency, went through another scorching day in Danielson, Thursday. The Quinebaug mill, employing several hundred people, closed at noon on account of the excessive heat, the stores happened to be due for a half-holiday and closed at noon, releasing another considerable quota of people and there were others who just knocked off and called it a day after taking a look at an 8 a. m. temperature of 85 degrees. Others carried on in many callings, weakened and tired out though they were by the sapping of their energy in a heat wave that has endured almost a week.

In such periods of weather as that of the present week there are great numbers who like to hear about thermometer readings. Well, here's a few readings that may hold passing attention: At noon on the recording thermometer at Woodward's store the reading was 99 degrees. This was six degrees higher than for the same hour of Wednesday, which produced a maximum reading on this particular instrument—and during the afternoon—of 101 degrees. At noon at the Cloverdale store on a thermometer, that was under an awning, the record was 104, at Arrington's at the same time 110 and at Michael Dascoli's—on an instrument exposed to the sun, 122 degrees. On the Dascoli thermometer the mercury was plumb up against the top of the tube, so had no other place to go. Within buildings the occupants gradually melted away under temperatures ranging from 90 to 96 degrees.

Ice dealers, lacking normal business through the greater part of May and June were just about driven to exhaustion by the demands for deliveries made upon them. There was no half-holiday for them, but double and triple duty, and it should be said the public appreciated the service they rendered.

Out of the south shortly after the noon hour came a vagrant breeze that brought some slight relief from the intense heat, making it somewhat easier to bear than the stifling, sultry, dead heat of Wednesday afternoon.

Morris Kaminsky of 60 Phillips street, Boston, an employe of the Hutchins Motor Trucking line of that city, was injured here early Thursday morning and later was taken to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam.

Kaminsky was with a machine that was delivering goods to a grocery store in the Connecticut Mills Village section of Danielson. He had been riding all night and was tired when he arrived here in the early morning. Kaminsk is a driver for the trucking company, but another man with him was operating the machine with Kaminsky riding on the side when he was squeezed between the truck and a pole. Dr. F. P. Todd was called, gave the man attention and then advised that he be sent to the hospital. Kaminsky's injuries are not serious. He has a cut on one leg, several abrasions and was considerably jarred. It was said that he would not be required to remain at the hospital more than a day or two.

Three fine electric fans were supplied the Day Kimball hospital Thursday, through Danielson activities inspired through the efficient Woman's board of the institution. It was said here Thursday forenoon that arrangements had been completed looking to the installation of the fans by noon. One was to go in the men's ward, one in the wo man's ward and another where it would be most effective in bringing comfort to patients at the hospital.

Having easily disposed of the Pee Wees, 8 to 7 in a game at Wauregan, Wednesday evening, the St. James' school team will take on the Arctic Center, R. I., team of boys on Paco field Sunday. This will be a rubber game, as Arctic won from St. James' here on Memorial day, while St. James' recorded a victory at Arctic Center last Sunday afternoon. In Wednesday night's game the St. James' pitcher, Romeo Morin, of strikeout fame, added 15 more to his list of fanned opponents this season. In addition, he contributed a three-base hit to help along victory. A throw that struck the umpire at the plate let in the Pee Wees only two runs.

Moosup pond has been thronged with bathers the past two days and well into the evening. Some have said that the crowds in the water were as numerous as is to be seen ordinarily at beach resorts. Hundreds of others went to Old Killingly pond for a swim and into the rivers hereabouts went hundreds more. It has been a hectic week.

A number of Danielson members of the Putnam Country club were at Willimantic Thursday afternoon to participate in or watch the Willimantic-Putnam match.

Seeking relief from the heat, local owners of motor cars kept the machines rolling about until the wee small hours of Thursday morning.

Youngsters trooping around in bathing suits appeared to be about as cool as anyone in town Thursday.

Misses Mary Geer and Alice Monohan will visit at Sag Harbor today (Friday.)

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gartland of Bridgeport are visiting Mr. and Mrs. James Gartland of School street.

BUILDING & LOAN ASSN. REPORTS PROSPEROUS YEAR

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, July 22.—The Putnam Building and Loan association has issued its semi-annual statement through the secretary, Judge M. H. Geissler. In view of the business conditions in the textile section of New England it is more than gratifying. Judge Geissler's statement follows:

To the Shareholders of Putnam Building and Loan Association:

In connection with the issuance of the 21st semi-annual report of your association, it is again by pleasure to congratulate you upon the successful completion of another half-year's business. I wish to call your attention to the following facts:

During the six months last past shares have been withdrawn from this association, either for cash or by turning the same in part payment of loans to the amount of $14,913.85.

In spite of so large a withdrawal of shares, during this period our gross assets increased about $5,000 and we paid more than $10,000 of borrowed money, so that our net assets, the value of our shares increased more than $15,000 though the number of shares outstanding decreased from 3,883 to 861.

In our last series of shares (the 21st) we sold 305 shares, which is the largest number sold in any one series since the closing of so many of our manufacturing plants.

If we do not sell more shares we cannot increase our business.

Every dollar earned by our association belongs to our shareholders, and if our shareholders desire to have the association increase and make more profits, it is up to the shareholders to get busy and urge their friends to take shares and in that way help Putnam and help themselves.

John F. Reardon's commendation of Building and Loan associations as published in a recent issue of the Norwich Bulletin is very timely in view of the publication of this semi-annual statement of the Putnam institution.

The 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Donavan of Worcester, Mass., formerly well known residents of Putnam, was celebrated recently, they attending a nuptial mass at St. Joseph's church, at Jamesville. They were attended by their granddaughter, Miss Elsie Martin, as bridesmaid and a grandson, Edward Donavan of Putnam acted as best man.

Following the ceremonies, Mr. and Mrs. Donovan returned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Martin, with whom they live, where lunch was served. More than 40 friends and relatives were present, including sons, daughters and grandchildren. Mr. Donovan sang two songs, during the social hour which followed, "Farewell, My Own True Love" and "I Am Waiting My Darling for Thee" and sang them in a very pleasing manner. His son Dennis accompanied him on the piano.

Mr. Donovan was born in Wilmington, Delaware, February 14, 1855 and came to Putnam when but a young man and where he married his wife at St. Mary's church. Mrs. Donovan was born at St. Roch, Canada.

Among the relatives present at the golden wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Donovan and daughter, Miss Florence Donovan and son Edward Donovan, Mr. and Mrs. William Donovan and two sons, William and Harold, all of Putnam; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bellerose and son Julian, of Hartford; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Martin and three sons, Walter, Donald and Lawrence and daughter, Miss Elsie Martin, of Worcester; Mrs. Albert St. Onge, a sister of Mrs. Donovan, from Putnam.

Among the other guests were Mrs. Fred Girard, Mrs. Fred Gilman and Mrs. Estelle Delisle of Putnam.

From the relatives and friends, Mr. and Mrs. Donovan received many beautiful and useful gifts.

Mary Dellonsier, seven year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dellonsier of Railroad street and Helen Tetreault, the seven year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Tetreault of Oak street were operated upon for appendicitis yesterday at the Day Kimball hospital. This makes eight operations at the local hospital for appendicitis within the last ten days and most of the patients were children. All are reported as making a good recovery.

Mrs. Leon S. Walker of Grove street who recently underwent an operation at the Deaconness hospital in Boston, is reported by the surgeons as making a very good recovery, even better than had been expected.

Vincent Girardi, who conducts a pool room, was charged in the city court with operating a gaming house. In view of the fact that the man has a large family and a hard struggle to earn a livelihood, the court continued the case six months, with a warning against allowing any gambling again.

Frank Goyette of Providence, driver of the bakery truck which hit a telephone pole in Goodyear was fined $5 and costs in the city court for not having a Connecticut license.

Zeke Decatur was arrested for driving Julian Tattoon's automobile without permission of the owner, on his return from Rhode Island Tuesday night. On examination, the car showed that it had evidently been in a smashup of some kind, and he appeared to be very much under the influence of liquor. Decatur was so evidently intoxicated that the officer arresting him did not think that he needed very close watching, and he suddenly made a quick getaway and has not been seen in Putnam since.

Putnam, like the other New England cities, is sweltering through the hottest weather of the season. One hot day when the thermometer went up to 93 and 95 was followed by a hot night and even hotter day. At 9 o'clock in the morning the mercury registered from three to five degrees higher than yesterday morning. There has been little or no breeze or showers to temper the heat.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Thompson of Sunnyside avenue and Mr. and Mrs. Ira Pray of North Grosvenordale left this morning on a two weeks' automobile trip which will take them as far west as Niagara Falls and over into Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl T. Kent and two children of Meriden, have been the guests of Mr. Kent's aunt, Mrs. Mary Bishop.

Miss Lucy Johnson of Montreal, is spending two weeks with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Chadwick of Center street.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Bonneville and Miss Cecelia Bonneville are making a two weeks' trip to Quebec, Montreal and other points in Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Mellor, Jr., and two children have been with Mr. Mellor's parents at their summer home at Mattapoisett, Mass.

FATTENING METHODS FOR POULTRY GIVEN

At this time of the year when poultrymen are culling out their laying flocks and selling off these culls for meat and others are getting ready to turn off cockerels, there are numerous inquiries about fattening poultry and finishing off birds for market. There are two methods which you may use in conditioning poultry, one called the "pen method" and the other the "crate fattening."

Pen fattening consists of confining a number of birds in a small pen and feeding them a good fattening ration until they are ready for market. This system places a large number of birds together, restricts exercise, requires a minimum of labor, and is, therefore, the cheapest way to fatten poultry. As a rule a wet mash is fed, composed of a large portion of corn meal, supplemented by cracked corn and wheat. If possible the ration should be varied during the last week, feeding mash with skim milk or buttermilk and confining the birds as much as possible. It is well to supply all the accessories to the ration, including grit, shell and charcoal, as with other classes of stock and to furnish a small amount of succulence and animal feed by way of variety. The pen should be free from litter and all unnecessary equipment. Clean pens and feeding troughs are absolutely essential. This is the common method of fattening cockerels and fowls and is often applied to the finishing of broilers. It is the method in general use on the farm in contrast to the methods employed in fattening stations.

The crate method of fattening is used largely by commercial poultry packing houses but may be well adapted to use on the farm where a large number of birds are to be prepared for market. A practical homemade coop for a small number of birds may be made 6 feet long and divided into four equal compartments of 18 inches square and 18 inches high. The frame may be made of 2-inch by 2-inch material and the front, top and back covered with 3-8 inch by 1 1-2 inch slats. The slats are placed 2 inches apart in front and 1 1-2 inches apart on top and back. The bottom is covered with either slats 1 inch apart or 1-2 inch mesh hardware cloth. Galvanized pans are placed under each section to collect the droppings and feathers. One slat in the front may be made removable to facilitate taking the birds out and putting them in. Crates made in this way may be stacked on top of each other in two or three tiers to accommodate a larger number of birds. A V-shaped trough, supported by a 1-inch bracket at each end of the crate, extends along the front. The crates should be located in a semidark, but well ventilated room. If such a place is not available, good results can be secured weather permitting, by placing the crates on horses under shade trees and covering them with one thickness of burlap. The covering will permit free circulation of air and keep the birds quiet.

Commercial steel batteries, such as are used in fattening plants, may be purchased. These batteries are composed of four tiers of coops, each tier containing two coops. Two such batteries are usually placed back to back combining a total of 16 coops. These are mounted on a steel frame which rolls on four wheels, two double-plow wheels in front and two wheels connected by a bar in the rear. V-shape troughs for each tier are supported by hooks at the end of the battery, so that they are easily removable.

PROFIT IN LOW SPOTS

Farmers who have marshy places on their land that they contemplate draining should first consider the possibilities of these low spots as places for producing muskrats, growing fish, or attracting waterfowl. The Biological Survey of the United States department of agriculture has information on this subject and will be glad to advise interested persons about the possibilities of profit in the increase of wild life.

FIGHT LATE BLIGHT EARLY

When cool moist weather occurs in July and August, late blight of potatoes often causes great losses, particularly in the Northern states. The disease spreads very rapidly in favorable weather, killing the plants in a few days. Late blight can be controlled by thoroughly spraying the plants with 4-4-50 Bordeaux mixture, beginning when the disease is first seen. Repeat the spraying every 10 to 14 days in dry weather and every 7 to 10 days in moist weather.

HINTS FOR HOT HOGS

A hog will find shade in hot weather if he can, but if the shady place he finds is also hot he does not seem to realize it, and will stay there and die from overheating. For this reason it is best to close any buildings that are not cool, forcing the hogs to get shade elsewhere. The natural shade from trees is preferable to any other. If the trees are not available, a good artificial shade should be made by setting posts and building a cheap framework about four feet from the ground, covering it with brush, hay, or straw. A shade of this kind is better than one made wet by watering with a hose or bucket. This will serve the double purpose of cooling the air and settling the dust.

FLOORS IMPORTANT TO HENS

Poultry houses may be built with or without floors so long as they are dry. Damp floors make damp litter, and dampness is fatal to both fowls and chicks. If the house is on dry sandy soil, a dirt floor is usually quite satisfactory, but as a rule it is more damp than board or cement floors. Dirt floors need to be scraped down to the soil and fresh gravel or sand put in once a year to keep them sanitary.

If board floors are used see that they are both tight and smooth so as to make them dry and easy to clean. Place them 8 or 10 inches from the ground if possible, to allow a circulation of air and in order that the spaces may not be a refuge for rats.

Cement floors, especially for large houses, are quite satisfactory as they keep out rats, last much longer than board floors and are easy to clean.

The floor of every poultry house, whether of dirt, boards, or cement, should be kept covered with a litter from 2 to 6 inches deep at all times. Oat, wheat, or rye straw makes the best litter, but if it can not be obtained, sawdust, chaff, dry leaves, or pine needles may be used. As soon as the litter becomes damp or badly soiled, take it out and replace with dry litter.

COAL RATES

During the hard coal strike of last winter there was a special transportation rate granted on semi-bituminous coal from the West Virginia coal fields which meant much relief for the coal consumers in this part of the country in getting substitutes. That rate was for a limited period and has expired, but there is a demand for its return. It is urged in the interest of the burners of low volatile coal so that they may not be restricted to the purchase of higher priced fuel.

Whether the rate is returned rests with the interstate commerce commission. When it is reestablished, if such action is taken, also rests with that commission. In urging an early determination of the petition it is set forth that in justice to the coal consumer he should have a chance to know in advance whether he can depend upon getting such fuel as he wants or whether he should lay in his supply of other fuel at increased prices.

Pennsylvania is not a little concerned over the petition for lower rates on West Virginia coal. It sees where to the hard coal on which that state has a monopoly is not bought the low volatile of other fields will enter into competition with its coal of that character. And Pennsylvania doesn't take kindly to the idea of losing any of the coal trade.

Perhaps there might be more sympathy with the Pennsylvania attitude were it not for the fact that the coal consumer has come to realise that he is long been squeezed by that state, which in addition to the prices and tolls that originate there, there is the state tax on the fuel which all consumers are obliged to pay.

It is expected that the interstate commerce commission will get down to the bedrock of facts in connection with the petition for the rate change. It is a complicated matter at best but in justice to all concerned it should get an early hearing and an early decision. Because this is the season when little coal is being consumed doesn't warrant unjustified delays.

MARRIAGES AT SEA

Up to within a short time there has been no question but what the captain of a ship was within his rights in performing a wedding ceremony on the high seas. It has been regarded as part of those duties which he had the authority to perform provided he was willing. If it hasn't been so set forth by legal enactment it has prevailed for so long that it has become established through custom.

When however the shipping board asks the commanders of its vessels to refuse to perform such ceremonies it brings the question up for new consideration for even though a captain may be within his rights in performing such a ceremony it is not likely that they will go contrary to request or orders when the shipping board indicates its position.

Marriages at sea are not numerous in view of the short time that is required in crossing the ocean, the same reason does not exist that did during the periods of long voyages. But the question is whether the rights of a captain can be expanded or curtailed in accordance with the views of the particular line of vessels he sails for, or whether custom has given the captain a right, or he automatically acquires it when becoming commander of a vessel, which cannot be taken away.

Probably there are captains who are more inclined to officiate on such occasions than others. There can be marrying captains quite as much as marrying parsons and it would appear to be quite as much justified in one case as another.

The request of the shipping board probably means that some research work will be done to learn on what the authority of captains to perform marriages rests but it must be recognized that whatever the result there can be no thought of those marriages performed on the high seas being nullified. They have all been performed in good faith. There has been no effort to evade laws and so far as known the number is not large, but large or small the situation remains the same for long existing custom was respected quite as much as if there was compliance with the legal requirements on land.

GROW OUR OWN

Back in April the announcement was made in London that if the price of rubber sagged below 42 cents a pound during the following three months there would be restrictions established so that only 80 per cent of "normal" production would be allowed to go into export during the three months commencing with August. Interest is thus centered on what the decision is going to be for the quarter about to close.

According to H. S. Firestone, who has just returned from Europe, we can anticipate that London will find there is need for restrictions and as the result the price will be boosted above the 42 cents, an increase of 13 cents over the minimum of the Stevenson plan, through the curtailing of the amount exported. How soon the effect of that advance will be felt will depend upon the stock of rubber in this country. No doubt it will come soon enough.

The whole thing demonstrates anew the desirability of developing our own rubber plantations that we may get away from the grip of the British rubber monopoly. Just as long as conditions remain as they are we can anticipate the boosting of raw rubber prices when they feel like it rather than under the law of supply and demand.

There have been many instances in which we have relied upon other markets for our supplies only to find out that we were making a mistake in not developing our own resources and establishing our independence. We have not moved as rapidly in regard to rubber as we did concerning dyes and chemicals. But we are learning our lesson. Each year witnesses an increase in the amount of American owned rubber plantations. There is however much opportunity for additional development for rubber is bound to be used in steadily increasing quantities.

With rubber prices reasonably advanced when conditions of supply warranted there could be no objection but there's no telling when there will be abnormal jumps because it is possible to make the squeeze and because production and export are curtailed. We should come nearer to producing our own.

ANOTHER CANOE TRAGEDY

Distressing is that report which comes from Lindsay, Ont., telling of the drowning of 11 boys out of a party of 15 who were camping at a lake. It was another one of those cases where the grave mistake was made. Out on the lake, under the skillful guidance of their leader and his assistant, the canoe was upset in a squall and only four of them were able to cling to the overturned craft until it drifted ashore.

An outstanding case of heroism was that of the leader who helpless to give assistance in any other manner gave up his place on the overturned canoe, slid into the water and disappeared. It was a terrible place in which to place a leader for frantic though he unquestionably was it was impossible to do anything.

What must be regarded as the vital mistake in that affair was the entrusting of those 15 lives to a cockleshell of a craft. Skillful as they may have been in its operation there was inadequate protection against that very squall which developed. Whether the boys could swim is not known. The indications would seem to be that they couldn't, or else they were too far from shore to undertake to make it, for reliance seemed to be placed in clinging to the upset craft instead of trying to right it or swimming to safety.

The canoe is responsible for too many deaths every season. It has been so for years and each season shows little or no betterment. That Canadian case of wholesale drownings should have been prevented through insistence upon the use of a craft that would not capsize under ordinary conditions, and while nothing might have been known about it it would have been far better had the camp director banned the canoe at that camp and saved 11 than to have given up his life as he did for another.

CAMPS FOR TOURISTS

Tourists' camps have undergone rapid and extensive development. They have been established with the idea of attracting those who are touring the country and giving them chances to camp under simple or elaborate conditions as they may desire.

But such camps have involved no little expense when attempts have been made to provide running water, gas, baths and other comforts, and it is not surprising that communities have felt that it did not develop upon them to stand such expenses and enter into competition with those taxpayers who are in the business of providing lodgings and renting garages. The feeling has been increasing that such camps should be undertaken as enterprises by private capital and maintained as such.

Some time ago the abuse of privileges in the tourist camps in Florida, where many spent the winter to the annoyance of communities resulted in the camps being eliminated or restricted, and now in Indiana the state board of health is getting after them because of the nuisances which they have become to communities.

There is such a thing as overdoing a good thing, and there are those who are only too willing to ride a free horse to death. This has resulted in the belief that the provision of accommodations for tourists should be on a strictly business basis, and there are reasons for believing that most tourists will be in hearty accord therewith.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is summer all right in spots.

Hot enough? Well that makes it unanimous.

Now for the annual contest to see whose thermometer can tell the worst story.

Interest now centers on what effect the opening of dog days will have.

It is almost possible to hear the corn and cucumbers stretch and grow these hot nights.

The man in the corner says: Reports of heavy snowfalls are aggravating just now.

From the way it has been going down France may find it advisable to tie a float on the franc.

Some people boast as much about their thermometer as others do about their radio or automobile.

According to estimates there will be 116,000,000 people in this country by 1950. How many airplanes will there be by that time?

It isn't believed that France really wants a Napoleon but if it finds it necessary to take such a step it is going to be particular about the selection.

KEEPING THINGS UP

A young man escorted his mother to a table not too far from the door of a small family restaurant.

"A lovely little place, Jim," approved his mother, gazing about her. "Hasn't been here long, has it?"

"Opened last month, I think. Strictly home cooking, too. Belongs to a widow with one daughter. That's Mrs. Clark herself—at the cashier's desk. Her daughter's over there, seating that family of youngsters."

The young man's mother glanced humorously at him. "How do you happen to know so much about it, Jim?" she asked, taking up the menu.

"Oh, I was in here every day while you were out to Aunt Milly's last month," he explained carelessly. "Nice people, too. The mother does most of the cooking herself. And her daughter takes care of the accounts and seats people."

"Must be very capable," commended his mother.

Her son only frowned. "There's something radically wrong about this place," he stated tersely. "They'll never succeed. Look, mother—that's the third patron who turned away since we came in. Once a fellow samples their cooking he'll come regularly, but it seems deuced hard for them to draw any new patrons."

"I wonder why," mused his mother, who was old fashioned and therefore not up on matters of business psychology.

"Well," explained the young man who was quite a successful salesman, "they just don't know how to go about it. You see," as the waitress arrived with a steaming order, "nowadays you not only have to produce the goods, you have to create a demand, too. Take that girl now." His eyes strayed worriedly in the direction of the proprietress's daughter. "She looks scared to death. She's really pretty, but nobody'd ever notice it as long as she keeps that discouraged frown on her face. I know they've had a hard fight But that face won't draw customers."

"Why, Jim!" The old-fashioned lady sounded quite indignant. "People would sympathize with them all the more if they knew that."

"Yes, they'd sympathize," commented her son dryly. "But they wouldn't buy, except a few soft souls like yourself, mother. You've got to radiate success if you want to draw the crowd. And that girl looks like she's going to cry any minute."

The young man set down his cup of coffee with a little slam. It annoyed him beyond all patience—he who was so successful himself. He liked to see people make good.

"D'you know what, mother?" he asked, leaning across the small table. "I'm going to write a note to that girl. I'm going to tell her to tie her worries to that stone weight she carries in her voice and float 'em down old Lake Mich. And for the love of Lulu to put on a grin. I'll sign it 'One of your patrons.'"

It was two months later that the young salesman, who had been out of town on business, dropped in alone and found the restaurant merrily crowded. A deep red rose in a slender vase greeted him as he sat down. The young man was gratified to note that all the tables held nodding roses, while a great bowl of them glowed on the cashier's desk.

A young woman in trim white, with that radiant something about her that made people turn twice to look, came quickly toward him.

"How do you do?" she greeted, smiling warmly. "Mother and I were wondering why you didn't come any more. Glad to have you back." Her tone held a charming though businesslike welcome.

"I was out of town," laughed the young man. "I hardly know the place, Miss Clark. Looks great."

She blushed at the admiration in his eyes. "Oh, a letter did that! Doesn't seem possible, does it?" as she smiled. "But it is. I only wish I knew the wonderfully kind person who sent it. Would you like to see it?"

"I suppose one of these success cranks sent it," he smiled. "Tell me—had your dinner yet? No? well, suppose you quit flitting around here a bit and eat with me. You will? That's fine. Now you can tell me what it feels like to be a success!"—Chicago News.

TOO MUCH BELLY-ACHE

(Fairfield (Ia.) Daily Ledger)

The trouble with Iowa is too much belly-ache. Iowans have been told so much that everything under the sun is wrong with the state that we have come to believe it and are dwelling so much upon our woes that we are overlooking the bounteous blessings that are ours.

What ails Iowa is so little a matter in comparison with what the state has that we ought to be ashamed of vaunting it.

Without a doubt there are matters in Iowa that could be bettered. Anybody without half trying can find enough imperfections in people and imperfections in people and possessions in a half hour to make him unhappy for a week. All that is necessary is to dwell upon the faults and overlook the good qualities. A knot in a board spoils our enjoyment of the whole house, a dent in the Rolls Royce cancels our happiness in its appearance and a minor fault in a friend grieves us so much that we lose the joys of his companionship.

Iowa has confirmed herself in that habit until she thinks she is "put upon" by fate. Her political doctors have encouraged it in her so as to be sure always of a paying patient. But Iowa is not fatally stricken. She merely has magnified the belly-ache into a malady.

HERE IS A BIT OF SERMONIZING

(Chicago News)

It is fairly certain that girls of today are not likely to be edified by unsolicited preachments on conduct.

They possess and enjoy a freedom such as was never known by girls before and in consequence life to them is unprecedentedly rich and colorful. Like Mother Eve, they have eaten of the fruit of the tree of knowledge and they have found it good. And they glory in their youth. To take away any part of their new freedom, to hedge them about with inhibitions, would be, perhaps, "as if a rose should shut and be a bud again."

Yet young girls who love freedom and scorn convention, who find adventure at the corner of every street, where new admirers view their charms appreciatively, greatly as they detest old fogyism, desire to retain the respect of the friends of their own choosing. If daring mood fellowship on their part is misinterpreted by young men, too many of whom are capable of thinking evil thoughts on relatively slight provocation, pleasure and freedom loving girls may be sure that when discourtesy results those same young men will try to throw the blame upon the victims, to shield their own indecency.

The shocking case that has lately claimed the attention of a court in Syracuse, N. Y., embracing ETAOIN UNUU Sycamore, Ill., and that resulted in the sentencing of three young men to 13 years imprisonment, serves to show what sort of wickedness may be in her companion's mind when a decent but thoughtless girl permits liberties that tend to break down the essential barriers of maidenly conduct. And, indeed, it is not enough, in this wicked world, for a girl to be pure-minded in order that she may avoid inspiring evil thoughts in impure minds.

Prosing at time seems to be a duty. This is one of the times.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Sir Henry L. Drayton, who is acting as premier of Canada while Prime Minister Meighen is conducting his political campaign, has long been recognized as one of the ablest public administrators in the dominion. Probably his greatest reputation was made as head of the Canadian railway commission, which has powers like unto those of the Interstate Commerce commission or the United States, except that they include telephone and telegraph rates as well as railway passenger and freight tariffs. In 1917 the administrative abilities of Sir Henry were further recognized in his appointment as controller of the production and distribution of electrical energy in the province of Ontario. Sir Henry was born at Kingston, Ont., in 1868, and was educated in England and in Canada. He began the practice of law in Toronto in 1891 and speedily advanced to the front rank of his profession.

BREAK OF MORNING

Sound the invisible trumpets. In circuit vast
The passive earth like scene of dream is set.
The small birds flit and sing, their dark hours past
And their green sojournings with dewdrops wet.

With giant boughs outspread, the oaks on high
Brood on in slumbrous quiet in the air,
Sole in remote inane of vacant sky
Paling Arcturus sparkles wildly fair.

Sound the invisible trumps. The waters weep.
A stealing wind breathes in the meads, is gone.
Into their earthen burrows the wild things creep;
Cockcrow to thinning cockcrow echoes on.

Avert thine eyes, sleep-ridden face! Nor scan
Those seraph hosts that in divine array
Girdle the mortal-masked empyrean;
Their sovran beauty is this break of day.

Theirs is the music men call Silence here;
What wonder grief distorts thy burning eyes?
Turn to thy pillow again—in love and fear;
Not thine to see the Son of Morning rise.

HOW WOULD YOU GO?

From Norwich to Bristol?

Bristol is located in Hartford county, west of New Britain and southwest of Hartford.

It is possible to reach it by auto by going to Hartford, via Colchester, a distance of 40 miles, then by way of Farmington avenue to Plainville, another 24 miles, and then west four miles to Bristol, a total of 68 miles.

Another route is by way of Gardner lake and East Haddam to Middletown, a distance of 58 miles or it is also possible to reach Middletown by way of Colchester, Marlboro and East Hampton with about the same mileage as through East Haddam and thence by way of Berlin, New Britain and Plainville to Bristol, an additional 21.7 miles, or a total of 59.7 miles.

Both routes mean good roads, the shorter route involving the traffic of Hartford, while by the other route there are the two cities of Middletown and New Britain.

Stories That Recall Others

Not Allowed

A teacher in a Sunday school asked her class:

"Do you know where the little boys go who swim on Sunday?"

"Yes'm," replied one of the boys. "On the side of the river what's got a lot of trees and bushes. But you can't no-girls ain't allowed."

One Way to Find Out

To return from a shopping trip to find her husband's coat hung over the back of a chair with a note pinned on it saying that he was returning home sick and if he fell unconscious to notify his wife to pay up the insurance was startling enough, but to go up stairs and find him stretched out on the bed was too much for a newly married wife.

She picked up a pin and vigorously prodded the reclining husband, who soon proved that he hadn't at least expired by exclaiming, "Darn it, I'm not unconscious yet."

Little Talks on Thrift

THRIFT IS EDUCATIONAL

The importance of thrift as an element in education is rapidly receiving more and more recognition. This fact was emphasized recently when a national thrift conference convened in Philadelphia for the purpose of studying the progress that has been made in the teachings of thrift in the schools since the project was inaugurated in 1918.

It is doubtful if any educational innovation has made a rapid progress within the same period of time as has this movement. Reports were submitted showing a growing interest in this work in hundreds of cities in all parts of the United States. As the result of a survey, Arthur H. Chamberlain, educational director of the American Society for Thrift, who presided at the conference, estimated that during the school year just closed 8,000,000 students studied thrift in some form. The total amount of school savings bank balances was estimated at upwards of $30,000,000 with 4,000,000 depositors and deposits for the school year approximating $19,000,000.

One of the outstanding viewpoints expressed as the consensus of opinion among the confreres was that thrift should be studied not from the standpoint of the mere saving of money but as the science of personal management and efficiency, embracing the correct uses of money and the conservation of time, health and energy.

The value of beginning the study of thrift in the elementary grades also was stressed in order that those who leave school before they reach the junior or senior high schools will have had some instructions in thrift.

The value of these activities to the nation are beyond calculation. The $30,000,000 in school savings bank deposits does not begin to tell the story. The real worth lies not in the pennies saved during school days but in characters that are built and in the practical lessons of life that are learned.

No more important movement is now in progress in the United States than the development of thrift teachings in the schools!—American Society for Thrift.

Simple Remedy For Bad Stomach Gives Quick Relief

No need of Strong Medicines or Diet—Famous but Simple Old English Recipe Keeps Stomach in Fine Condition, Banishes After-Eating Distress

If you are a victim of Stomach Troubles—Gas, Sourness, Pain or Bloating—you may have quick and certain relief by following this simple advice.

Don't take strong medicines, artificial digestants or pull down your system by following unnecessary starvation diets.

Never hurry your meal or overeat of anything, but within reason most folks may eat what they like—if they will keep their stomach sweet, clean and active and free from the souring acids that hinder or paralyze the work of digestion.

And the best and easiest way to do this is to follow every meal with a small amount of pure Bisurated Magnesia—a pleasant, harmless and inexpensive form of Magnesia that promptly neutralizes acidity and keeps your stomach sweet and clean.

A week's trial of Bisurated Magnesia, which may be obtained from any druggist for only a few cents, will easily convince you of the great value of this old English recipe.

Be sure and get BISURATED Magnesia—not a laxative.

The firemen were called out at 1.07 o'clock Thursday afternoon for a fire in the planking at Preston bridge. It was necessary for the firemen to pull up several of the planks on the bridge in order to extinguish the blaze. LOCAL PLANTS CLOSE BECAUSE OF HEAT

Although the humidity was not as great Thursday as on the day preceding the heat was more intense and the mercury soared to the highest mark of the year, several thermometers indicating an even 100 during the early afternoon.

The temperature did not drop below 75 throughout Wednesday night and the mercury began its upward climb with the arrival of the sun. At 8 o'clock the mercury had reached 80 degrees and at noon had climbed 21 degrees, reaching 101, or 17 points higher than at the same hour on Wednesday. Before 3 o'clock in the afternoon some thermometers gave readings as high as 103.

After sunset the mercury dropped slightly and about 10 o'clock a light breeze made it more comfortable than at any time during the past 48 hours.

Thursday afternoon was a half holiday for the clerks in local stores and they quickly left the city for cooler climes, either at the beaches along the Connecticut and Rhode Island shores or at the several lakes and ponds in eastern Connecticut.

The intense heat brought about a general closing down of mills in this city, some closing in the morning and the majority closing at noon, allowing thousands of employes to leave the city and avoid the heat.

At Taftville the Ponemah mill closed at noon and the plants of the American Woolen company located in the town and city suspended operations in various departments, as did the U. S. Finishing company. The Crescent Fire Arms company stopped work at noon and the Richmond Radiator company suspended work, this being the second day this closing has taken place at the plant this summer. The J. B. Martin plant ceased work at noon and the International Silver company shut down all day.

Business men in the city allowed their office forces to take the day off.

HUSBAND HELPLESS TO SAVE DROWNING WIFE

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, July 22—Mrs. Victoria Daviditsak, 39, of Brown avenue, was drowned in Aspinook pond at 7:30 o'clock tonight. She had gone in bathing with her husband and got beyond her depth. She could not swim. Her husband's cries for help attracted John Potts, Jr., who rescued the man, as in his frantic efforts to save his wife he had gone down twice. Potts dove again and again for the woman as did Tony LaFlamme, the latter finally locating the body. LaFlamme and Frank Field brought the body to the surface after an hour's search. The river bank was crowded with people.

The drowned woman leaves twin daughters about five years of age. Medical Examiner C. H. Jennings was summoned and gave permission for the body to be removed to her home. Mr. and Mrs. Daviditsak were some distance from other people who had gone to the river to escape the terrific heat. Potts at the time he rescued the man was unaware that the woman had gone down and it was too late to save her when he learned that fact from her husband, after bringing him to shore.

STRIKING EMPLOYEES CAUSED TROUBLE AT COLCHESTER

Sergeant Clifford Gorgas and five members of the state police from the Groton barracks were summoned to Colchester Thursday when trouble broke out between the strikers and strike-breakers at the M. Levine Cloak & Suit Co., Inc., plant in that village. One arrest was made, Sam Singer, one of the strikers, being taken into custody by the officers.

The strike at the Colchester plant began on July 1st when 12 employes of the company went on strike in sympathy with the general strike in that industry throughout the country. Some days ago the company brought strike-breakers to the town and began operations in the plant, about a half dozen tailors going to work in the factory. Trouble broke out in mild form at that time but nothing serious resulted until Thursday, when the state police were asked to lend assistance. The charges against Singer was breach of the peace.

There was an entertaining programme of exercises and a fine dinner was provided for the veterans. WOULD LOWER AGE LIMIT FOR DRIVERS

The lowering of the minimum age limit for Connecticut operators of motor vehicles to admit carefully examined applicants 15 years old "would be more fair" than the present law which draws the line at 16 years and bars younger operators regularly licensed by other states, says the current issue of the state motor vehicle department bulletin.

"It has perhaps not been clear that the motor vehicles commissioner's necessary interpretation on this matter is that in cases where licensed operators of another state who are under 16 are in the state, they are without authorization either under the reciprocity agreement, tacit or stated, or under any direct law," says the publication. "Any person operating under such circumstances is operating illegally."

A recent case apparently involving these principles and which may go to a higher court as a test is cited. "In that case, says the bulletin" a person under 16 years old authorized to drive by another state actually operated a Connecticut registered car in Connecticut, and relying on the authorization of the other state was arrested. The Connecticut department on complaint called upon the department of the other state to suspend the operator's license of the person there, which was promptly done, and thereafter Connecticut suspended the right to operate.

"This particular phase of the law and of the situation gives the state authorities a lot of trouble," says the bulletin. "In adjoining states the age limit at which one may qualify as an operator is almost uniformly 16 while in Connecticut it is 18. But Connecticut has an enabling clause in the law whereby anyone over 16 may operate while accompanied by a licensed operator so seated in the car as to be able to control it, and while under instruction.

"Under this enabling clause it has been the practice to have persons over 16 to operate indefinitely when accompanied. The matter of instruction has been lost sight of. Should it become necessary to interpret that law, it appears reasonable to expect that a high court would say that the term 'under instruction' means something. Probably if the case in which the interpretation is asked has a time element, the court may limit a reasonable time during which instruction might probably be more than a name. The law and its adaptation as it now exists is not entirely practical until such an interpretation is had, and should one be made its enforcement would probably be oppressive, and in many cases work a hardship."

"Interstate Automobiling" is the subject of the bulletin for July and it writes out that the reciprocal relations between states control the Connecticut operator who drives beyond the boundary lines of this state, and vice-versa. The bulletin says:

It has often been stated by students of the subject that one of the principal factors which makes for the popularity of the automobile as a transportation vehicle is unlimited "cruising radius." There seems to be no boundary which it cannot cross. It is even becoming an international vehicle to such an extent that travel literature sent out to attract tourists now invariably sets forth the attractions of highways and the practicability of the use of motors upon them.

So it is a common, in fact almost a daily, experience for a large proportion of the motors which are owned by residents of one state to cross boundaries and travel about in another.

Where there is a small state, territorially speaking, bounded by large states, as for example, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey or Maryland, there is more than the average going back and forth. In the middle and far west where the states are so much larger the driving citizens of one state are less apt to run into a neighboring state. So the problem of interstate relationship naturally arose in the small eastern states long ago and has developed from year to year until now there is co-operative administration in at least 12 of these for the accomplishment of several necessary interstate purposes.

It may be interesting to comment on Connecticut by itself. The state is approximately 100 miles from east to west, and 75 miles from north to south. It at once appears that anyone living in its center would have to travel by automobile in one direction only three hours at most before interstate comity would become a controlling regulatory factor.

The basic law on this subject is that a motor vehicle which is legally and properly registered in one state may travel in another without taking out the registration of that state for a period of time set by the law of the state visited. The laws of the various states differ in the time of allowance, but in interpretation any person having a car registered in one state may usually travel in another without taking out the registration of that state only for the period allowed by his home state. Connecticut allows foreign owned cars only 15 days and that in most instances will be the controlling time in the allowance for Connecticut cars in another state. Therefore, it is only safe to advise Connecticut registrants that 15 days will probably be the limit for each Connecticut registration in another state. This reciprocity law is founded on reason. While it may not always be stated, the intent of the imposition of all registration fees is, or ought to be, to secure for the state where this tax is imposed compensation for wear and tear on highways. So there has to be a limit to free use. The limit set by Connecticut, 15 days, is the lowest in the Union, and is below the average, but apparently seemed necessary to the lawmakers.

Connecticut provides the through highways between the two great cities of Boston and New York. These are the natural courses by motor vehicles carrying freight and express. This is a business proposition. Non-residents are passing through with merchandise, using the roadways for their own profit and they should contribute to their upkeep. The state also attracts a large number of out of state summer visitors to its shore and mountain resorts, many of whom stay for longer periods than appears fair unless they make payment for road usage. It is properly arguable that the summer visitor brings compensation by purchases of local merchandise, by payment of rent and by contribution to the business of the community, where he sojourns. This is not so in cases where the vehicle is being used in connection with the business conducted for profit.

YANTIC WINS CLOSE GAME FROM WARRIORS IN FAST TWILIGHT CONTEST

In one of the closest and best played games of the season, Yantic won from the Warriors, Thursday evening at the Duwell Field, 2 to 0.

The two rival pitchers, Jones for Yantic and Couture for the Warriors were both in fine form, the former allowing but two hits, while Yantic garnered five safeties off the latter's delivery. Jones fanned seven batters and Couture sent four back to the bench via the strikeout route.

Up to the end of the fifth inning, neither team has scored a run, and it looked as if the two nines would battle to a scoreless tie. Up to this time, each twirler allowed but two scattered hits, and it was a break of the game in the first half of the sixth which decided the outcome.

Normandin led off in the sixth with a single between second and third. After Hoxie fanned, Jerry Lamphere hit a grounder to Hamil, who fumbled the ball and then threw wild to first, permitting Normandin to go to third, and Lamphere to second. Gil Jones then proceeded to win his own game with a sharp single to center, scoring Normandin, and sending Lamphere to third. Sweet flied out to center. Jones went to second on a wild pitch, and Hamil walked filling the bases. Couture then hit McCall and forced over Lamphere with the second run. H. Lamphere closed the inning with a fly to center.

The Warriors first chance to score came in the second when Marchand doubled to center with two out. He died there however as Couture flied out to McCall. In the fourth, with one out, Bill Burns singled but was forced at second a moment later by Jab Burns.

Normandin played a nice game at short for Yantic. While Jackson was the hinging light in the Warriors lineup, making five difficult putouts in centerfield.

Tonight's Game

Although the game last night between Yantic and the Warriors was one of the snappiest and best played games in the league thus far, the intense heat undoubtedly kept many of the fans away. Cooler weather however is promised for tonight, so a large crowd should be on hand to see the E. C. P. Co., who are leading the league, and the Bon Tons get into action.

Anyone who has seen the Power Team in action this year, does not need to be told that they are one of the best teams in these parts, and one who boasts such individual stars as Lefty Dugas, Shefflet, Joe Barry, and many others equally as brilliant. These boys have won many followers thru their sportsmanlike behavior on the ball field, as well as their playing ability.

The Bon Tons, although they have won but one game in their five starts in the league are out to start winning tonight at the expense of the E. C. P. Co. It is rumored that the Bon Tons have signed up several of the Hartford Colored Stars for this game, and if this is true, it may turn out that they will be the first ones to hand a defeat to the Power Team.

Tommy Simcox, or Johnny Greene will be the probable pitching selections for the E. C. P. Co., while Manager Wilbur of the Bon Tons prefers to keep his battery selection a secret until tomorrow night, when the fans may find out for themselves. He has gone as far however, to state that a real battery will be on hand, and one that will make the Power Boys travel to win.

CELLO WINS VERDICT OVER PAL MORAN

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP)—Tommy Cello of San Francisco, was awarded a judge's decision over Pal Moran, New Orleans lightweight in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden tonight. Cello was the aggressor throughout and carried a hard battle to Moran in the closing rounds.

Moran appeared listless up to the sixth round when Cello opened a cut under his right eye. Moran weighed 135. Cello 130 1-2.

Harry Cook, negro boer of Buffalo, N. Y., won from Harry Wallach of New York in the sixth round of a 10-round match. Referee Danny Ridge stopped the fight when Walrch was blinded by a jab on the right eye. Wallace had to be assisted from the ring and was taken to a hospital. Cook weighed 139 3-4. Wallach 132 1-2.

Jackie Fordyce, 123 pounds, former New York State and National Amateur featherweight champion, fought six rounds to a draw with Patsy Ruffalo, 133, also a former New York State champion in the same division.

Sergeant Sammy Baker of Mitchell Field and Tommy Freeman of Hot Springs, Ark., fought ten furious rounds to a draw in the final bout on the card. Baker weighed 143, Freeman 141.

REDS SWAMPED BRAVES IN FREE HITTING GAME

CINCINNATI, O., July 23.—(AP)—Cincinnati swamped Boston 13 to 3 in a wild hitting game today. The home team got enough hits coupled with two errors by High in the second inning to score 11 runs. The bottom of the batting orders started the rally and then Christenson tripled, Walker tripled, Roush singled and Hargrave tripled. The players in the lower bracket again batted and Curt Walker hit his second triple of the inning when he came to bat. Bancroft practically re-arranged his lineup after the big inning.

ST. LOUIS, July 23.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinas outslugged the New York Giants today but the Giants bunched hits off Alexander in the ninth inning for two runs and won, 5 to 3. Despite the intense heat of Thursday evening a large crowd turned out to see Taftville A. A. stage a sixth inning rally that netted three runs and gave the Taftville team a 4 to 2 victory over the West Ends of Willimantic. CONTRACT HELD BY CHICAGO PROMOTER MAY HOLD UP DEMPSEY-TUNNEY BOUT

CHICAGO, July 22.—(AP)—A $10 bill binding a contract entered into by Jack Dempsey and Floyd Fitzsimmons with B. C. Clements, president of the Chicago Coliseum Athletic Club, may block Tex Richard's plans for staging a heavyweight fight between the titleholder and Gene Tunney here in September.

Attorneys representing Rickard and Clements were in conference tonight to ascertain the validity of Cement's contract. Rickard said that in the event the contract was held valid by his attorneys he would stop negotiations for the bout temporarily at least and may decide to hold it in Jersey City after all.

If Rickard's plans are blocked, a consideration of the $10 payment will make Clements' contract with Fitzsimmons and Dempsey valid. That sum or money, so far as is known, is al that has been advanced to either the champion or Fitzsimmons.

Fitzsimmons claims the Chicago Coliseum Club promised to pay him and Dempsey $150,000 for the assignment of his contract with the champion, the amount to be paid in installments of $100,000 and $50,000 each. Fitzsimmons claims the payments were not made, and produced a draft several days ago he had drawn on the Chicago Coliseum Athletic Club for $100,000 which was returned to him unpaid, to prove his claim that this voided the contract.

Clements' purported contract with Dempsey, signed in Los Angeles on March 13, calls for payment of $800,-000 to the champion to right Harry Wills, the negro challenger, here or elsewhere. It was signed in consideration of $10, and provides that $300,000 shall be advanced to the champion August 5, and that $500,000 additional shall be paid before the contest.

In the event the fight is not held after the payment of $300,000 the Coliseum Club agrees to forfeit that amount to the champion.

Rickard, while considerably annoyed by the existence of the contract, progress to believe that Clements has no claim to Dempsey's services. The New York promoter figured that if the Coliseum Club really intended to promote a fight between Wills and Dempsey it would have to draw a gate of $1,750,000 before it could pay expenses incurred in promoting the bout at $300,000 has been guaranteed to Wills.

SENATORS HAVE TWO BIG RALLIES TO BEAT TIGERS

WASHINGTON, July 22.—(AP)—The Senators scored in only two innings today but defeated Detroit 13 to 9. Five of the Washington runs came in the first inning and eight more in the fifth, after Detroit had tied the score with a four-run rally. Dauss, who started for the Giers, gave up five hits and a walk in one third of the first inning, while Holloway, succeeding him, allowed eight bases on balls and as many hits. Ruether was hit equally hard but was more effective in the pinch. Score.

PREPARATIONS MADE FOR BIG FIELD DAY AT NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, July 22.—Preparations are being made for the annual police field day at Lighthouse Point on Wednesday, August 11, and present indications are that it will surpass the three previous events in all respects.

Policemen and firemen from all over the state have been invited to participate and Chairman Tom Tracy has been assured of a generous response from his many friends through the southern section of New England.

Particular attention is being given the 100-yard dash closed to members of organized fire departments maintained by the several municipalities in Connecticut. Tracy feels sure that the attractive prizes offered for the winners will draw a flock of entries.

The smoke-eaters all around the larger cities will have a chance to prove their worth and may receive entry blanks from police headquarters in their respective cities or by writing direct to Tom Tracy at police headquarters in New Haven.

For the past four years the annual police field day has proved itself to be the outstanding athletic event of the season and under the capable leadership of Tom Tracy, the spacious grounds at Lighthouse Point will again be filled to capacity by a happy throng of athletes on Aug. 11 when the big day rolls around.

In addition to the many other athletic events there will be eight numbers closed to policemen and a goodly representation of athletic bluecoats is sure to be present for the activities.

YANKS TAKE SLUGGING MATCH FROM WHITE SOX

NEW YORK, July 22.—(AP)—The Yankees took the lead two games to one, in the series with the Chicago White Sox by winning today by 13 to 10. The Hugmen hammered out 17 hits for a total of 23 bases. Gehrig hit a homer with two on in the first and Babe Ruth came in the second with a triple in the second. Chicago put over a five-run drive in the fifth when Barrett, entering the game as a pinch hitter, tripled with the bases full. New York, however, gradually drew away, a steal of home by Ruth featuring a four-run volley in the sixth. Score:

Danny Gets an Eyeful

Be not inquisitive lest you
Your curiosity shall rue.
—Danny Meadow Mouse.

Danny Meadow Mouse couldn't help but be curious. Almost any one will be curious in a strange place. So Danny was curious all the time. Of course, if he had been born and had spent all his life by the seashore he would have known all about a great many things that now made him curious. But he wasn't born there and he didn't know about them and he wanted to know about them.

Every once in a while Danny went over to Crabtown to watch the Fiddler Crabs. It had surprised him to find that they could dig holes and that they lived in holes in the ground. Whenever he saw a hole in the mud he would wonder if a Fiddler Crab was living there. This Crabtown was on the bank of a creek in the salt marsh. Danny soon discovered that when the tide was way out there was very little water left out there and there were big mud flats and sandbars. He often saw Peep the Least Sandpiper with his friends running about there. Sometimes there were larger birds with them. Occasionally he saw Tattler the Yellow-legs. Always they seemed to find plenty to eat and seemed to be having a splendid time running about.

Very early one morning when the tide was out Danny ventured to run out on a mudflat just a little way from the sheltering grass of the marsh. He didn't go so far but that he could run back in a jiffy. Right away Danny noticed a number of little holes. They were nowhere near as big holes as Fiddler Crabs dug over in Crabtown, but they were holes that some one had made, and of course Danny's curiosity was very much aroused.

Peep the Sandpiper came running past. "Hello, Peep!" cried Danny.

"Hello, Danny," cried Peep, for by this time they had become well acquainted.

"Is there anything down in this hole?" asked Danny.

"Hello, Peep!" cried Danny

"I can't say, but I fancy so," replied Peep.

"Is it a crab?" asked Danny.

"I don't think so," replied Peep.

"If I wait, will it come out?" Danny demanded.

"No," replied Peep, and flew over to join some of his friends on a little sandbar.

"It must be a worm," thought Danny. "I guess a great big worm must have made that hole. Still, when the water comes in, the worm would drown. I wonder if I could dig him out. I have a notion to try. Yes, sir, I have a notion to try."

Danny leaned over and tried to look down that hole, but he couldn't see anything. He was still doing this and wondering what could be down in that hole, when suddenly a stream of water hit him right in the eye. Yes, sir, Danny got an eyeful! In fact, he got both eyes full. It was salt water, too, and it made his eyes smart, to say nothing of the way it scared him. And that stream of water had come right straight up from the hole Danny had been looking down in.

From the shelter of the grass on the edge of the marsh Danny watched those holes. By and by Tattler the Yellow-legs came walking along. When he stopped near one of those holes Danny saw a stream of water shoot up. Tattler didn't pay any attention. He just went on about his business. He seemed to take it as a matter of course. But Danny was fairly burning up with curiosity. What could have made that water squirt up that way?

Now I can do the biggest Summer wash
—in half the time!

OF course the wash is heavier during the warm months, and things get so much more dirty and grimy. But that doesn't bother me one bit, any more.

I have found a way to get the biggest summer wash out of the way in no time, without the least bit of hard rubbing. I just soak everything in thick, creamy Rinso suds—and dirt and stains float off by themselves!

Clothes come out of a Rinso soaking much brighter and whiter than I could rub them. I don't even need to boil, because Rinso sterilizes, too! So new my kitchen is cool on washdays.

Rinso makes the water wonderfully soft and sudsy. It's all I need on washday. Just ask your grocer for

UNSUITABLE SOIL FOUND GOOD FOR TREE GROWTH

SUPERIOR, Wis., July 22 (AP)—A model conservation project has been established on the barren sand lands of southern Douglas county, Wisconsin, on the summer home property of Ray J. Nye, federal prohibition director for the western district of the state.

Forest Lodge, Mr. Nye's summer home, attracts foresters and conservationists from distant points to see the projects.

In 1914, Mr. Nye planted 2,000 white and Norway pines on land that was so sterile it was fitted only for raising grass, and anything but blue grass had a difficult time forming a sod.

After 12 years of growth the trees are from 20 to 30 feet high, all thriving mightily, and from five to seven inches in diameter at the base. In 1915-16 and again this spring, others were planted. Now there are more than 7,000 trees, most of them Norways and white pines, with here and there a few Scotch pines. Not ten of the 7,000 trees planted have died.

"The whole business of conservation," said Mr. Nye, "is fire protection. Plant the trees on the hundreds of acres of sandy barren land in North Wisconsin and protect them from fire and in from 30 to 40 years there will be merchantable timber."

If some people have any common sense they evidently think it is too common to use.

WESTERLY

WEALTHY COTTAGERS OUT TO WATCH FT. MANSFIELD SALE

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., July 22—Friday seem to be the time set by the United States government for the sale of the Fort Mansfield property at Watch Hill and interest in the auction is increasing, and there is a likelihood that several hundred persons will be present to see the property struck off to the highest bidder. It is expected that Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis, who has already made one trip to Watch Hill this summer to inspect the Fort Mansfield reservation, will be here to supervise the auction.

The Napatree Point Syndicate, organized recently by a group of wealthy Watch Hill residents, desiring to prevent Fort Mansfield from falling into the hands of amusement park proprietors or cheap resort developers, is prepared to bid high if necessary in order to keep the 110-acre government tract as a part of the exclusive Watch Hill colony. The appraised value of the tract and buildings thereon is $94,000.

Construction of the new Pleasant View Fire District quarters for the new Pleasant View pumper has begun on Atlantic avenue. The fire protection committee at Pleasant View recently awarded the building contracts to R. A. Sherman's Sons company. The new structure will be 32 feet long and 26 feet wide. It will be built of tile and cement with a granite finish similar to that of the New Park hotel. The fire protection committee, which is supervising construction of the station consists of Charles Lamb, Frank A. Sullivan, James Collins, C. B. Bliven, George E. Phillips and Raymond Reynolds.

Rev. William F. Williams of the Calvary Episcopal church, Stonington, assisted by Rev. G. Edgar Tobin, rector of Christ church, Westerly, officiated at the funeral of Charles Robert Woodburn, held Wednesday at his late home on Liberty street. The bearers were Lafayette Foster, Floyd Young, Henry Barns, Edward Card, Fred W. Boulter and J. Edwin Gardiner. Burial was made in River Bend cemetery.

Citizens of Westerly were supplied a war-time picture when a motor troop train, consisting of baggage trucks, anti-aircraft guns and an accompanying detachment of 81 troopers in command of Capt. Cruickshank of Headquarters battery, rolled into Westerly, shortly before 6 o'clock Thursday morning. A mobile searchlight was left at Ashaway for minor repairs. The train was a part of the equipment of the 243rd regiment, R. I. C. A. (H. D.) made up of National Guardsmen of Rhode Island which is to go into two weeks' training at Fort H. G. Wright, Fishers Island, having left Providence at 4 a. m. was en route to New London, to go to the island fort by government transport.

At Westerly the stop was made at the state armory on Dixon street and the men went to the Elm Tree Inn in Pawcatuck for breakfast. The convoy was joined by Privates Ralph Shippee, Erwin Dawley and Harold Jones of Bstery E. which is stationed at the state armory in Westerly. The train was expected to arrive at Fort Wright before noon Thursday for the purpose of getting everything in readiness for the arrival of the regiment which will leave Providence Saturday by special steam train, making the Westerly station stop at 10:08 Saturday morning. The regiment is in command of Col. Cyril L. D. Wells of Providence.

Friday evening Cooks Jesse Barber and J. C. Steadman will leave Westerly for Fort Wright so that a hearty meal can be issued to the state troopers by the regimental cooks, of each battery unit.

Members of the First Baptist Sunday school and friends had their annual picnic Thursday, nearly a hundred going to Atlantic Beach casino. Albert G. Martin of Pawcatuck was general chairman of the committee in charge and the program included the usual picnic luncheon and the enjoyment of beach sports.

The old of the Lemuel Vose house on High street has been cut from the main building in front and the latter has been jacked up and placed on huge timbers, preparatory to moving it back to its new location at the rear of the Alba Inn on Canal street. The house, recently occupied by Dr. John Ruisi and Louis Silverstein and owned by Samuel Nardone, has to be removed to permit the continuation of excavation for the cellar of the new business block to be erected on the site.

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk appear the following transfers: July 19, Annie E. Rogers to Harry L. Bolles a certain lot of land with the buildings and other improvements on the west side of Elm street, adjoining land occupied by Friends Meeting House.

July 21, James Panciera to Vestilina Panciera an undivided one-half interest in a tract of land, with buildings and improvements, on the east side of East avenue.

July 22, Carl W. Schofield of Guilford, to Edwin L. Schofield of Groton, an undivided one-half interest in Lots Nos. 14 and 145, Fairview park, Westerly.

Thursday was the hottest day of the year in Westerly, the self-recording thermometer of Dr. Edwin R. Lewis on High street, showing 96 in the shade at noon, as against the 92 mark of the day previous. Work in locations where there was exposure to the direct rays of the sun was generally suspended. A section hand on the Westerly section of the New Haven railroad was prostrated by heat and had to be removed to the west bound train shelter to be revived and it was reported that a fireman on a west-bound locomotive was so overcome by the heat that he had to be replaced at New London.

George Lord, 47, of 15 Liberty street, Pawcatuck, was taken to the Westerly hospital at 4:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon after he received a severe injury to the left hand and wrist, caught in a mule spinning machine in the American Thread company plant, Pawcatuck where he was employed. Physicians who are attending him report that he suffered a serious fracture of the left arm and the wrist and hand.

Miss Mary Mulcahey, 61, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., laundress at Cedarcroft, the summer home of Walter R. Herrick of New York, was found dead in her room at the cottage early Wednesday. Dr. Michael H. Scanlon, medical examiner of Westerly, pronounced death due to natural causes. The door of Miss Mulcahey's room was forced early yesterday when there was no response to calls for her from the outer hall. She was found dead in bed. The body was sent to Mamaroneck early last evening by a local undertaker. Miss Mulcahey, it is reported, is survived by a sister, Miss Catherine Mulcahey of Mamaroneck.

Mrs. Minnie Sheffield and daughter Grace left Westerly Tuesday morning for a motor trip through the central states, their objective point being Boone City, Iowa, where they will visit Chas. Partelo and family, relatives of the travelers. Miss Sheffield is a careful and efficient driver and will make the entire trip of approximately 1,500 miles, accompanied only by her mother. They plan to be away about six weeks, arriving home by the time the Westerly schools open, as Miss Sheffield is a teacher in Westerly.

GALES FERRY

The annual meeting of the Public library was held at the Country club house Monday evening. The president, Miss Grace E. Povey presided. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Mary C. Watrous. The treasurer, D. R. Povey was absent so his report was read by Walter M. Buckingham and was approved. On motion of George W. Frost of Montclair, N. J., the secretary Mrs. Watrous was empowered to cast a ballot for the reelection of the officers for another year. President, Miss Grace E. Povey, vice president, Rev. Allen S. Bush, secretary, Mrs. Mary C. Watrous, treasurer, D. R. Povey. The president read her report as follows:

I present herewith the sixth annual report of the work and growth of the Gales Ferry Public library for the year ending July 14, 1926.

The survey of the year's work shows progress and an increased interest in the books we have to offer. It is a pleasure to observe the use of the books and there comes with this sense more and more working out our one purpose of making the little library a storehouse for the treasures of our community life.

The circulation of books for home use during the year was 3616. This is 287 ahead of last year. We sent 127 books to Long Cove.

The total number of books in the library not including reference books and periodicals is 2780. During the year 105 books were added, 91 of which were our state grant.

This past year the town appropriated $30 for the library. This appropriation the state duplicated with $60 worth of books.

The entire Juvenile collection of books has been relabeled. All books in the library now is one accession book. In this relabeling there were found many that were either imperfect or so dirty that they had to be discarded. A few were rebound, others repaired and about 150 were mended. In this way we are able to keep the books in clean and attractive as possible.

The Primers have been of great help in the work in the primary grades. The teachers have taken books to the schools, thus placing before the children the best in this way influencing them to choose the worthwhile and strengthening their love for reading.

The Christmas story hour was held in both schools. The interest shown in the happy faces was pleasing reward. They could very well be called "enchanted audiences."

About three years of children's magazines were sent to the Long Cove school for the use of the children in that district.

At Christmas time Mrs. Mary Gibbs Browning sent the library, in memory of her mother, Mrs. Emily King Gibbs, five of the latest books of fiction. Judge B. F. S. Crandall, Mrs. W. M. Buckingham, Mrs. Fanny Moithrop, and Miss Enid Latimer have given magazines.

Those who have contributed books to the library are: Miss Elizabeth Renton, George Frost, Mrs. B. F. S. Crandal, Mrs. Russell Frank Wheeler, Miss Barbara Irwin, Miss Enid Latimer, Miss Natalie K. Gibbs, Mrs. Charles Whitman, Mrs. Delphine Fish, Mrs. F. M. Shaw, Miss Gladys Russell, Mrs. Mabel C. Buckingham, Mrs. Mary G. Browning, Mrs. Annetta E. Card, Miss Bernice Coman, Charles E. White, Mrs. Mary C. Watrous, Miss Grace E. Povey.

John McGuire has planted a rhododendron on the library grounds.

In July and August the library had the Silver Tea, the popularity of which does not wane. One hundred seventy-nine guests were present. The sale of candy at the Community fair was also successful.

The electric wiring has been completed, so that during the winter months the room can be lighted and the books in the far corners easily found.

The attendants at the library during the year were: Mrs. Fanny Molthrop, Mrs. Joseph DeRusha, Mrs. Everett Noyes, Miss Em-Beth Bennett, Mrs. Delphine Fish, Mrs. B. F. S. Crandall, Mrs. Gertrude Latimer, Mrs. Nelson Parker, Mrs. A. Shaw Bush, Mrs. W. M. Buckingham, Mrs. Fred Richards, Miss Adelina Povey, Mrs. Emma Bennett, Miss Natalie Gibbs, Miss Susan Mathewson, Mrs. R. Irvin Hurlbutt, Mrs. Bertha Hoyt, Mrs. Josephine Birch, Miss Dorothy Birch, Mrs. Mary Watrous, Miss Caroline B. Freeman.

The librarian hopes the year altogether has been one of improvement in the quality of work done and that the books placed on the shelves have created among the readers an increased appreciation of our efforts in trying to give them the best.

Respectfully submitted,
GRACE E. POVEY,
Librarian.

At a meeting of the directors, Billings F. S. Crandall, Mrs. Emma S. Bennett and R. Irving Hurlbutt following the election, committees were appointed as follows: Library committee, Mrs. Walter M. Buckingham, Mrs. Emma S. Bennett, Mrs. Mary C. Watrous, Mrs. Dudley C. Perkins, building committee, Walter M. Buckingham, R. Irving Hurlbutt, Stephen H. Norman, finance, D. R. Povey, George W. Frost, Billings F. S. Crandall.

RUSSIAN PEASANT FINDS MOVIES STILL A LUXURY

SAMARA, Russia, July 22 (AP)—The post revolutionary peasant differs from his prerevolutionary prototype not alone in externals—such as dress and habits—but he has acquired new tastes.

Though still fond of his melancholy airs, he is no longer content with mere song and dance. In a comparatively short time he has become a moving picture fan, and not infrequently walks ten miles to see a bit or pale, whirling life.

A regular moving picture house is still an undreamed luxury in the typical Russian village. Hence the portable picture apparatus—machinery, films and all—carted from village to village, usually by a troop of young communist scout boys.

The apparatus works but poorly. There are frequent and long interruptions. The picture is rarely if ever accompanied by music, unless the local harmonica player volunteers his services. A large percentage of the sightseers cannot read headlines, making it incumbent upon the few intelligents present to chorus titles, thus crudely feeding famished curiosity.

A train or automobile rushing towards the audience makes girls cry out.

DEPRIVED BY LAW OF SELF PROTECTION

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

The American Bar association, composed of the lawyers and judges who are responsible for the administration of law, held its annual session at Denver, last week.

The meeting was somewhat unusual in at least one respect. It was characterized throughout by the frank admission in speeches, in committee reports, and in general discussion, that the people had lost their old respect for law and courts.

This fact, which has been perfectly obvious to the most casual observer for many years, has not before been openly accepted by the bar acting as a body. There is room for optimism in the change. We have good authority for assuming that there is more hope for a publican who sees, admits and repents of his own faults, than for a Pharisee who thinks he hasn't any.

When the bar comes fully to appreciate the disfigurement due to the blotches, wens, warts, pustules and pimples on its own countenance there is a chance that it may seek out Dr. Common Sense, and buy a bottle or two of his well-known blood purifier.

Of course, legislators must take their fair share of the distepute into which law has fallen. They have been for many years swamping the country with annual deluges of ill-considered, inconsistent, often un-moral and occasionally immoral legislation. It is so voluminous and often so self-contradictory that professional lawyers, with the best intentions in the world, can't make head or tail of it, while lawyers not actuated with such good intentions find it an ideal arsenal for the supply of weapons to obstruct justice, defeat right,—and put fat fees into their own pockets. Even judges, trained by long years of experience to see around blind corners and through unholed milestones, are unable to agree as to its meanings. If they did, there would be no reversals on appeal. For this condition the people who elect lagislators must bear the entire blame. In one of his noblest poems, Whittier, telling of a historic incident in the old Connecticut statehouse, remarks that in those days,—185 years ago,—"the people sent their wisest men to make the public laws." He promptly qualifies this by adding that it was "a custom laid aside with breeches and cocked hats." Nowadays a legislature is mostly a body of second or third-rate camp followers chosen, not because they are the wisest or even the sensiblest men in their respective towns, but as payment for party services, or because "the organization" can use them, or because it seems to be "their turn," or because of neighborhood cliques, or, sometimes, because they aspire after the "graft" which they foresee. Once assembled they are beset by lobbyists working for the enrichment of selfish interests, or by propagandists endeavoring to establish their peculiar ideas of the Kingdom of God by legislation and force of arms. They are cajoled and threatened and tempted and lied to till their not over-clear heads are muddled into hopeless befuddlement. So they pass into laws the schemes there seems to be most row-de-dow about and leave it to the already obfuscated courts to make the parts of the puzzle join, if such a thing be possible.

For this element of obscurantism the people who nominate and elect state legislators and congressmen are directly and solely responsible. Having their choice between ice cream and Epsom salts, if they open-eyedly swallow the salts, they have no moral right to complain about the results.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the Bar association's meeting in the popular mind was the vigorous demand of Mayor Dever of Chicago that something be done to clear up the muddle created by prohibition laws. The bitterness of partisanship felt on both sides of this question was evidenced in the dissensions which this demand produced among the ordinarily cool headed lawyers of the association. It actually set them clawing and scratching like the famous cats of Killkenny "who fought and who fit and who scratched and who bit till instead of two cats there weren't any."

I'll confess, however, that the address which seemed to me the most timely and the most needed was one by Lawyer Charles A. Boston of New York on crime, crime-prevention and crime-punishment. "We have," he said, "become so highly civilized that we have relinquished or have been deprived by law, and have submitted to the deprivation of the actual right of self-protection." I quote further:

"In New York, where crimes of robbery and, accompanying murder in broad daylight are almost if not unexceptionally of daily occurrence, the criminals are always armed, and usually provided with motor cars (frequently stolen), while the general citizenry is disarmed by law, and unable to protect itself. If the so-called Sullivan law had been entitled a law to disarm the citizenry in order to make robberies safer for the perpetrators, it could scarcely have been more effective in accomplishing this purpose. And now there are sentimentalists who demand a national law to the same end.

"The very few recent occasions when criminals have been foiled and more rarely killed by their intended victims have been cases where the victim himself was armed in disregard of the law. Open-mouthed crowds, unable to lend a hand at defense see the criminals effect a raid on crowded thoroughfares in open day under this highly civilized method of protecting crime."

This, as every reader of the daily papers knows, is in no sense an overstatement of the situation.

With the motives which may have actuated legislators in passing disarmament laws and gun-licensing systems we have nothing to do. Those motives may have been good. Admitting, in a superabundance of charity that they were, the outcome has demonstrated anew the truth of Dr Johnson's famous aphorism that "hell is paved with good intentions." Whatever they were intended to be and to do they have proved, in practice, the most supreme and pre-eminent idiocy ever enacted into law. They have disarmed law-keepers, without disarming law-breakers. They have minimized the possibility of defense to law-abiding citizens, without in any visible degree limiting the offensive armaments of criminals. Further than that, they have opened a door to the camp-followers of the law for the exercise of petty tyrannies and official bulldozing of citizens uninformed as to their remaining lawful rights and powers. It isn't so long ago that a night watchman who stood off and wounded the burglars who attempted to rob the premises he was guarding, was haled to court by the New York police and fined for having and using in lawful self-protection, a weapon exactly similar to those with which the burglars were armed.

Right here in Connecticut a recent occurrence shows how the law restricting the possession of weapons by the citizenry leads to injustice. As the story has been told to me, a farmer of foreign birth and not only ignorant of many of our laws but speaking and understanding English with much difficulty, lost a number of sheep by raiding dogs. After he had called on the town for payment for half-a-dozen or so, the town authorities, irked by the drain on their funds, advised him to get a gun and shoot the sheep-killing dogs. Assuming that such advice from an official quarter was valid, the farmer bought a gun. Some other complications arose, after which an officer of a state board or commission appeared, demanded the gun, and then hailed the farmer before a court for violation of the law. Only the prompt action of a neighbor prevented his being "railroaded" to a fine or other penalty. I do not know how the case has been finally decided, or whether it has been so decided. And I do not profess to know all the facts or to be in position to say what the law is. It is enough to know what I have related.

Here was a well-meaning immigrant, new to our laws but desiring to be a good citizen,—he had already taken out his first citizenship papers,—who was put to serious inconvenience, not to say danger and loss, at the hands of one duly accredited official because he followed the advice of another duly elected official. One doesn't know under what confusion of laws he lived in his old home, but surely it couldn't have been any more absurd than this introduction to what we are pleased to call "the land of liberty and opportunity."

When the founders of this government were erecting the Constitution which they intended to be its basic and fundamental law they included in that Constitution the simple, universally understandable provision that: "the right of the citizens to have and bear arms shall never be questioned."

The folly of various legislatures has not only "questioned" but ostentatiously denied that constitutionally asserted right. And the servility of courts has led to casuistic decisions upholding the validity of such denial as a permissible exercise of "police powers."

I remember having called your attention to Iowa's experience with bank bandits. That state got tired of disarming its citizens so they couldn't resist the forays of invading criminals in stolen automobiles. So it provided by law for the creation of what are virtually vigilance committees in every community. These committees were not only armed with as good guns as the criminals carry but trained to use them. The result has been that practically every attempt at "banditry" in that state has been frustrated, the criminals either killed on the spot or caught and given sentences that make "Jersey justice" seem mild in comparison.

When Mr. Boston says we have become so "highly civilized" as to have relinquished or submitted to deprivation by law of the right to self-protection, he is misusing that word "civilized." Submission to that deprivation is not a mark of "civilization" but a stigma of degeneracy and decadence.

I am talking about this to my farmer friends because among them, if anywhere, remains something of the old spirit of America,—the spirit which nerved their sires to revolt against the unjust laws imposed by Britain. Our statute-books are today cumbered by laws often as oppressive in their administration as any which George III and his ministers sought to foist on us from across the sea.

We can fight them with ballots,—at least until those missiles shall have proved ineffectual.

But we've got to use our ballots with more sense than we have shown in recent years if we expect them to restore our rights for us.

—THE FARMER.

ARTHUR BOODRIS GETS $10,000 BAIL AND IS RELEASED AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 22.—Arthur Boodris, one of the three charged with incendiarism in setting fire to the Sea Food restaurant, Bank street, for the purpose of attempting to collect about $12,000 insurance, and who has been a prisoner at the New London county jail in default of $10,000 bail, has been liberated until the convening of the criminal session of the superior court in September. Boodris had a savings bank account in Fitchburg of $10,000 and this has been taken over as a security by the surety company. Boodris' alleged accomplices are at liberty, on bail of $1250 each, having been released at the time of their preliminary hearing.

TOTAL OF 1748 SIGNATURES ON PETITION THROWN OUT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 22.—As was anticipated the referendum petition requesting the calling of a special city election has been adjudged invalid by City Clerk Julian D. Moran. Today City Clerk Moran completed his checkup of the petition and he declared that 1748 signatures were invalid because of various reasons as provided for by city charter. One thousand and sixty-one signatures were deemed valid and as it is necessary that 2040 of the signatures be correct ones before the election can be called, it is now necessary for the circulators to obtain 979 additional signatures within the next 10 days. The circulators are determined that the election shall take place and will start, they say at once, to obtain the signatures necessary to make the calling of the election mandatory.

HOW TO GET MOTOR CARS MAY HINGE ON BOOTLEGGING

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 22.—The makings of a bootlegging disclosure are before the police court, but what they will reveal cannot be said yet. Frank Pozella and Carmine Zorroros were charged with a breach of the public peace when the court convened this morning. Joe Fidalgo complained to the police that Pozella had assaulted him. Carmine made complaint later and then there were two where only one had been accused. Today it is claimed that bootlegging led to the trouble. There were men, women and children in court to tell all about the row between the men, but they didn't get started, as the complaint hearing was adjourned for a week. It would be interesting if disclosure could be made of how and where men who are employed at laboring work, for which the pay is not large obtained and found the money to maintain motor vehicles. Men who are large earners would like to get the recipe for supporting automobiles.

John Marrington was fined $10 for intoxication at the home of his sister in Shaw street. The accused made promises as he always does, to get out of town and, to use his own words, "to stay out," but the court deemed it the part of good judgment to fine him.

Two Brooklyn girls who were brought here by sailors under promise of marriage, were reported to have left town, no complaints against them were noted.

Employes on the freight trains of the New Haven railroad declare that the company is mightily favored with business at present and that it has been for months. Last night two long trains carrying only fruit and numbering about 80 cars each, went over the line to Boston through New London, and even larger trains with mixed freight were drawn through this city during the night. The passenger business of the road is very heavy, for trains are run in sections east and west. The business of the steamers running between New London and New York is of record size almost daily.

When fishermen were seeking the privilege of selling fish at the public landing here the statement was made, and upon it the permission was granted, that residents here would be able to secure fish at a lower price than had been charged prior to that time. Patrons of the few fishing boats that come to the landing declare that there is little, if any, difference between the prices charged at the boats and the cost of fish in the regular markets. These patrons desire to know what has happened that prices are maintained where they now are.

BRITISH SCHOONER POWELL TURNED LOOSE WITH BOOZE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 22. — British schooner Fannie Powell, captured off Block Island several nights ago by the crew of a United States coast guard patrol boat, the former craft having a cargo of 1500 cases of Scotch whiskey, valued at $184,000, was ordered released today by United States coast guard authorities as the ship's papers showed that the schooner was within her rights in the transportation of liquor. The papers show that the Powell, which hails from Halifax, Nova Scotia, is en route from St. Pierre, Miquelon, to Nassau. This afternoon the patrol boat Gallatin escorted the Powell to sea from Block Island and left the liquor laden schooner 30 miles off shore and in about the same position as when she was seized by the United States rum-running forces.

Today was the hottest day of the season and New London sweltered from early morning until this evening when the wind shifted to the northwest, the shift bringing about a slight relief. Not in many years has New London experienced a day when the mercury rose to the height of today. At 4 o'clock this morning the thermometer registered 76 and at 7:30 o'clock a registration of 79 was noted. At 2:30 o'clock the mercury was at 92 in the shade. At 3:30 o'clock a registration of 93 was noted, but after that hour there was a very slow descending of the mercury and at 9 o'clock the thermometer registered 88, which is unusually hot in New London at any stage of the summer. The sweltering heat was greatest, naturally where there was no shelter and as a result several employment agencies caused their force of help to discontinue work at noon. At the Connecticut College for Women where conthermometer registered 106 at noon. At the Marvel Underwear company's factory, Water street, which is usually one of the coolest places in the city, a registration of 105 was noted. Both of these working forces were instructed to lay off work for the remainder of the day. At the office of the Connecticut Power company, Union street, where there is but little circulation, the men and women of the office force were excused from work at noon. Ocean Beach was thronged with visitors, so intense was the heat in the city and it was estimated that there was close to 40,000 at the shore at mid-afternoon. Thousands sought the beach by trolley, while many came by automobile and the bathing accommodations were all utilized. Norwich sent a greater crowd to the shore resort than it does on a Sunday for extra cars were operated to handle the crowd to and from that city.

Barrett, through his counsel, endeavored to obtain his freedom on habeas corpus, but his counsel this afternoon decided that such a procedure would not meet with legal favor and decided to withdraw the proposed action.

Wise, the next pastor of the church added his tribute. With the scripture reading and prayers it was an impressive service. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery. Broadway Theatre

Rex, king of wild horses, is the star of "The Devil Horse," the spectacular Pathe picture showing Sunday at the Broadway theatre. It required four months' time in its filming in the heart of the Montana and Wyoming wilds, not counting the months of preparatory work and the final editing and titling.

Hal Roach wrote the story, basing it on actual historical legend of the West. It deals with the pioneers and their battles with the marauding redskins of hostile tribes, and the story of a "devil horse" credited with supernatural strength and feared by all the Indians.

"The Devil Horse" has been produced on a massive scale. Hundreds of people take part in it, the entire population of the Crow Indian reservation in Montana, appearing in it along with their tepees and their ponies.

One of the big spectacular scenes is an Indian raid on a pioneer caravan, and another is the Indian attack on the fort.

Gladys McConnell, Yakima Canutt, Robert Kortman, Roy Clements and Fred Jackman, Jr., son of the director of "The Devil Horse," are in the cast. Rex is given the equine support of Lady, his mate, the Killer and several herds.

"FISHIN' HOLE" OF NEW YORK AVAILABLE TO MILLIONS

NEW YORK, July 22 (AP)—New York like every small town has its "fishin' hole." Here it is the Atlantic ocean, and good fishing may be enjoyed in a score of charted locations.

A handful or wealthy men go to Florida and California annually to enjoy the sport in an expensive manner, but more than one million men this season have enjoyed deep sea fishing by devoting only one day at a time, and on a minimum expenditure.

There always has been fishing, but until recently the nimrods had to organize small groups, charter an old boat, and get their enjoyment in the face of discomfort, and, sometimes, danger.

Now, going fishing is as simple as taking the ferry.

Large, speedy craft cater to this one trade, and regardless of the time of day the fisherman likes to drop his rod in the water, he can be accommodated.

If he likes to catch them as they rise at dawn, there are boats leaving at midnight. The man who likes his night's sleep first can get the boat at 5 o'clock. Others leave at intervals until late in the afternoon.

The larger boats carry several score of men and on Sundays usually are crowded to capacity.

The boats as a rule are in charge of veteran fishermen, who gauge the tide, wind and weather, and can pick unfailingly the place where they are biting. Bass, fresh fluke and blackfish are among the leading catches.

The boats, however, would bring a smile to the face of a veteran off the Grand Banks. There is little roughing it. Instead, the tired sportsman may sink into a heavily upholstered chair. The larger boats even have lounging rooms and dining rooms.

Neither is it necessary to worry about tackle, for along that section of the docks from which the boats depart are shops selling not only the proverbial "hook, line and sinker" but all other equipment.

It is not even necessary to dig for worms, if that bait is used, for there are any number of shops dealing in grubs and angle worms.

There are many other conveniences offered on these boats which tend to making fishing a matter of luxury, but there is one item of the old pond that can not be duplicated. That is the tree on the mossy bank where one can stick the pole in the ground and doze off while the fish play around with the bait.

CITY CARRIES ON AS HOME OF BLUE RIBBON CHILDREN

MANSFIELD, O., July 22 (AP)—Mansfield has been an attraction for child health workers of the world for the last six years and although it no longer is in the general limelight the work which directed attention here is being carried on just the same.

On April 2, 1920, the city was selected by the American Red Cross and the National Child Health Association as a center to develop "blue ribbon children," in a six-year experiment.

The procedure consisted simply of teaching elementary school children principles of right living,—regular brushing, regular teeth brushing, regular eating and sleeping, and the like.

When they reached a certain stage of perfection, as attested by physicians and dentists, they were given a blue ribbon. Four thousand children have been so tagged.

In six years, there was almost a constant procession of health workers from the United States and foreign countries to see how the project worked out. The national organizations considered results so excellent that five other demonstrations immediately were opened in various sections of the country.

The experiment permeated Mansfield's civic life and when the corps of health workers left, the county and city health boards decided to carry on.

UNIQUE "POSTOFFICE" IN GULF WATER CROSSROADS

MIAMI, Fla., July 22 (AP)—Where the southern sea lanes meet the Gulf Stream to form one of the world's busiest maritime crossroads, a few miles off shore, sailors aboard passing ships have established a queer little mailing station.

Designated by no name, no marker and no custodian, this novel postal clearing spot nevertheless has grown through an unusual custom. The volunteers in its service receive no remuneration.

The "postoffice" stretches indefinitely just beyond sight of the beach, where fishermen, amateurs and professionals alike, cast their lines from an array of pleasure boats and nondescript harbor craft skirting the path of ocean-going vessels.

A hail from a passing ship, the toss of a corked bottle overboard and a letter in its floating container is scooped up a few minutes later by one of these deep-sea fishermen, who speeds the missive on its journey at night when he returns to port.

CONRAD PLANNED RETURN TO POLAND, NATIVE LAND

NEW YORK, July 22 (AP)—Joseph Conrad, Polish son of Polish patriots before he was the great English teller of sea tales, intended to return to his native country to end his days, and would have done so within a few months had not death in August 1924, intervened. This is revealed by a letter from Mrs. Conrad, published in the August issue of "Poland."

In view of Conrad's Polish birth and early life in Cracow, many have wondered why he never returned to his old home for more than a short visit. The letter from his English wife makes the first authentic statement that this actually was his intention.

AIRWAY TRAFFIC HUGE ENOUGH FOR MAPPING

DAYTON, O., July 23 (AP)—Traffic on the airways of the United States is not yet heavy enough to call for strict police supervision, but their travel has reached the point where statistics are being compiled on their use just as they are compiled on highways, railroads and waterways.

Compilation up to last June 1, made at the U. S. model airway control office, Wright Field, Fairfield, Ohio, shows that in the 47 months just preceding that date, more than one million miles had been flown over the airways by army fliers with the loss of but one life.

The airways are definitely established routes between the air and commercial centers of the United States. They are travelled by government planes in carrying officials from place to place, to convey official messages by personal courier, and to carry dispatches and parcels of governmental importance. The routes are designated on maps and at night are illuminated at intervals by revolving beacon light. By day the airways are marked by signals painted on roof tops in cities along the route.

Originally planes were flown over the airways only from Dayton, New York, Langley Field, Va., and Washington. Later Detroit, St. Louis, Scott Field, Ill., and Kelly and Brooks Fields, Texas have been included.

Planes leaving New York over the airways, fly to McCook Field, Dayton, thence to Detroit, St. Louis, Louisville, Cincinnati, Dayton and back to New York.

Ships leaving Kelly Field, Texas, fly to Dallas, Muskogee, Kansas City and Scott Field, where they meet the New York planes enroute to St. Louis, and then return to Kelly Field.

McCook Field planes make trips to Langley Field, Va., New York, Washington and back to Dayton.

From July 1, 1923 to June 2, 1926, 691 flights have been started over the airways. Of these, 662 have been completed. There have been 25 crashes and only two accidents to the personnel, resulting in one fatality. Forced landings have numbered 127.

In the period of 47 months, 2,197 passengers have been carried and 61,412 pounds of express has been conveyed over a total distance of 1,098,373 miles in 14,644 flying hours.

MEMBERS THIS CLUB SWEAR AT PENALTY OF A PUNCH

ALTON, Ill. July 23 (AP)—One way to curb the use of profane language is to "punch" the offenders. This theory already has enlisted 54 members for the Hard Leather club, who swear only with the understanding that a fellow member may take a poke at the swearer. Reports are that the theory works.

H. W. Robinson, a news dealer, conceived the idea of preventing offensive language near his place of business. Enlisting the aid of another man, he organized the Hard Leather club. On application, others were taken in, until now 54 men and their wives and families are in the ranks against profanity in any form.

MARKETS WAS UNSETTLED

NEW YORK, July 22.—(AP)—Stock prices displayed another complete reversal of form in today's market, opening strong in apparent reflection of the more cheerful overnight news from France and then breaking sharply in the afternoon on a revival of rumors which again proved to be unfounded, that the New York Federal Reserve Bank would increase its rediscount rate after the close. Closing quotations disclosed a long list of net declines ranging from one to six points.

A sharp rally in French francs, coincident with a rise in French governmental and municipal bonds in the New York and foreign markets were construed in Wall Street as indications of returning confidence in the principal financial centers of the world in the ability of the new French government to save its currency from further depreciation and put through necessary fiscal reforms.

Selling of stocks, like much of the buying which had preceded it, was of a professional character, the leading commission and wire houses representing relatively little speculation on the part of the outside public. One of the most important business developments of the day was the quarterly report of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, which showed a total income in excess of the previous quarter but lower net income due to the fact that refunding expenses on a large note issue were charged off against second quarter earnings.

In view of the fact that net earnings for the quarter were equivalent to $2.04 a share on the common some disappointment was expressed that no divided cation was taken on the common stock.

Wall Street apparently is reconciled also to no special dividend action being taken by the U. S. Steel Corporation directors at their meeting next Tuesday, although hope is still held out for some "melon-cutting" at the October meeting. U. S. Steel common showed a net loss of 2 3-8 at 138 5-8 after having touched 142 1-2. Sloss-Sheffield closed 5 points lower at 123. Bethlehem, which had touched 47 in the early trading, showed a slight fractional gain at 46 1-8. United Alloy closed a point lower at 92 1-2 despite the announcements of the merger with the Central Steel Company.

Motors, which have taken a prominent part in the recent advance, were heavily sold but offerings were well absorbed, and closing quotations generally were above the lowest of the day. General Motors dropped from 170 to 164 3-8 and then snapped back to 166 1-4, up 1-2 net, and Hudson fell from 65 1-2 to 60 5-8, but rebounded to 62 1-2, off 2 points net. Mack Trucks declined from 124 to 119 3-8 and then moved back to 120 7-8. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe showed the widest degree of fluctuation, plunging from 246 to 235 3-4 and then back to 240. About a dozen issues attained new 1926 peak prices during the early trading, including Air Reduction, Douglas and Peerless and "Big Four."

Rails yielded with the Industrials despite the publication of additional favorable June earnings statements.

Atlantic Coast Line broke over 6 points to 211 7-8 and Chesapeake and Ohio, Reading and Seaboard Air Line preferred yielding 2 to points.

The principal commodity markets lost ground, active wheat futures lost 1 1-2 to 2 cents a bushel with selling inspired by large shipments of wheat from the farms to primary markets and reports of improved weather in the Spring Wheat Belt. Cotton closed 6 to 9 points lower with trading restricted, pending the publication of the semi-monthly government report on condition and probable yield tomorrow.

Raw sugar was unchanged and coffee dropped 23 to 29 points.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent., and held steady at that figure all day. Loans in the "outside market," were reported as low as 3-4 per cent. Time money was quoted at 4 1-4 to 4 1-2 per cent., depending upon maturity. Prime Commercial Paper held firm at 4 per cent.

French francs, which sold as low as 2.09 cents late yesterday, following the circulation of erroneous reports regarding the probability of the bank of France suspendending redemption of national defense bonds, rallied above 2.25 cents today, and closed around that level. Demand Sterling was quoted around $4.85 13-16. Other rates were mixed.

TAFTVILLE

Mrs. Arthur Oddie of Lisbon and Mrs. Dorille Ducharme of lower Norwich avenue are at Atlantic Beach.

Mrs. Celina Leclair of South C street met with a painful accident Monday while at her work, getting a bad cut as one of her fingers. She was treated by a physician.

Mr. and Mrs. William Norman and son of Washington, who have been the guests of Mrs. Norman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Phalen of South A street, are now visiting relatives in Southbridge, Mass.

Because of the heat, the local mills closed at noon Thursday and many of the employes took advantage of their brief vacation to motor to the beaches to keep cool. As the stores and other business places in town close for a half holiday each Thursday throughout the summer, the holiday was general throughout the village. The "swimming holes" in the Shetucket river and at the Lisbon pond were well patronized all day, the one known as the "sand-bank" having an extra large crowd, many of whom stayed until late in the evening.

Miss Claire Govette has resigned her position in the weaving department of the local mills.

Roses of all kinds in the village gardens are still blooming at their height. As usual, the various varieties at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Heinrich of North A street attract the attention of passers-by.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred St. George have taken a house on North A street and expect to occupy it this week.

MR. LINES RECEIVES FIVE SESQUI MEDALS

State Librarian George S. Godard, chairman of Governor Trumbull's Sesqui-Centennial committee, has sent to H. Wales Lines, with the compliments of the state of Connecticut, five of the Connecticut Sesqui-Centennial medals, struck in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Following is a copy of the letter which accompanied the medals:

"Hon. H. Wales Lines,
"Meriden, Conn.

"My dear Mr. Lines: It gives me pleasure to present to you, herewith, five of the Connecticut Sesqui-Centennial medals, struck in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

"They go to you with the compliments and best wishes of the state of Connecticut through the governor. You will notice that the front of the medal is devoted to the Connecticut state building at Philadelphia, which has been made possible through the hearty and loyal devotion and efforts of yourself and those associated with you. The reverse side is devoted to commemorating the memory of Connecticut's patriot martyr, Nathan Hale. I hope you will like the medal, not only because of what it stands for and commemorates, but also for its artistic merits.

"I had hoped that I might be able to bring these medals to you, and convey the appreciation of the governor's Sesqui-Centennial committee for your co-operation in making it possible for Connecticut to have a worthy building and dignified room in which to place its exhibits at the Sesqui-Centennial. Please remember that the latch string hangs out for you at any time.

"With all good wishes, I remain,
"Very sincerely,
"GEO. S. GODARD,
"Chairman."

NOTICE!

I hereby give notice that on and after this date I will not be responsible for bills contracted in my name by any person other than myself.

POLICE NAB ALLEGED WHOLESALE LIQUOR DEALERS ON TALMAN ST.

Armed with a search warrant a squad of local police raided an alleged wholesale liquor joint at 138 Talman street early Thursday evening. Two men found in the place were taken into custody and held in bonds of $1,000 each on charges of violation of the liquor laws. The police squad swooped down on the joint about nine o'clock.

They entered the house, a three tenement building, and made their way to the basement where they found three cellars, divided by partitions and all locked. One of the cellar doors was forced open and the padlock staples on the other two doors were pried off.

A quantity of wet goods was found in one of the cellars, a couple cases of beer, two ten gallon kegs containing moonshine, three empty ten gallon kegs that had evidently contained liquor, six empty five gallon cans, such as are used for the transportation of alcohol and two sections of rubber hose, were seized by the police and taken to police headquarters.

Two men, found in the basement, were arrested. At police headquarters they gave their names as William Roderick, 33, Portugese, Woonsocket, R. I., and Belmiro Rodriques, 32, Portugese, East Providence R. I. It is alleged that they have been engaged in the liquor game for some time.

The raiding squad comprised Sergeant John T. Casey, Sergeant Mathew Delaney, and Officers Elmer Allen, William Sharvan and Patrick Murphy.

LOCAL MAN DESCRIBES STATE FORESTS AND PARKS

A talk on state parks and forests by Arthur L. Peale featured the weekly meeting of the Norwich Lions club at the Wauregan hotel, Thursday noon. President William A. Anderson presided and the song leader was Dr. Kopeland K. Markoff. Several solos were given by Harry Schwartz. The last half of the meeting was turned over to the entertainment committee and Chairman Max Hanover presented as the speaker Arthur L. Peale who gave a talk on state forests and parks, in part Mr. Peale said:

From May to October the New England people are interesting themselves in out-door life. Fishing, boating, hunting, golf, tennis, hiking and automobile trips all contribute to our pleasures. Our national government has forests and parks, municipalities have parks and playgrounds and today I am referring in a brief way to the work of our own state of Connecticut. In 1901 the Connecticut agricultural experiment station first employed a forester, and the assembly that year named him as the state forester. In 1903 the first purchase of land for a state forest was made in Portland, in what is now called the Meshomasic Forest. In 1911 a gift of 180 acres of land on Mount Tom was accepted, and in 1918 the first state park commission was appointed by the governor. This commission made its first purchase of land in Westport in what is now called Sherwood Island. In 1921 upon the initiative of the Connecticut Forestry association the name of the commission was changed to the state park and forest commission. The first purpose of state parks is for recreational use and they also preserve natural scenic beauty and historic associations, with incidental provision for wild life. The first purpose of state forests is educational and economic, with incidental attention to recreation and protection of all forest resources. New York state has more than 2,000,000 acres of land for forestry and recreational purposes and Vermont's holdings approximate 30,000 acres. Maine has the Lafayette national park and more than 30,000 acres of the White mountain national forest, while New Hampshire with 430,000 acres of national forest has also acquired 11,000 acres of state forests and reservations. The last report of Massachusetts shows 90,000 acres of state forests.

In comparison Connecticut has 32 state parks with an acreage of 7033, and 11 state forests containing 27,546 acres. Hammonasset Beach in the town of Madison, with an area of 898 acres and two miles of shore front, shows the advisability of having more parks on Long Island and the adjacent waters.

If you have not visited Lake Waramaug and Kent Falls, do so; take along your tent and camp at the first named place and you will return home an enthusiast about the scenic Litchfield hills. Many other beautiful spots are accessible and only the lack of time prevents a description of the same.

What of eastern Connecticut, your own section?

The Wolf Den in Pomfret has many visitors. Selden Neck in Lyme has great possibilities as an island park, and Bolton Notch with future development will take a prominent place in the park system. The Devil's Hop Yard is called one of the wildest ravines in southeastern Connecticut and right at our doors we have Minnie Island at Gardner Lake, which we hope in the near future can be used more advantageously. The Nathaniel Lyon Memorial at Eastford will attract many patriotic pilgrimages and the century-old pines at Quinebaug Pines near Putnam are one of the most beautiful stands of timber in the state.

We must not forget Fort Shantok, the historic village site of the Mohegans, and the chamber of commerce of this city is planning a celebration there in the near future.

Then we have the Niptuck and Natchaug forests in Windham and Tolland counties, and the Nehantic forest in New London county. Surely Connecticut has made a good start.

The speaker also referred to our attractive park in Norwich, "Mohegan", which has been left almost in its natural state, and said that we owe much to the donors for this splendid tract, and we should appreciate the work of the local park commission. Chelsea Parade, Little Plain, Lowthorpe Meadowe and Meeting House Rocks are heritages from former public spirited citizens and as recreation centers are made use of daily. There is a great need for municipal play grounds, as at present only one Lake street is owned by the city. An open area for an aviation field is a prospect for the near future, and a municipal camp site for tourists. I believe would attract many tourists to our city with its many historical associations, he said.

Next week's meeting is to be held in the form of an outing at Oaks Inn, near Watch Hill.

Fred S. Duesenberg, one of the world's greatest builders of racing cars and manufacturer of the $7000 Duesenberg automobile, told George W. Sutton, Jr., America's leading automotive writer, "The Auburn is a Darn Good Car." They both agreed upon it 100%.

Add Mr. Harry Miller's statement that the Auburn is the smoothest stock car he has ever driven and you have samples of the kind of praise the Auburn is receiving from the most "hard-boiled" automobile critics.

But the greatest praise comes from Auburn owners. The engineering authority arrives at his estimate of Auburn's superior quality by his knowledge of the comparative way cars are built today. The owner may not be an engineer but he comes to the same conclusion by the unequalled satisfaction he gets from his car. You will find that to an Auburn owner his car is almost his religion. See the new Auburn, drive it, compare it and if it does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy.

PRE-EMINENT MEN OF FRANCE COMPOSE THE NEW CABINET

Nucleus of the New Ministry, Regarded as the Strongest Since the War, is Made Up of Six Former Premiers and One Former President of the Republic—M. Poincare Desires a Conference With Secretary Mellon Concerning the Debt to America—Poincare Will Introduce His Financial Measures Before the Chamber of Deputies Next Tuesday.

PARIS, July 23.—(AP)—A new French cabinet, regarded as the strongest since the war, is ready to take up the difficult tasks facing the country, notably those connected with placing the country on a sound financial footing.

When Raymond Poincare, three times premier and president of the republic during the World war succeeded today in putting the finishing touches on his fourth ministry—a national union one—the franc immediately improved more than a point and a half to the dollar.

The new government seems to meet the growing demand for a non-partisan cabinet that can make a real effort to solve the financial problems regardless of party or doctrine. It is hailed with the greatest satisfaction by the senate and welcomed by the chamber—by all groups except the socialists, communists and extreme radicals.

One of Premier Poincare's chief desires, voiced by him as he left Elysee Palace after presenting his ministers to President Doumergue, is to have a talk with Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the United State treaury, who arrived in France today.

The premier remarked that there were certain difficulties connected with ratification of the deft settlement with the United States, and he would be glad of an opportunity for a conference with Secretary Mellon.

M. Poincare is known to be opposed to ratification of the debt accord as it now stands, but would be satisfied with the terms if France were guaranteed against derangement of exchange through the transfer of the money to the United States.

If judged by his expression of opinion before he accepted the task of forming a cabinet, the premier is in favor of an arrangement whereby in mass transfers of money become impossible, an alternative arrangement is made whereby France could make payments in kind, in potash, for instance. He is understood to favor only in part the financial projects suggested by the committee of experts appointed by the government to consider the French financial situation.

The nucleus of the cabinet is furnished by six former premiers, and one former president of the republic. Of the former heads of government, Premier Poincare will take the finance ministry with the premiership; Aristide Briand will be minister of foreign affairs; Louis Barthou will be minister of justice and vice president of the cabinet; Paul Painleve, minister of war; Georges Leygues, marine and Edouard Herriot, public instruction.

Andre Faillieres, son of former President Faillieres, completes the list of illustrious names in the new combination, taking the post of labor, but there are others who are not unknown in the United States. Albert Sarraut, who went to Washington with the French disarmament mission, is minister of the interior, while Andre Tardieu, French high commissioner at Washington during the war, is minister of public works.

Maurice Bokanowski, the new minister of commerce, is also known at Washington, as a member of the Caillaux debt mission.

Dr. Andre Queuille, as minister of agriculture; Leon Perrier, minister of colonies, and Louis Marin as minister of pensions, completes the new government.

Upon leaving Elysee Palace, Premier Poincare announced that his ministry would make its first appearance before the chamber of deputies on Tuesday; at that time he would introduce his financial measures.

He described his government as having been selected without regard to personal preferences, saying:

"We wanted to form a cabinet of the largest national union, in which all parties would be represented, without taking account too closely of the representation of groups. We have tried to fulfill our task in the most high-minded spirit possible."

WASHINGTON PLEASED WITH FRENCH MINISTRY

WASHINGTON, July 23.—(AP)—The make up of the new French cabinet is regarded with optimism by Washington officials, who believe that France has found a ministry which will lead it out of its financial difficulties.

"I believe France is on the right road," Acting Secretary Winston of the treasury said. "The reaction of the franc indicates general confidence in the new government and I believe it is justified."

A STEADY IMPROVEMENT IN THE FRANC IN PARIS

PARIS, July 23.—(AP)—A steady improvement in the franc took place through this afternoon. This was interpreted in bourse circles as due to the general belief that Premier Poincare and his new ministry will attack the grave financial problems in vigorous fashion.

The franc opened at 44.62 to the dollar and 247 to the pound sterling. This was appreciably weaker than the closing yesterday, due to reports that M. Poincare was meeting unexpected difficulties in forming the cabinet. When came official announcement that a ministry had been formed, and the franc improved steadily being quoted at noon at 43.60 and 242. The official closing price was 42.87 and 238.25, while after the bourse had closed the quotations was 42.32 to the dollar and 236 to the pound.

Heavy payments must be made within the next few weeks, and M. Poincare's task is tremendous. The present schedule calls for 500,000,000 francs next Saturday for semi-annual instalments on salaries of state employes. On August 1½ coupons representing 86,000,000 francs interest on treasury bonds of 1920 become due, while the following day has been set for payment of 236,000,000 francs interest on 5 per cent. rentes.

Ten million dollars is due to the United States on August 1—the first annual interest on war stocks. Three million pounds is due to Great Britain between August 18 and 25 on account of war debts, under a temporary agreement now in force.

650,000 VOTES EXPECTED IN TEXAS PRIMARY TODAY

DALLAS, Texas, July 23.—(AP)—The Texas pre-primary campaign closed tonight with the prospect of 650,000 voters going to the polls tomorrow to say whether they wish Governor Miriam A. Ferguson retained as the titular head of the democratic party and to settle other contests.

The first woman governor to be elected in Texas has been the object of the most intense "off year" campaign in the state's history.

The Texas election bureau, an organization set up by Texas newspapers to gather returns, estimated that the democratic vote would be about 650,000 or about 50 per cent of the state's voting strength.

Each of the three leading democratic candidates for the gubernatorial nomination predicted triumph, and Mrs. Ferguson and Attorney General Dan Moody, declared they would have a majority over all opponents.

On the republican side, the chief interest centered in efforts of the minority party to hold a state-wide primary for the first time in the state's history. The republican leaders were not claiming that they would poll a large vote—30,000 was the highest estimate of the republican headquarters—but they do want a republican primary will be held in 200 of the state's 252 counties.

The republicans have almost a full slate of state and congressional candidates.

The struggle between Congressman Harry M. Wurzbach, of Seguin, the only Texas republican congressman, and the "regular" organization, headed principally by R. B. Creager, of Brownsville, national committeeman, has given the republican campaign its chief fireworks. Congressman Wurzbach is supporting E. P. Scott of Corpus Christi, while the "regular" organization is back of Colonel H. H. Haines of Houston for governor. Wurzbach is opposed for renomination in his district by Fred E. Knetsch, a Creager partisan.

BUDLONG LEAVES NEWPORT AFTER GRANT OF SEPARATION

NEWPORT, R. I., July 23.—(AP)—Milton J. Budlong of this city and New York, who was granted a legal separation from his wife, Jessie Margaret Budlong, by superior court decision today, left tonight for a week in the mountains, it was announced at his residence, "The Reef."

Although Mr. Budlong declined to comment in any way upon the court's decision, Abbott Phillips, his counsel, said that in his opinion the $750 monthly payments by Budlong to Mrs. Budlong end with the decision. The alimony was ordered paid pending settlement of the case but it is still uncertain whether the court will consider the matter at an end if Mrs. Budlong files an appeal to the supreme court. She said today she could not afford to retain counsel for this purpose.

Other lawyers, however, differ with Mr. Phillips, declaring that the separation will not affect the monthly allowance, and that the order for payment will continue in force until specifically dissolved by the court. In the event that Budlong discontinues payment, they say, Mrs. Budlong may ask the court to enforce the order.

ELECTRICAL STORM WAS SEVERE IN NEW BRUNSWICK

FREDERICTON, N. B., July 23—(AP)—Five counties in central New Brunswick were recovering today from the effects of a severe electrical and wind storm that cause one death, injury and 70 other persons were endangered when the hall in which they were dancing at Rolling Dam, Charlotte county, collapsed in the wind.

Mrs. Howard Tims of Fredericton was drowned when the storm upset her canoe on French lake, Sunbury county. Her companion, Miss Thelma Bino, of Lakeville Corner, was saved.

Other counties affected were York, Carleton and Queen's buildings were blown down or unroofed. Canadian Pacific freight cars in Carleton county were wrecked, trees were felled and electric service was impaired. Little crop damage was reported although some hail fell.

TWO 14-YEAR ELOPERS ARE EVADING POSSE

ELLSWORTH, Me., July 23—(AP)—Two youthful elopers, 14 years old each, have successfully evaded a posse of officers and other searchers for two days, it was learned today. The boy, David Coughlin, was said to be armed, and his companion, Nellie Piper, has asserted that they would drown themselves before submitting to capture.

Their relapment Wednesday was the second within a week. The first time they were brought back by James Coughlin, David's brother, who found the min an abandoned farmhuse.

SCHOOL TEACHER DEAD IN AUBURN, N. Y., AGED 101

AUBURN, N. Y., July 23—(AP)—Arah E. Marro, pioneer scho lteacher, is dead here at the age of 101. On her 100th birthday last year she attributed her old age to "regular habits, good food eaten sparingly, plenty of sleep and a peaceful conscience."

"I never fret and have tried never to nag my children," she said then. "An even disposition means an even emotional system and quiet nerves."

CABLED PARAGAPHS

MUNICH, Bavaria, July 23—(AP)—The arrival here of 26 German deserters from the French foreign legion in Syria, is reported by the Muehchener Zeitung.

VENICE, Calif., July 23—(AP)—Children at play on the beach here yesterday watched the antics of an airplane that swept the skyline and flitted in and out over the ocean. Suddenly the great machine swerved and fell. The youngsters thought the drop was a part of the pilot's program.

PARIS, July 23—(AP)—Scores of French reporters waited for hours tonight at the hotel where rooms had been reserved for Andrew W. Mellon, but up to a late hour, the American secretary of the treasury had nt arrived. Mr. Mellon came ashore at Cherbourg from the steamer Majestic and left the port at 9 o'clock this morning; it is probable he stopped off at Deauville or some other seaside resort for the night and will not arrive in Paris until tomorrow morning.

CHARGES OF LIQUOR SALES ON GOVERNMENT VESSELS

WASHINGTON, July 23—(AP)—Shipping board officials today expressed surprise over charges that liquor was being sold on government vessels, as an inquiry by federal agents got under way in New York.

No charges other than the public statement by W. H. Stayton, national chairman of the association against the prohibition amendment, have been received here, but it was said the field forces of the department of justice and prohibition unit in New York had started an investigation to establish whether liquor was being sold on American ships.

At the shipping board it was reiterated there were standing orders prohibiting the sale of liquor on government vessels anywhere and no violation of these had been reported.

Frank Dow, acting chief of the prohibition and customs services, said special squads of dry agents were constantly inspecting incoming and outgoing ships. There is no intention, however, he added, of sending agents on all government vessels to determine whether liquor is sold. The conduct of a ship's crew at sea is in the hands of the captain who, he said, was responsible.

Several seizures of liquor from members of crews has been made, Dow said, and in all instances, he declared, the shipping board has co-operated in the prosecution of the offenders.

Although seizures have been made, Dow explained that it was almost impossible to confiscate a ship as is possible under the law because it was necessary to show that liquor was on board with the knowledge and consent of the master.

NO MORE MARRIAGES ON THE ENGLISH CHANNEL

PARIS, July 23.—(AP)—Romance has received a death blow on the English channel by a decision of Captain Thomas Blau, director of operators of the United States lines, that skippers will not be allowed to perform marriage ceremonies between Cherbourg and Southampton, which in recent months has been a favorite "gretna green."

Captain Blau's dicision was taken on the ground that skippers are "not in form physically or mentally" to perform marriage ceremonies on the eastbound voyage.

During the past week 20 coupies wanted to be married aboard American liners between Cherbourg and Southampton, but they were refused on Captain Blau's order, despite the loss to the company of their fares.

Captain Blau's decision as regards marriages on vessels of the United States line between Cherbourg and Southampton, apparently is an amplification of the instructions recently that there were to be no more weddings aboard U. S. line steamers.

KLAN IS SUPPORTING REV. J. FRANK NORRIS

FORT WORTH, TEXAS, July 23.—(AP)—Texas Ku Klux Klansmen are supporting Dr. J. Frank Norris, pastor of the First Baptist church of Fort Worth, who last Saturday shot and killed D. E. Chipps, wealthy lumberman, in the opinion of Lloyd P. Bloodworth, grand dragon of the klan in Texas.

Bloodworth in a statement today said that while he could not speak officially for the Texas klan organization as a whole, it was his belief that klansmen in the state are "with" the minister in his fight for vindication.

"I have known Dr. Norris for 17 years, and in that time he has been an outstanding crusader for Protestant Christianity," said Bloodworth.

"In every great moral fight that has taken place in the city of Fort Worth Dr. Norris has ever been ready to champion the cause of right.

"The first law of all is the law of self preservation, and it has been since the beginning of time. Therefore a man must defend himself in a time of emergency."

11TH COAST GUARDSMAN ARRESTED IN RUM CASE

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 23.—(AP)—Arrest of the 11th coast guardsman accused of rum running and an investigation into the death of a member of the Beach Haven Terrace crew were announced today.

M. W. Rasmussen, superintendent of the fifth district coast guards, in announcing the arrest, said that an investigation of the entire district was under way and that more arrests would be made.

While the superintendent has revealed that two station commanders and nine men are in custody as a result of confessions obtained in Ocean county on Tuesday, Sheriff John A. G. Grant of Okan today asserted that four men in charge of stations and a score of guardsmen were involved.

COOLIDGE NOT DISTURBED BY NOISES OF THE WOODS

PAUL SMITH'S, N. Y., July 23—(AP)—An illustration of the wilderness in which President Coolidge is spending his vacation was offered last night when hounds treed a wild animal in the thick forest across Osgood lake from White Pine camp.

From its screams the guides assumed it was either a black bear, which are fairly numerous hereabouts, or a lynx.

The dogs and the prowler made such a disturbance that the white house collies, Prudence Prim and Rob Roy, were aroused and joined the chorus.

The president, however, was said to have shown no concern. The noise finally ceased.

Coolidge Believes Foreign Trade Secure

Chief Executive Knows of No Agitation Against the U. S. by Foreign Countries.

PAUL SMITH'S, N. Y., July 23.—(AP)—President Coolidge sees no evidence that the United States is likely to lose any of the foreign trade it now has.

In discussing the general subject today, officials said at the executive offices in behalf of Mr. Coolidge that the United States is in a better condition to take care of its foreign trade than other countries and probably will continue to be in a position to give better service than others.

Mr. Coolidge, it was added, knows of no agitation against the United States by foreign countries for the purpose of regaining avenues of trade this country has entered into. There is always, of course, it was said, keen competition in foreign trade but, so far as the president knows, this is at present no different than usual.

The president has no information here as to what use was made of money advanced by the United States to Great Britain during the war other than what has been stated by treasury officials in their replies to British government spokesmen who have brought up the subject in England.

Regarding the mission of Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement to England, the president does not understand that Mr. Andrews is trying to negotiate a treaty with that country in his conferences on prohibition enforcement matters. The conduct of foreign relations, it is emphasized is in the hands of the state department and the president.

Referring to rumors that Governor General Wood of the Philippines was resigning his post, it was said that President Coolidge could not see the slightest foundation for them.

STOCKHOLDERS AUTHORIZE THE SALE OF STEAMSHIPS

WILMINGTON, Del., July 23—(AP)—The sale of the steamships of the United American line to the Hamburg-America ncompany was authorized by the stockholders of the former company at a meeting here today. The proposition as set forth in the notices to the stockholders was approved, it was stated.

NEW YORK, July 23—(AP)—Announcement that the Hamburg-Americ liners which comprise the United-American lines trans-Atlantic fleet was made on July 14. The three ships affected are the Cleveland, the Reliance and the Resolute. The transfer marks the retirement from active participation in the north-Atlantic passenger trade of W. Averill Harriman, chairman of the United-American lines. The liners of the United-American line sailed under the Panama flag.

DECREASE IN ASSETS OF CONN. TRUST COMPANIES

HARTFORD, July 23.—(AP)—A decrease of $1,545,605.52 in the assets of trust companies in Connecticut in approximately the quarter ended June 30, was shown today by a statement of the condition of such institutions made public by the state banking department.

The aggregate assets of such banks at the close of business June 30 was $313,316,455.36 as compared with assets of $319,862,061.47 reported April 12 of this year.

Calls for money in the period reached $5,947,738.77, which is reflected in a decrease of $5,382,111.75 in commercial deposits and an increase of $565,-628.02 in calls for loans and discounts.

NEW ENGLAND DELEGATION EN ROUTE TO CHEYENNE, WYO.

BOSTON, July 23.—(AP)— The New England delegation to the governors' conference at Cheyenne, Wyo., left here today. There were 25 in the party, including four governors, a lieutenant governor and the president of the Massachusetts senate, representing the six New England states.

Governor Billings of Vermont, Governor Brewster of Maine, Governor Trumbull of Connecticut and Governor Winant of New Hampshire, are attending the conference in person, while Massachusetts will be represented by President Wells of the state senate and Rhode Island by Lieut. Gov. Smith.

THROWN INTO HARBOR BY GASOLINE EXPLOSION

BOSTON, July 23.—(AP)—Three men were thrown many feet into the water of the harbor today when 2500 gallons of gasoline exploded, blowing a harbor supply boat in pieces. Firemen rescued the members of the crew who were taken to the City hospital critically burned.

The explosion occurred while Harold DeWolfe of Newton, engineer of the vessel, was attempting to start the engine.

Mexico Ready to Call Federal Troops

If Necessary to Enforce Religious Regulations, Which Become Effective August 1.

MEXICO CITY, July 23.—(AP)—Government officials late today denied reports that all federal troops had been ordered to be ready for instant action on August 1 when the new religious regulations will be in force. The officials added, however, that they may issue such orders if they regard it necessary.

SITUATION IS BECOMING INTENSE IN MEXICO CITY

MEXICO CITY, July 23.— (AP) —A week remains before the formal putting into effect of the new religious regulations, and the situation is daily becoming more tense. The closing of the Mexico City headquarters of the national league for defense of religious liberty and the arrest of the leaders of the organization has caused much feeling in Catholic circles.

The government is continuing its programme for enforcing the regulations apparently without the slightest suggestion of modification. Attorney General Ortega has given instructions to department of justice officials to investigate every local branch of the religious liberty league and prefer charges against those responsible for the circular calling for an economic blockade in opposition to the religious rulings.

Fearing that all church functions will cease on July 31, huge crowds are gathering daily for the purpose of having their children confirmed and performing devotions, the capacity of the great Mexico City cathedral being inadequate. Ambulances are stationed outside the church to render aid to women and children crushed in the throng. Thus far several women have fainted, and some babies bruised, but none has been seriously hurt.

It is estimated more than 3,000 children were confirmed in the cathedral yesterday. There were also many baptisms, and hundreds of mothers were unable to set inside with their babies.

The Most Rev. Jose Mora y Del Rio, archbishop of Mexico, personally officiated at the confirmations for two hours until, almost exhausted, his assistants insisted he retire. The archbishop is 104 very strong because of his advanced years, but, nevertheless, he has announced that from now until July 31 he will officiate as many hours daily as his strength permits, instead of confirming once a week as heretofore.

Dispatches are published here saying that Archbishop Crosco y Jiminez, of Guadalajara, has sent a letter through his jurisdiction, together with thousands of catechisms, advising every Catholic home to become a Catholic school, to assemble the children from the surrounding neighborhoods to give them religious instruction.

Another Catholic school, that of Sister Maria Ensenadora, has decided to close, rather than await action against it by the government. Twenty sisters of the school have departed for the border, where they plan to open an institution at Eagle Pass.

The Catholic schools which have decided to close, plan to re-open at various, border points in the United States, thus enabling Mexican families to send their children with little trouble for a Catholic education.

THE LATE E. R. THOMAS WAS THRICE MARRIED

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP)—The late E. R. Thomas, millionaire sportsman and one of the owners of The Morning Telegraph, whose second divorced wife has filed a caveat restraining execution of his will in West Palm Beach, was married three times.

The married Elizabeth R. Finlay, who filed the caveat, at Newport, R. I., in 1913 on the same day the first Mrs. Thomas obtained her final divorce decree in New York. She sued for separation in 1923 and in June 1924, divorced him secretly in Palm Beach. In the separation agreement, Thomas consented to pay her $500,000 on her and $150,000 of the principal on deposit for her was to go to their son at the publisher's death.

NEW ENGLAND REPAIRING DAMAGE CAUSED BY STORM

Damage is Estimated at Several Hundred Thousand Dollars—19 Deaths Caused Directly or Indirectly by the Weather Were Added to the List of Two Score Recorded in the Three Previous Days—Belated News Received of Heavy Damage Caused by Tornado and Thunder Storm at Star Island, Isle of Shoals, N. H.

Boston, July 23.—(AP)—Despite a drop in temperature that officially closed the heat wave today, 19 deaths caused directly or indirectly by the weather were added tothe list of two score recorded in the three previous days.

Suffering, moreover, was only slightly less today than yesterday, because although the highest point reached by the mercury today was 21 degrees lower than the 103 of Thursday, the humidity, which on Thursday mercifully dropped to 26 per cent., today jumped to 75 per cent.

Two babies were among the victims of the heat today, they were Thomas Granigan of Cambridge, Mass., and George La Pierre of Woonsocket, R. I.

James Curley, of Boston, struck by lightning while hanging a sign at Alton, N. H., died later at a Rochester, N. H., hospital.

Miss Way Wirtella of Bogota, N. J., overcome while running for a bus at South Deerfield, for Northfield, Mass., where she was attending the Women's Missionary conference, died today at a Greenfield hospital.

New England today was slowly and laboriously repairing the damage caused by last night's storm, which amounted to several hundred thousand dollars. Telephone service to northern New England, badly crippled by the fury of the storm, was being gradually restored, but during the day it was virtually impossible to get through to points north of an arc drawn from Portland, Maine, through the New Hampshire lake district, to Brattleboro, Vt.

News of heavy damage by a tornado and thunder storm at Star Island, Isle of Shoals, N. H., reached here only today, because the island has no communication with the mainland, except by steamboat. A 60-mile gale knocked over a chimney, and ripped off doors and windows, scattering shattered glass at the Oceanic house, and a number of delegates to the conference of the Unitarian Meeting association, staying at the hotel, were badly cut and bruised.

HUMIDITY INCREASES AS TEMPERATURE DROPS

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP)—Temperatures were generally several degrees lower today throughout the eastern states that have been swept by a four day heat wave, but a decided increase in relative humidity did much to offset the relief that would otherwise have been felt.

Despite cooler weather the list of deaths traceable to the heat steadily increased and was believed to aggregate several hundred throughout the country.

Storms that swept through several states last night and left behind them today vast damage to crops and property, with new reports constantly coming in of winds of trnado proportions that toppled over buildings and destroyed produce.

In New York city the weather stayed more than 10 points below the record mark of 97 yesterday of approaching thunderstorms. Late in the afternoon, light rain fell but only seemed to ad to the day's sultriness.

Last night's storms did their chief damage in New England, New York, and parts of Canada.

PROMINENT SOCIETY WOMAN WAS ACCUSED OF LARCENY

NEW YORK, July 23.— (AP) —Miss Claire Cornell, prominent in New York, Newport and Palm Beach society and a member of the Junior league, was given the equivalent of a suspended sentence today when she appeared in court here for sentence on her plea of guilty to the larceny of two silver bowls from a Fifth avenue store.

The court placed her on probation, directing that she be subject to "restraint" for medical treatment. The probation officer in whose custody Miss Cornell appeared told the court the defendant had been under treatment for a nervous disorder and that her physician said he did not consider her responsible for her actions.

Miss Cornell, reported at one time to be engaged to marry a relative of the King of Spain, was married, last December to Robert Ten Eyck Stevenson, an artist. The marriage was annulled in Dune on the ground of fraud.

As she was leaving the court room, Miss Cornell was confronted in another law suit, which grew out of an alleged unpaid bill of $17,000, incurred by her and her mother at a costumer's. She was served with an order to show cause why she should not be adjudged in contempt of court for failure to appear in another court in the proceedings. Miss Cornell is to appear Wednesday to explain.

ZIEGFELDS BLONDES VOTE TO GO ON STRIKE

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP)—The war of the blondes is on, up in arms because of the statement of Florenz Ziegfeld that gentlemen prefer brunettes, about 20 blonde members of the chorus of Ziegfeld's Revue have organized and voted to go on strike next Wednesday unless the producer retracts his statement, it was announced today.

"If anyone thinks this is a joke," said Paulette Goddard, leader of the blond strike committee, "he is in error." When Mr. Ziegfeld denies that blondes are popular and when he seeks to exclude them from his next show, the effect on us is very, very serious. Our blonde complexion is our capital, and when Mr. Ziegfeld rates us below brunettes, he hurts our standing. If his views are followed by other producers, as they are likely to be, it may become hard for blondes to obtain positions."

The striking chorus girls say that they will ask a 50 per cent increase in their salaries as compensation for injury already done them. Vindication, however, is what they most want Miss Goddard explained.

Mr. Ziegfeld denied he had disparaged blondes, and said he likes them as much as ever.

"If they want to strike," the producer said, "let them strike. Anybody that wants to strike during this weather is welcome."

Miss Goddard explained the presence of several girls with dark eyes and hair in the ranks of the strikers with the statement that "blondness" is a state of mind. She said that Mr. Ziegfeld's remarks about blondes had caused the blondes of his chorus to be subject to a great deal of ridicule. Even the stage hands, she said, point at them and say, "you are out."

THE DWYER LIQUOR CASE TO GO TO JURY TODAY

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP)—Summation was concluded today in the trial of eight members of the so-called $40,000,000 Dwyer rum ring. The case will go to the jury Monday.

Closing argument was marked by characterizations of the government's witnesses as "spies and informers" whose testimony was obtained by bribery and promises of immunity, by defense counsel.

Federal Attorney Buckner countered by saying that immunity was automatically given any witness who incriminated himself while testifying for the government.

The testimony of Charles Augustus (sometimes Henry) Smith, who had been charged with deserting a wife and the navy, and who was in court in irons because of his disappearance from court yesterday, was raked by broadsides from the several defense attorneys.

"Smith," Buckner said, "has lied on the stand, about his naval conviction, about a former marriage an about a naval enlistment. If you jurors believe he lied about his rum running, I am satisfie to have you drop his testimony."

Buckner defended the payments of money to the government witnesses on the ground that would diminish their effectiveness as witnesses. It had been testified they were paid for work done on government boats.

"It is true the government witnesses, including Smith, received immunity. Not from me, and not from my associates in this case, but from the congress of the United States. It's the law," Buckner said.

While Buckner was making his summation, however, Smith, who had been the government's chief witness and who had told of transporting liquor from rum row in speed boats maintained by Dwyer and his associates, was taken before a federal commissioner an formally charged with perjury.

ARRESTED IN CONNECTION WITH THE MELLETT MURDER

PITTSBURGH, July 24.—(AP)—Hyman Darling, convicted bootlegger, was arrested here late today for questioning in connection with the slaying of Don M. Mellett, Canton, Ohio, publisher.

The arrest was made at the request of Canton authorities.

Questioned by authorities, Darling denied he had any connection with the case and said he was willing to go to Canton at any time.

Pittsburgh police said they had no information as to what connection Darling might have with the publisher's slaying. They said they merely acted at the request of Canton police.

Darling was convicted of a rum running charge at Wheeling, W. Va., November 1, 1925. He was sentenced to serve two years in the Atlanta penitentiary and fined $10,000. Pending disposition of an appeal, however, he has been at liberty.

Hyman Darling said later he would fight extradition to Ohio. He asserted he had been in Canton a week ago last night but had left a few hours before the publisher was assassinated. He said the first news he had of the slaying was contained in news dispatches he read Friday morning. Darling said he could produce witnesses to prove he had left Canton before the slaying took place.

SEIZURE OF REP. BALLOT BOXES IN TARRANT CO., KY.

FORT WORTH, Texas, July 23.—(AP)—Seizure of republican ballot boxes from 31 Tarrant county precincts and their recovery by officials of the Tarrant county republican executive committee from a garage where they had been stored was reported here tonight by Leonard Withington, secretary of the republican state executive committee, the republican organization affiliated with R. B. Creager.

The ballot boxes were taken from the city hall here by some one just before they were to be distributed for use in tomorrow's primary election, the first ever held by Texas republicans. Regarding an alleged attempt to have ballots printed duplicating the "official" ballot, Withington stated.

A printer who had been approached refused the order and notified members of the Creager republican body, it was stated, although the name of the printer and the city in which he lives were withheld.

NEW TAXICAB RULING DISPLEASING TO MERCHANTS

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 24.—Protest is reaching is intensity here over the taxicab parking resolution of the common council and the manner in which the parking spaces have been selected by the street committee on Church and North streets. Merchants on those two streets who were to be presented with a "strictly for taxicab" parking space in front of their business houses are up in arms. Their reproaches came with such persistency and velocity that Mayor John C. Tracy, Corporation Counsel William A. King and the street committee, Aldermen William E. Jackson, Charles H. Beebe and Arthur J. Dubreuil, held a special meeting and finally voted to hold up the marking-off of the spaces until a more generally accepted solution of the problem is reached. The taximen would naturally prefer to continue to do business on Main street and some of the merchants said they were willing to have them occupy a space in front of their stores but when told that the spaces would be for taxicabs only, they exclaimed, "Nothing doing," and so the matter hangs.

Members of the household were away when the fire broke out. Mr. Seplowitz was haying for Louis Lux at Phelps' Crossing, two miles away; Mrs. Seplowitz and three children were at work some distance away on the farm. Myron Goss, a neighbor, discovered the blaze and spread an alarm over the telephone. Employes of the state road building contract at North Windham who had just stopped working due to the heat, joined members of the South Windham fire department made up of 4 chemical wagons and 11 men, under Chief J. M. Larkham and a band of neighbors, in fighting the blaze. The bucket brigade and chemical apparatus were used in saving several small buildings in the rear of the house. With the temperature about 98 degrees the heat in the vicinity of the fire became terrific. A few bedding articles, some chairs and tables were saved from the lower floor. The E. E. Lathrop farm has been sold to people from New Jersey.

Part of the Frank Way place has been sold to a Hartford party. Mr. Way is at work on the house which is being put up on the place.

The historic mansion at Bradenton, Fla., where Judah Philip Benjamin, secretary of the confederacy, took refuge during the Civil war, is to be preserved as a memorial by the Daughters of the Confederacy. Benjamin, when General Robert E. Lee surrendered, hid in a secret chamber in the rear of a large fireplace. It was directly from this home that Benjamin finally fled to England to escape the hardships of reconstruction days, a small town he soon begins to think that he would amount to more in a large town.

IN DAYS OF OUR FOREFATHERS

Women Prepared Their Own Medicines

The wise pioneer women learned to gather, in woods and fields, the remedies the Indians used. From the rafters of colonial houses, hung great bunches of dried roots and herbs. From these, in times of sickness, the busy mother brewed simple and powerful remedies.

From roots and herbs, Lydia E. Pinkham, a descendant of these sturdy pioneers, made her Vegetable Compound. The beneficial effects of this dependable medicine are vouched for by hundreds of women who tell of returning health and strength.

Mrs. Wm. Kraft of 2238 Vinewood Ave., Detroit, Mich., saw a Pinkham advertisement in the "News" one day and made up her mind that she would give the Compound a trial. At that time she was very weak. "After the first bottle," she writes, "I began to feel better and like a new woman after taking six bottles. I recommend it to others and always keep a bottle in the house."

If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped other women, why shouldn't it help you?

DANIELSON

CASE OF EMELDA BOURQUE, OF MOOSUP, BEING PROBED

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 23.—Police in Rhode Island are investigating the circumstances of the death at St. Joseph's hospital, Providence, Saturday, of Emelda Bourque, 17, of Moosup, in the belief that the girl was the victim of an illegal operation.

The authorities are known to be given close attention to the theory that the operation was performed by a Rhode Island woman.

Although it was at first reported that the Rhode Island officials were co-operating with the state police of Connecticut in the matter, Providence inquirers were informer by the commander of the Danielson barracks, that so far the Connecticut state police have had no official information concerning the case and have done nothing about it.

Miss Bourque was sent to St. Joseph's hospital by Dr. W. D. McCormick of Central Village, last Friday after he had been called by the young woman's family and found her in a dying condition.

At the hospital the girl was placed under the care of Dr. Andrew Mahoney, 1464 Westminster street. Dr. Mahoney said that any statements the girl may have made to him or others at the hospital had been turned over to the Medical Examiner and Attorney General Charles P. Sisson.

Medical Examiner Griffin conducted an autopsy, which, according to the record, showed that Miss Bourque died of septic peritonitis following an illegal operation.

The funeral of the girl took place Tuesday from the home of her parents on Aldrich avenue. The investigation, which followed the girl's death led to finding a friend who had taken her to Providence. This friend a woman, is said to have admitted accompanying the girl to a house in Rhode Island where a woman received her. They were taken back to Moosup by automobile.

Inspectors Godfrey and Rogers of Providence headquarters went to Moosup but police officials of Providence had no reports on the case to make up to Friday.

MRS. JOSEPH L. GILLETTE DIES AT THE AGE OF 100

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 23.—Mrs. Emily Gillette who died Friday morning at the home of her son, Samuel Gillette, in Dayville, observed her 100th birthday last New Year's day and about a week after that event seemed to weaken materially. She, it appeared, had been buoyed up and had looked forward with great anticipation to the birthday party that had been arranged in her honor. She was joyous over her birthday cake and the coming of her friends and the shower of congratulations, but within a few days she became ill and had been confined to her bed practically all the time for the past seven months and was seriously ill for several weeks.

Mrs. Gillette was born in Kingston, R. I. Jan. 1, 1826, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Champlin. Her husband was Joseph L. Gillette, who has been dead for many years. For the past three years Mrs. Gillette has been making her home with her son, Samuel Gillette, at Dayville, and prior to that had lived for years with her grandson, Isaac Gillette, at Colchester, this state, where her body is to be sent for burial.

Mrs. Gillette was a member of the Congregational church at Colchester.

Twenty-five sudden deaths are listed in Coroner Arthur C. Bill's report covering Windham county towns for the three months ending July 1, and are as follows:

J. Everett Williams of Woodstock was found dead in a barn in that town April 1st: death was pronounced due to suicide by hanging.

Marietta Bidwell of Thompson, aged 73, died April 6 from natural causes.

April 9, James Everett, Cotton of Plainfield, aged 10 months, died of convulsions.

Herman T. Johnson of Hampton committed suicide April 10 by hanging. He was 63.

Charles E. Darbie of Killingly died April 19 of heart trouble.

John Black of Pomfret, 30, died of natural causes April 19.

Albert Warren Ochrig, aged 5, and of Windham, met death April 23 by drowning.

Merrill Gleason of Thompson, died April 23 at the age of 68 from natural causes.

Virginia Ernault, 69, died April 24 of natural causes. She made her home in Putnam.

Edward W. Windsor, 54, of Plainfield, succumbed to heart disease May 2.

Nicholas Rosati, 10, died May 11 from a fractured skull, received when hit by an automobile driven by Herbert J. Lane of Brookline, Mass. The accident occurred in Chaplin where the boy lived.

George Dexter, 72, of Thompson, died May 14, from natural causes.

Louis Arthur Gauge of Chaplin, died May 16 of a hemmorrhage when but 30 hours old.

Peter Charron of Killingly died April 19 at the Day Kimball hospital from injuries received as a result of a quarrel in which he was struck with a club.

George Walter Gilpatrick of Putnam, 71, died from natural causes May 19.

Lowell D. Ross of Putnam suicided June 1, by drowning.

Homer Willis, 45, of Willimantic, died June 2 from injuries received when he fell from a staging 25 feet from the ground.

Daniel J. Sayles, 78, of Danielson, suicided by shooting at his home on Reynolds street, Danielson, June 12.

Charles Dumas, 53, of Putnam, died May 5 of asphyxiation due to inhaling the gaseous discharge of the running motor of his automobile in a closed garage.

Elmer Ninely, five, of Killingly, died May 19 from injuries she received when struck by a machine driven by Louis Dumas.

John Teevan, 48, of Willimantic, succumbed to heart disease June 21.

John Miller of Putnam, died at the age of five months, from natural causes, June 23.

Adrian Lucien, 57, of Putnam, was electrocuted when he came in contact with a live wire June 29.

When Attorney Arthur G. Bill leaves Monday for an absence of about ten days, the town of Killingly will be without a prosecuting attorney. There is no assistant prosecuting attorney in Killingly nor because no attorney will accept such an appointment and thereby sacrifice opportunities to appear as defense counsel in other courts of the state, as they are now required to do. The compensation for an assistant prosecutor in the Killingly court is so meagre that no attorney of the town is willing to accept it and thereby set up a barrier he cannot pass in case he has a chance to defend clients in other courts.

The probability is that Judge W. Fenner Woodward will appoint a prosecuting attorney pro tem for the period that Attorney Bill is absent, in order that the court may function as usual in any emergency.

Some time this (Saturday) morning the motor convoy of the Service battery will get under play for home from the annual tour of field service at Tobbyhanna, Pa. As the trucks are incapable of any great speed and regulations cover traveling in convoys, the trucks will not arrive in Danielson until some time late Monday or possibly Tuesday morning. The return route will be the same as that followed by the trucks in going out. They will come out of Pennsylvania, across New York state and into Connecticut. The distance to be traveled is about 279 miles. The service battery will have been away from Danielson about three weeks by the time it is due to arrive at the home station.

Friday morning the funeral of Mrs. Adele Jolicoeur was held from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Clara Eastman, with services at St. John's church, Plainfield, at 9 o'clock. Rev. R. P. Morrissey, Rev. J. C. Mathieu and Rev. Oscar Norman were the officers of the solemn mass of requiem. Burial was in the Sacred Heart cemetery at Wauregan. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

At the church in Hopkins Mills Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. C. J. Armstrong of Danielson Baptist church conducted funeral services for Mrs. Persis E. Walker. Burial was in the Hopkins Mills cemetery. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements. Mrs. Walker died Wednesday morning at her home in Foster, where she had lived for years. She was born in Agawam, Mass., a daughter of Russell and Lucretia King Ewing. Mrs. Walker was the widow of Stephen Walker, for many years resident in Danielson. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Vifney M. Frost and a grandson, Ernest Frost, with whom she made her home. Charles Ewing of Providence is her brother.

Attorney Arthur G. Bill will leave Monday for a stay of ten days at Silver Bay, on Lake George. He is going with Mr. and Mrs. William T. Mullally. At Silver Bay Mr. Mullally is to deliver a series of six lectures on Advertising before the Y. M. C. A.

Chief John McFarland has found a claimant for a bicycle that was found abandoned near Davis park. It appears that the machine was taken from a shed on Reynolds street.

While Rev. Roger C. Stimson is away on vacation from his ministry at the Methodist Episcopal church he will visit at Chocura, N. H., and at Gorham, Me., his native town.

Miss May Franklin is attending the summer noramal school at Yale university.

The Women's Home and Foreign Missionary societies of the Methodist Episcopal church held a joint meeting at the home of Mrs. A. P. Burns on Riverview, Friday afternoon.

Members of the Sawing society of St. Alban's church motored to Kelley Point Friday and spent the day with Mrs. E. H. Keach.

Out of the thunderstorm that came late Friday night, Danielson got a fanciful electrical display and a few drops of water. Yet it rained great guns at Elmville, two miles to the north.

At any given time during Friday afternoon the temperature was on an average of ten degrees less than on Thursday afternoon.

This is the last week end of the 1926 series of meetings at the camp grounds in Douglas and the sessions of today and Sunday will be attended by a number from Danielson.

Arthur C. Belanger of New Bedford is here to spend the week end with friends.

Dr. Robert F. Souther has purchased the home place and several acres of land of what is known as the Maine farm, in the central section of Brooklyn. The place has been owned by John F. Thompson of New York. Dr. Souther is a son-in-law of Henry M. Danielson of North Main street and with Mrs. Souther, has been here for several months.

Boy Scouts hiked over to the Old Furnace for an outing, late Friday afternoon, returning here soon after dark. A baseball team and an orchestra from among the membership of 50 boys is to be organized.

Next Thursday evening, a joint meeting of the Rotary clubs of Danielson and Putnam is to be held at the Putnam Country club. For the Danielson club B. C. Hopkins, I. W. Davis, H. H. Fegler and H. J. Barnett make up a committee for conference with a committee of the Putnam club.

An observer of things pertaining to the weather said Friday afternoon that the weather vane on the town hall made two complete revolutions during Friday, evidently seeking some point of the compass from which cooler weather might come.

ROBERT F. PAGE DROWNED WHILE AIDING WIFE ASHORE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 23—Robert F. Page, 26, of South Main street, was drowned at Quadic Pond in Thompson, between eight and nine o'clock last night. His young wife, who was one of a family party that had spent the afternoon there, was in bathing and to her husband and three brothers who were on the shore she seemed to have some difficulty in making her way to shore. All immediately went to her assistance. While making their way back Mr. Page, who was of athletic build and a fine swimmer, suddenly lost his strength and sank beneath the surface.

Because of the darkness he was not missed for a few minutes. His brothers made a hurried search and soon located him, the water being shallow at this point, and brought him to shore. Dr. Karl T. Phillips, Dr. J. J. Russell and Dr. S. F. Overlock responded at once to appeals for help but they were unable to restore him to consciousness.

Besides his wife and brothers, his mother, Mrs. George Page, was a witness of the tragedy. His two children, a son of four, and a daughter, aged one, were with the party.

Mr. Page was in the best of health and was noted for his athletic prowess. He had engaged in several amateur wrestling bouts where his strength and cleverness had won him victory. He studied in the Putnam public schools and then entered the employ of Bosworth Bros. grain dealers. His parents had lived at Putnam Heights but after his marriage with Lillian Luce a few years ago he had built and occupied a house on South Main street. Of the two children born to them the son is four years old today. His father died two years ago. A sister, Mrs. Marion Shaw of Dorchester, Mass., survives, and six brothers, Frank of Quadic, Henry of Thompson, Lester, Edward, Charles and James, who live at Putnam Heights.

Although being 25 yedrs of age he had attained high rank in Masonry, being a Knight Templar, a Shriner, and a member of the 32nd degree.

The following officers and trustees of Putnam Savings Bank were elected at the annual meeting:

President, Ernest B. Kent, Vice president, John F. Reardon, Treasurer, Daniel J. Byrne, Trustees, Alfred L. Bonin, Ray C. Bosworth, George E. Brousseau, Daniel J. Byrne, Henry T. Child, George D. VOLUNTOWN

On Saturday evening the continued case of Chester F. Dyer of Glasgo, charged with reckless driving and being without registration, was heard before Justice Weeren E. Tanner in Union hall. Dyer pleaded guilty to both counts and was fined $10 and costs on the first count and $1 on the second. He paid $45.80. The case was prosecuted by Grand Juror Thomas McDonald.

On Sunday afternoon the Voluntown ball team had as visitors to the local grounds their old rivals from Glasgo in the second game of the season between these teams. IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Intense heat held Norwich in its grip a half century ago, in fact, the heat wave had held steadily for over a month. The mercury seemed to remain over 90 every day and several times crossed the century mark.

There was little news of interest and practically all activities were at a standstill because of the weather conditions.

News taken from the Norwich Bulletin's of the year 1876 is given in part as follows:

Monday, July 17, 1876—The first detention to the steamer Ella on her trips to Watch Hill for three seasons occurred Saturday morning. She made the start as usual but on reaching Allyn's Point it was found that the pumps would not work. The trouble was repaired and she made her trip in the afternoon going back into the regular schedule on Sunday.

The weather yesterday was a pleasant change from that which has held this city in its grip for the past month. Although the mercury stood at 93 there was a fine breeze up the river and this made the day "cool" compared with those preceding it.

A local man who had taken his hens to Crescent beach with him returned home a few days ago and found five chicks in the barn. The eggs had evidently been left there when the hen was taken to the shore and had been hatched out by the heat.

The Stars of Norwich defeated the Quinebeurs of Putnam in a game played at Putnam on Saturday, the score being 14 to 7. Jennings pitched for the local team and Gilbert caught.

Tuesday, July 18, 1876—Sarah Ann Huntington of this city has sent a check for $100 to the committee on the preservation of the historic Old South church of Boston, stating in her letter that she has more than usual love for the old church in as much as she was born under its shadow and was lulled to sleep in childhood by the music of its bell. Her father, the late Rev. Joshua Huntington, was pastor of the church from 1808 to 1819, when he died in early manhood the beloved and cherished friend of many who survived him.

The old red house which has stood half a century a landmark or ancient "Hard Scrabble," has been removed to make way for the new school house which the West Chelsea district is to build on the site. The work of laying the foundation for the new school has already been started and contract being held by A. B. Ladd, a well known builder of this city. The contract price is $4,100, about a $1,000 less than other bids received. The building is to be 38 by 60 feet and will contain four departments.

Norwich people are said going to join the organization recently formed in New York to encourage the use of horseflesh for food. Probable horse flesh would compare well with the beef steak served in some local boarding houses but we hesitate about trying it in this city.

Work at Collin's turbine wheel works and at the Richmond stove works is progressing rapidly and men are now working day and night.

Wednesday, July 19, 1876—P. G. Thomas of Lebanon and a boy working with him in the field were knocked unconscious yesterday when a sudden electrical disturbance took place above their heads. The remarkable and mysterious thing about it is that the sun was shining at the time and the bolt came out of a clear sky.

H. D. Sydleman's chestnut mare Sadie and J. C. Dyer's black mare Vixen are to race at the Fair grounds on August 3rd for a purse of $1,000, the race to be best three out of five heats.

All weather prophets predict rain within another 48 hours and we shall be glad to welcome it. The mercury continues to stand above 90 degrees and we are of the opinion that it has been stuck there as 90° or better has prevailed for nearly ever yday for over a month. Woods are very dry now and several serious fires have been reported, a number of houses being threatened before the blaze could be subdued by parties called out to fight the fires.

By 15 votes Colchester people failed to pass the vote which would have urged the building of a branch road to Turnerville. Another vote is to be taken and it is believed that the railroad will go through.

Thursday, July 20, 1876—The managers of the Connecticut Valley railroad (Saybrook to Hartford) have at last decided to abolish both its leases—the Connecticut Central (Hartford to Massachusetts state line) and the Springfield and New London roads. They will immediately begin to run their own line and unless some arrangements are made New London is apt to be left out in the cold. It is hoped however that Springfield and New London may continue.

Between Monday morning and Friday night of last week 535,000 boxs fish were caught by the sloop, William T. Sherman of Mystic Bridge, Captain E. F. Wilcox. This is considered to be the largest catch to be made in this region in many years. The fish were delivered to the Noyes Neck oil works.

H. K Hammond is building a house on Washington street, below Christ church, to be used for a boarding house. The house will be of pressed brick and three stories high.

Yesterday was one of the hottest days of the season the mercury topping the 100 mark for over four hours. It was a mighty hot day.

People who expect local news on these warm days are warned that it is up to them to do something to make it.

It is over two months since we have had a steady rain in eastern Connecticut. Farmers are fearing that their crops will be ruined unless we have rain, and plenty of it, within the next week.

Friday, July 21, 1876—A meeting is to be held in Franklin hall in the near future for the purpose of organizing a boat club in this city. It is planned to have sufficient members to place at least three six oared boats on the river.

An experiment of turning on the city water yesterday and allowing it to run from a hydrant onto a thermometer failed to send the mercury below 80 degrees. Physicians are claiming that the intense heat of the past few weeks is beginning to have its effect on the community. Ninety-three was the peak figure reached yesterday.

Hundreds of local people are escaping the heat of the city by taking passage on the Ella and enjoying a sail to Watch Hill. The sail is a beautiful one and the breeze from the sea affords much relief to worn out sufferers.

Saturday, July 22, 1876—At the meeting of the Central school district held last evening it was voted that a [illegible] mill tax be laid payable on September 1st, and that E. W. Beckwith be reappointed collector. A resolution was adopted directing the board of rectors to confer with the boards of education in the city with a view consolidating the city districts.

Five excursions left this city yesterday morning, the people being determined to avoid the heat of the city. It was well that they did so for the mercury hit 93 during the afternoon. Someone tells us that a cold wave is coming but it is hard to believe this is true.

Scup have appeared along shore and little blue fish are beginning to make their appearance in the river.

Over 150 letters are at the local post office awaiting their owners. The post addresses are in most part to blame for the increase in the number of letters held up at the office.

IOWA ACTS

Let the democrats tell it and the plunge was all set for a complete republican revolution in Iowa and all the consequences that go therewith, and we doubt not that disappointment, keen and bitter, is the lot of the democrats over the outcome of the Des Moines convention.

Iowa republicans have gotten together. They have met in convention and they have recognized the folly of such tactics as have been employed in the past and the gross mistake that would be made in undertaking to carry out some of the threats. They have realized that there would be no braver sufferers than themselves should their radicalism result in an uprising. The plain, blunt facts were put before them and harmony is the result.

The trouble in Iowa is chiefly Brookhart. He doesn't set any better with a lot of republicans in his own state than with many others throughout the country, but it is a question of whether Iowa is going to send another democratic senator to Washington or Brookhart who has obtained the republican nomination. Brookhart has crashed down off his high horse. He has backed up on his opposition to the administration and the Des Moines convention recognized the advisability of endorsing him rather than giving encouragement to such consequences as the complete upsetting of republican representation in the senate would have involved.

Probably Iowa has more faith in Brookhart than others have. It is known that he got a republican nomination once before only to completely repudiate the party principles and to work against the head of the national ticket. Perhaps that is his game now, but Iowa believes that support of him provides the best way to harmony and party success. They are ready to give him a chance to redeem himself and apparently believe that he will.

In connection with this endorsement of Brookhart by the regular republicans it is to be noted that the convention likewise gave the strongest kind of an endorsement to President Coolidge and his policies. It puts an end to the talk of a rupture which Iowa was expected to bring about.

PRESERVING SHIPS

This week, 25 years after the launching of the whaling ship, Charles W. Morgan. It was dedicated as a memorial to the whaling industry. It is one of those attractive vessels that are almost gone. Where many of them ...de the seas they are to be viewed today chiefly in pictures.

For some time the Charles W. Morgan was conspicuous in New Bedford harbor but for the purpose of insuring its protection and removing it from the ravages of the water it has been taken up on the sand and encased in cement, thus giving it a permanent setting just below New Bedford, where it will be maintained as a museum for whaling relics. This idea has been carried out by Colonel E. H. R. Green and it means that the real article is going to be preserved for the edification and instruction of future generations.

...hich is not only a desirable thing, but it impresses the Boston Transcript as emphasizing the need of permanently preserving some of the historic ships in which the country has great interest, and not solely a representative of a particular type of ship construction. It says, "It will be finer to see to it that the Constitution, with her glorious role in the history of the American navy, is preserved as a lesson in patriotism for the Americans of the years to come. The Constitution offers opportunity for doing that which is appropriate and inspiring. It is opportunity which carries with it a duty. The country owes it to itself to take the necessary steps for the restoration and safeguarding of the famous fighter."

Such sentiments can be enthusiastically seconded. Old Ironsides cannot be allowed to go to ruin or to get into such a state of decay that its reconstruction is made impossible. The time may come when it can no longer be wisely kept afloat but till then national pride and historic interest should insure its preservation. Naturally that prompts action while it is in a condition that makes protective measures possible.

CANTON'S RECORD

The deliberate, cold blooded murder of a newspaper man in Canton, O., because he was engaged in fighting lawlessness in a manner which bothered the lawbreakers awakened widespread attention. It resulted in bringing to light a sad state of affairs not only in connection with that case but many others, when a review of the records of the Canton police department for the past five years shows that there have been 46 murders there in that period.

That means that Canton has been having a murder on an average of every five weeks for half a decade, but when it is also shown that not a single murderer has been given capital punishment there is perhaps furnished one of the reasons why there have been so many murders and why such lawlessness has been winked at so long. With just a little over half of this year gone, Canton has already had ten murders.

From such a record it would appear that there was excellent reason why the newspaperman should have taken up the cudgel against crime in that community. The unfortunate part of it seems to be that he wasn't able to get a greater response from the public and that his efforts to bring about a betterment of conditions precipitated his death.

But is there any reason to suppose that his murderer will fare any different than the others have? Twenty of the slayers are at large, seven have been sentenced for life, six for shorter terms and one or two were able to obtain early paroles. Canton doesn't seem to have been greatly aroused by the wholesale murdering that had been going on there. The record indicates that there was apparently too much sympathy with the lawless element, that efforts to discourage such activity were grossly inadequate and there appears to be no chance that anything different will follow this latest case unless that community manifests a change in sentiment. Canton seems to have been encouraging conditions which were calculated to reach, if not pass, the reputation of Herrin, Ill. Canton's record is a disgrace.

GLARING HEADLIGHTS

When it is reported by the state police department that from such observation as two of the state policemen could make in two nights during this month that there were 1,467 autos noted with glaring headlights, it will cause no surprise to those who have observed just this condition.

That there were no arrests made but warnings given indicates the desire to bring about a better condition through the easiest method which is something that should be appreciated by those auto owners. It should result in attention being given to the focusing of the lights, for the trouble unquestionably resulted from the failure to have the lights properly focused rather than the lack of legal lenses.

Cars are repeatedly noticed with the rays of one light shooting into the trees and those of the other headed toward the ground. Others are shooting straight ahead regardless of the highway and the result of this lack of properly focused lights has the effect of creating glaring headlights to the distress and discomfort of drivers of cars going in the opposite direction.

Because headlights get out of focus frequently it is important that the tests should be frequently made to see that they are in the right condition, and this is particularly true since the motor vehicle department maintains that the bright rather than the dimmed lights should be used for the greatest safety. The large number of cars spotted and warned because of glaring headlights indicates the prevalence of that condition and the need of a common effort to overcome it.

FRANCE'S NEW CHANCE

If it is confidence which the French parliament needs in the makeup of the government heads before giving its sanction to a plan for the adjustment of the nation's financial problems, that would seem to be possible through the cabinet which has been organized by Premier Poincare. It is made up of veterans, premiers and department heads, men who know France, its problems and its people and who should be relied upon to act for the best interests of the nation if it is possible for any ministry to.

Whether parliament has balked and dodged so much that it is now impossible for it to get together on any method of settlement ought to be quickly ascertained. It is fully realized what has been done by the practices of the past and the need which exists for ending the game of politics that has brought about only increased handicaps when relief is what has long been needed.

The record of political contests and jealousies stands out conspicuously. Enough of a test has been made to show that there is no chance of getting anywhere under such practices With a cabinet that should make as good an impression at home as it does outside of the country, the stage would seem to be set for real constructive action by buckling down to the work that must be faced and furnishing the necessary authority to accomplish it.

The fact that the present cabinet has public confidence should not only give it heart but should make its impression upon parliament. France not only waits results with anxiety but the eyes of other nations are centered thereon.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

The papers have recently announced the death of the gentle Frenchman, Emile Coue, whose boom most brought him into prominence: "Every day, in every way I'm growing better and better." This doctrine was first cousin to Christian Science, yet in some particulars there was a difference. His doctrine was an extreme statement of auto-suggestion, and along many lines and in dealing with a certain class of ailments, one can see where it might be helpful. This applies to nervous disorders where the attitude of the mind has a considerable influence over the physical. But when it comes to such serious matters as organic diseases, and especially to the incurable, it is perfectly absurd to believe that the repetition of any formula has any intrinsic worth. In face of fatal disease the hour of disillusion is inevitable. Still there is no question that the honest Coue with his pleasing personality did a lot of good.

The Bible speaks of "the strait gate" to teach a great moral lesson. The word, however, is not used as the opposite of "crooked." The spelling clearly indicates that the word "strait" refers to a narrow gate, and consequently one that is hard to pass through. The full force of the gospel meaning here does not come to us with the vividness as it did to the people living long ago in Bible lands, where a far greater use was made of gates than with us. We frequently come across sentences like these, "He came to the gates of the city," or, "within the gates of Jerusalem. We are told of things that happened "outside the gates of Rome." These expressions are perfectly natural in those countries where the cities were walled for protection. We do not speak of the gates of a modern American city.

It is a clearly-known fact that many of these gates, perhaps most of them, were so narrow that a man carrying a great burden on his back could not pass through, until he had laid his burden down. Now this fact helps us to understand some passages in the Bible—one in particular—that would be very confusing and perplexing were it not for this knowledge concerning gates. I refer to that passage where the Master says, "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God." If we take that passage literally there can be but one interpretation and that is the impossibility of a rich man's entrance into the kingdom of God. This of course would be sheer injustice. But the reference is to the Needle Gate of Jerusalem which is so narrow that a camel must kneel down to get through and with the burden taken off. Hence the meaning is not the impossibility, but the difficulty, or the rich man with his burden getting through.

This subject was brought up by a question asked the Master by one of his wayside hearers as to the number of the saved. No direct answer was given to the question, but instead a little homily was preached on The Strait Gate. "Strive to enter in at the strait gate" said the Master, and from these words and others that follow, there are two main things that He makes clear; first, it is desirable to enter this gate, and secondly, it can be done only with adequate preparation. We must strive to enter in. Ultra-Calvinism on the one hand and extreme liberalism on the other fail to give us the process. If it was foreordained that an exact number should enter then all striving is useless. On the other hand it is ridiculous to believe that no preparation is necessary. We are to strive, and no striving will fail.

Among the sayings I have come across in my recent reading is this: "You never count a man's years until he has nothing else to count." It is not until everything else worth living for has slipped through his nerveless grasp that he works the "days of his pilgrimage" for all they are worth. The grandest sight on this earth without exception is the 50-year old man right on to his job with interest and energy. Why not, if the years have been just what they ought to have been? We are coming to realize that the length of our days are going to be just about what we want them to be. Not only is a man "the architect of his own fortune," but he is to an extent greater than is generally realized the builder of his own house. It is largely for him to say just what that house shall be; shall it be of stone, brick, wood, hay or stubble? If he begins to have backaches and indigestion at 50, then the neighborhood will begin to talk about his age.

Has the public at large any right to forcibly prohibit freedom of speech? The spirit that urges any man or community to dictate what others shall think and say is the basis of mob law. When this is done on any scale democracy steps out and imperialism steps in. The more intelligent a people are the greater will be their diversity of views on any subject because they refuse to have beliefs on any subject handed to them ready made. I have in mind the meeting of the Fellowship for Peace at Concord a month ago. They believed in lifting up their voices against the perpetuation of war. Yet not only were jeers and insults hurled at them, but eggs, stones, and bombs. They seemed to have had no public protection, and yet this was Concord, once the home of Ralph Waldo Emerson, Nathaniel Hawthorne, A. Bronson Alcott and Henry D. Thoreau. "How are the mighty fallen!"

I have never happened to run across a better definition of a boy than the following: "He is a restless perplexity in breeches." He is an amazing fact capable of unlimited development. Now this bundle of energy is on his way somewhere; just where nobody knows who has anything to do with him, neither has he the least idea himself. The ideal he has before him changes with every mood. His first great idol is the fellow who can pull off wonderful physical stunts. He imagines that with little practice he can rival Babe Ruth, and he measures the growth of his biceps twice a week. These early heroes, however, are not very firmly fixed on their pedestal; many of them have to come down as the boy's imagination changes, and this happens very often. The wise parent or teacher will not attempt to smash these, but will tactfully introduce him to others. In bringing up a boy it is fatal to attempt to stultify this restlessness, but rather to guide it.

Every serious event brings us face to face with the background of mystery. The raising of a submarine off the coast of Block Island with its gruesome find brings the question before us again with puzzling vividness. The more recent destruction of a government community in New Jersey with its vast store of high explosives intensifies the question. It is beyond all human knowledge to determine how far—if at all—the Almighty would be justified in interfering with the natural course of law. Just how far would He be justified in keeping man from committing blunders, and especially in keeping him from criminal carelessness. Taking the working of natural law, by and large, it does vastly more good than it would to trim it down to meet individual cases.

Few of us become round-shouldered from carrying other people's burdens.

INDUSTRIAL NEW ENGLAND NEEDS NEW VITALITY.

Almost every section of the country has had attention in the past few years except New England and yet New England probably needs attention more than most. New England of today is not the New England of old. Many acute observers see New England slipping slowly but surely. In that case, what of its industries, its investments? Where are conditions strong, where are they weak? It is for the purpose of describing the situation, without prejudice or preconceived notions that the writer, long a New England resident, and intimately in touch with conditions there, prepared this article for The Magazine of Wall Street.

New England has enjoyed the fruits of a wonderful past. It was once the home of the majority of the skilled mechanics of this country. Many of its industries held first place in the volume and quality of their products, namely the boot and shoe factories, the textile mills, paper mills, and the makers of machine tools. Its institutions of learning are old and rank with the best in the country, as people of native birth are descended from high grade stock.

Yet today New England is facing many problems where conditions are not as favorable as they were once. Its textile industry has just passed through one of the worst readjustments in its history and the end is not yet. Nor is the shoe industry what it used to be in point or volume of the product and number of factories. Many companies have moved west. Further, some of the machine tool makers have migrated west or succumbed to competition from that section of the country. The carpet industry is getting severe competition from mills in New York and around Pennsylvania. Many of its paper mills are not in the financial position they once boasted.

But the picture is not altogether black. New England banks are probably in the best condition in their history. Maine still boasts a large potato crop, Hatfield raises onions and Connecticut its tobacco. Hartford is the insurance center. Electric power companies are utilizing the general resources to a greater extent than ever before. Many of the street railways are reviving. The New Haven road, as we know, has had a remarkable comeback. Mercantile stores are bigger and better than ever before. To many at home, there seems to be nothing really the matter.

When I consider this subject I cannot but be reminded of the recent remarks of a prominent capitalist. Among other things, he said that there are three kinds of generations. The first generations worked hard and built up a large growing business with subsequent financial success and a fine reputation. The second generation came along and kept what they inherited but didn't add much thereto. The third generation came along bragging about their past and from that time on the family tree began to decline.

Perhaps we have too much past to think about in New England. It seems a fact that the progeny of very successful business men often do not have qualities to place them in the same category with their illustrious parents. There are, I am afraid, too many of the "third generation" in New England.

If New England ever does fall back permanently it will be because of several fundamental conditions. These are, principally: (1) labor problems; (2) the tax situation; and (3) the lack of initiative in adopting modern method of advertising, a weakness which is very typical of New England. Compare how New England does this with, say, Florida, California or the middle west.

New England has had its share of labor problems, and they are by no means solved. Let us compare labor conditions there with those of the south. New England's working populace is now composed of almost every race. Old line New England families are fast dying out. Its laboring class is highly organized in many lines.

The south, on the other hand, has its white and negro population. Its white population, either solid southern stock or "poor whites," offer no labor problem. And the negro is no problem whatsoever due to customs which have always prevailed.

A general superintendent of a northern knitting mill went down to inspect the southern plant that his concern had recently started. He told me that there was no comparison in the attitude of the southern worker with that of the northern worker. Down there he stated that they do as they are told with "no questions asked." He seemed to think he was in another world of industry. A great many manufacturers in New England who have suffered from labor conditions look upon the manufacturer in the south with envy.

Another hindrance to progress in New England, in my opinion, is the matter of taxes, and this is particularly true in the case of Massachusetts. Our state income tax makes citizens of other states gasp in amazement when they are informed of what have to give up from outside income. While other states carry no indebtedness and charge tolls to pay for their bridges, we have to carry large bond issues. City and local taxes are high enough. Even our poll taxes are regarded as high by people in other states. This tax situation certainly is no help in advancing New England and probably restraining others from residing here. We can't hope to compete with a state that has no burdensome income nor inheritance taxes. Of course, the tax situation applies a great deal more to people of means.

But when all is said and done the main trouble with us in New England seems to be that we have not been wide awake enough and up-and-coming as we should have been. For instance, I have often picked up some magazine and seen advertisements of chambers of commerce from other sections of the country. St. Louis says, "Ship from the center of the wheel," or something to that effect and portrays a cut showing that city to be the geographical center of national industry.

Other chambers advertise in a similar way. But I notice you seldom see many exploiting the advantages of New England. We should coin some good trade marks and use them. This section of the country is one of the garden spots of the world in summer. We should advertise for the tourist. We could say, "Spend your winters in Florida and your summers in New England." If you have anything to sell today you must tell the world how good it is because the competition is so keen that people don't have to exert themselves any to satisfy their demands but they only have to consider what is constantly pushed at them.

Another measure which, if adopted, would add materially to industrial New England would be more concentrated effort in interesting new industries and concerns to locate in the section. The concerns to locate in this field. It has always been a question if there has been much organized effort in a big way to bring this thing about. Do we do as much to bring business to New England as the south and west do to their respective sections?

Experience has proved that other sections of the country will go as far as to build factories, donate a building site, and make all sorts of inducements to bring new enterprises to their locality. Contrast this with the statement made to me recently by a general superintendent of one of the mills of a nationally known concern whose headquarters are in New England, but which has recently purchased and is now operating two southern mills in addition thereto. The headquarters of this concern are located in a prosperous and attractive suburb of one of our largest New England cities. Much of the activity and prosperity of this community can be directly or indirectly traced to the presence of this concern in the town. And yet, this superintendent said that he was confounded to learn that the town officials had recently passed a zoning ordinance or something of that nature which would prohibit the rebuilding of this company's factories if by chance should be destroyed. Concentrated effort is the only way to bring new business to New England and right treatment of them when we get them here to hold them.

In the last analysis, the future of New England can best be solved from within. Its best sponsors are its own individuals. If things are not right, its our own fault. The world is all right. If we are living in terms of the past, the future will be neglected and decay. Conservatism is a fine attribute if not overworked. Too much of it never spells progress. Methods of yesterday may be obsolete today. Times are changing and we must change with them. I love to read of the glories of New England's past and of those brave farmers down in the eastern part of Massachusetts who rose up in righteous wrath and drove the British invaders back to Lexington and Concord. You never can tell what a New England Yankee will do until you get him stirred up. I am one of those business men who are sufficiently optimistic to believe that there is still enough of that good old stuff smouldering in the souls of enough influential New Englanders that if it can be aroused to action, this section of the country can and will give the rest of the country a "good run for their money" in spite of the severe competition.

New England has yet to learn that if it is to compete successfully with the rest of the hustling, bustling United States it will have to use modern measures of exploitation. Otherwise, investors and business men will be attracted to other parts of the country where progress is the keynote and where the opportunities are sufficiently within reach to make the effort worth while.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Sir George H. Perley, who is holding the state portfolio in the new dominion cabinet, is a native of New Hampshire and a graduate of Harvard, but Ottawa, the Canadian capital, has been his home since infancy. Before entering public life he had gained wealth and a wide reputation in the business world. He first came prominently before the public in 1912, when he was appointed acting premier by Premier Bordmen during the absence of that statesman in England. From 1917 to 1922 Sir George served as High Commissioner for Canada in London. In 1916 he was appointed minister of overseas military forces for Canada in the United Kingdom. During the post-war period he served as Canada's representative at several of the European peace conferences.

Sunday Morning Talk

Repentance

John prepared the way by his preaching repentance unto remission of sins, and the approach of the kingdom of heaven. There was the severest denunciation of sin, and the boldest rebuke of wrong-doing, not from the wish that harm should come upon them, not with the desire of vengeance, but always with the desire that men should repent and be saved from threatened woes.

The one absolutely necessary condition was repentance and forsaking of sin. Most of the people were looking for some easier way, as men now wish to go to heaven, but cannot without casting away all that is unheavenly and having the heavenly character formed within them. A king however mighty, a victory over Roman authority, however great, outward prosperity, however abundant, could never bring the promised blessedness. There was only one way—repent. Therefore, John denounced sins. He showed their evil and danger. He was personal, direct and fearless. He was vivid in his illustrations.

Therefore there went out to him the inhabitants of Jerusalem, practically the whole city and all Judaea. He did not go to them, they went to him, as the hungry go where there is food and the cold where there is fire, and the poor where there is a gold mine, no matter how desert and difficult the place.

What drew these crowds? To hear such a man denounce their sins? The terrible denunciations of sin touched their moral nature and almost fascinated them into listening. Perhaps feeling guilty, they wanted to hear the other men's sins brought to light. There was the hope of forgiveness with the condemnation. John pointed out a way of escape. It was not the terror of despair, but of urgency to use the means of deliverance. John preached to their needs. He said what they needed, what their souls hungered for in their innermost depths. The earnestness of the preacher who thoroughly believed in what he said, what he preached was true, and they knew it. His courage was sublime, for he condemned to their face the very leaders, the Jewish authorities, even Herod himself who by his conduct was ruining the nation, was warned to his face. John was no respecter of persons, but spoke the truth though it cost him his life. There was a general religious awakening.

Thus their personal needs, their patriotism, their interest in the welfare of their country, awakened an interest which prepared their minds to consider the claims of the gospel; just as now, in our country.

There must be an open and decisive stand for Christ, both for the individual and for the public.

Men do not enlist in a war secretly, as if ashamed of their colors, their banners, their uniforms, their associations, all declare where they stand, they are not spending a part of the time with the enemy. No, we would call them traitors to the cause. Our noblest soldiers stand true at all times. Let it be loyalty to Christ at all times and all places.

HOW WOULD YOU GO

From Norwich to Meriden or Waterbury?

There are two routes from Norwich to Meriden, both having good roads and bringing the driver through interesting towns.

One route would be by way of Colchester, a distance of 16 miles from Norwich, then to Marlboro and over to Middletown, an additional 23 miles and from there to Meriden, an additional ten miles, making a trip of approximately 50 miles.

Another route would be by way of the Norwich-Middletown highway, through Salem and from Middletown to Meriden. This route would cover approximately 43 miles.

Waterbury is reached by continuing through Meriden, on a direct road west, about 14 miles.

Other small cross roads could be used but the wheeling would not be as good as that on the main thoroughfares.

In her lesson at St. Joseph's school, Tuesday evening, Miss Peckham gave a demonstration in cooking an oven dinner to a class of 54, each working eagerly for a certificate at the conclusion of the course of six lessons.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Danny Sees a Clam

Consider now the lowly clam:
He's free of guile and free from sham.
—Old Mother Nature.

Danny Meadow Mouse didn't think he was free from guile, though. You see, he had given Danny both eyes full of water, salt water at that. But it was Danny's own fault and not the fault of the clam. Danny had no business to be peeking down that hole in the mud.

Presently, peeping out from the grass Danny discovered Tattler the Yellow-legs coming back and picking up things from the mud as he came along. Just as he was in front of

"What is a clam?" demanded Danny

Danny a little stream of water squirted out of the mud in front of Tattler. "Oh, Tattler," cried Danny, "what did that?"

Tattler paused to look at Danny. "What did what?" he asked.

"What made that water squirt up out of the mud in front of you just now?"

"Oh," said Tattler, "a clam did that."

"What is a clam?" demanded Danny.

"Ha, ha, ha! Ho, ho, ho! The idea of not knowing what a clam is!" cried Tattler. A clam is—why, it's a clam. My goodness! Here comes one of those two-legged creatures. You watch him and you'll see clams, for he is coming after clams, or I am greatly mistaken." With this Tattler flew, whistling, away across the broad green marsh.

Danny remained safely hidden in the grass, but where he could peep out and see all that happened on the mud flat. The man had a pail and a queer-looking hoe. It was a hoe with teeth like a rake. He stopped right in front of where Danny was and began to hoe up the mud. He began hoeing where Danny saw all those little holes. He was really digging. Every once in a while he stooped and picked up something and tossed it into a pail. Danny wondered what it was he was tossing into the pail. By and by he tossed something over that fell close to Danny. You should have seen Danny scamper. Little by little Danny's courage returned until finally he crept back to see what it was that had fallen there. He found something that at once reminded him of the fresh-water clams he had seen Jerry Muskrat opening and eating, only this was white. The shell had been broken, and that was why the man had thrown it away. Danny could see inside that broken shell. There was something that reminded him again of those fresh-water clams he had seen Jerry Muskrat eating.

By and by the man had a pailful of these things and off he went. Danny stole out to see where the man had been digging. He found a number of small things like the one that had been thrown up beside him, only these were not broken. He saw one of them push a long neck out of one end and presently squirt water. Just then along came Tattler the Yellow-legs.

"Well," said Tattler, "I see you have found out what a clam is."

"Are those clams?" Danny asked rather stupidly.

"Of course, they're clams!" replied Tattler. "See, there is one with his shell partly open. If you want to get pinched good and hard, just put a paw in there."

"No, thank you," replied Danny, and even as he spoke that clam closed its shell and withdrew the long neck inside. "I suppose," said Danny, "that if Jimmy Skunk were here he would say that those were fish."

"I don't know what Jimmy would say," replied Tattler, "but clams are called shellfish. There are several kinds of clams. This one is called the Soft-shelled Clam and is found mostly in sand and mud of such places as this."

"Huh!" said Danny. "I don't call that shell soft." You see, Danny had been trying his teeth on a bit of shell that he had found.

Tattler chuckled. "Well, it may not be soft, but it breaks a lot easier than the shells of some other clams," said he.

This New Engineering Idea has revolutionized America's performance standards

THE day of the slow, cumbersome, bulky automobile has gone. A safer . . . more active . . . more powerful type of car has come to take its place.

The old school of engineering practice is rapidly passing out of existence. A new regime of scientific thought has started in America.

The change began 18 months ago.

When the Overland Six was first introduced it marked a revolutionary departure from all former standards of design.

This new car embodies the most advanced . . . the most efficient engineering . . . from both sides of the world.

It is a complete new car . . . brilliantly engineered as a unit. Not a modern body on a chassis that is 5 or 10 years old.

It is a car built to meet present-day performance standards.

You can drive it at an average road speed of 40 to 55 miles an hour without excessive strain on the engine.

Its "high-torque" power plant has ample power to master the steepest hills. Gear shifting has been reduced to a minimum.

It has a low gravity center. An outstanding engineering feature due to these modern principles of design. This means greater safety at all speeds. It means protection against sideway and skidding.

And it means comfort such as you've never known before.

Buy a modern car if you want flashing, brilliant performance. Be sure you have these modern principles of design if you seek the utmost resale value.

Don't buy blindfolded. See the Overland Six and find out how modern engineering science has contributed to the safety, security and comfort of motoring.

NOTE: 4-wheel brakes are furnished at slight extra cost.

PETE'S MONEY TROUBLES LEAVE HIM PUZZLED

BEIRUT, July 23 (AP)—Peter Saladjian—or Pete Salad as he was known among the miners in the Scranton and Wilkesbarre districts—returned to his native Syria a few days ago after spending five years in the United States.

Peter lived well within one tenth of his income and he left New York with over ten thousand dollars, a fortune here.

Passing through France, Pete with an ever alert eye for business, noted the dollar at its highest peak on the exchange market—a little over 35 francs—and he converted two thousand or his American bills into French currency.

When Pete arrived in the United States in 1920, his entire fortune consisted of less than two hundred dollars and he was detained for some time at Ellis Island and given an opportunity to demonstrate why he should not be refused admittance, on the grounds that he might become a public charge.

"How much money have you got?" the Customs officer asked Peter as he stepped on the wharf here.

With vivid recollection of Ellis Island and his narrow escape from expulsion, Pete drew out a fat wallet, tapped it proudly and said, "Seventy thousand francs and a little over seven thousand dollars."

Sixty-five thousand French francs were taken away from him and he was given the equivalent in Syrian piastres but not before he had been fined, Frcs. 500.

"Don't you know it is against the law to take out of France more than Frcs. 5000 in French bills?" the Customs officer asked Peter. "Don't let it happen again or you go to jail."

"This is a funny world," Pete soliloquized. "In the United States they wanted to throw me out because I didn't have enough money and here they want to throw me in jail because I have too much."

WHITEMAN TELLS VIENNA MUSICIANS OF JAZZ

VIENNA, July 23.—(AP)—"Jazz is a handsome child trying to make his way in the world," Paul Whiteman told leaders of the Vienna music world here, and the phrase caught the imagination of his visitors as do his own musical productions.

"The handsome child may be spoiled in making his way but he has a fine chance to win out," he said. "Everybody is interested in him wherever he goes, and the whole world is at all times keen after a new form of something, be it dress or dance or travel. Jazz is being given a fair hearing."

CAN NOT FOLLOW AMERICAN FILM PRODUCTION, HE SAYS

LONDON, July 23 (AP)—Sir Edward Stoll who is engaged in film production in Great Britain and also controls many moving-picture houses, believes it is impossible under economic conditions in England to finance film production on the lavish lines followed by some American producers.

"Walking that one may learn to run is very expensive in film production," says Sir Edward. "D. W. Griffith is a master of the art. He made 311,000 feet of negative in order to deliver a finished negative of 13,000 feet.

Revive Formal Dress

LONDON, July 23 (AP)—A revival of dress-for-the-theater custom which lapsed during the war, again is well on the way and has received an impetus from the authorities at Covent Garden.

CHAIRMAN PERKINS OUTLINES DUTIES OF VARIOUS BARBECUE COMMITTEES

Indications are that between 10,000 and 15,000 people will attend the monster barbecue which the Thames Valley Citizens' committee is fostering, said Herbert R. Branche, secretary of the committee, Friday night. Mr. Branche made this statement following a meeting of the general committee and sub-committees in charge of the barbecue plans. The meeting which had an attendance of nearly 100 and which was held at the Mohican hotel, New London, was a most enthusiastic gathering. The consensus of the committeemen is that the barbecue will be the greatest event of its kind ever held in eastern Connecticut.

Robert W. Perkins, chairman of the general committee, presided at the meeting and after his preliminary remarks outlined the programme of work that the Thames valley committee is engaged in. He told of the plans the committee has to put eastern Connecticut on the map through systematic advertising.

Chairman Perkins outlined the duties of the various barbeque committees as follows:

Committee on Resolutions—It is the desire and expectation of the general committee that the barbecue of mass meeting later to be held in the Thames valley shall be self sustaining.

The committee on resources is appointed for the purpose of devising a plan by which this end may be accomplished, and the suggestion is that tickets, which should include general admission to all of the activities of the event might be sold through the various organizations taking part therein—or that possibly two types of tickets might be sold, one covering admission and the other covering refreshments.

It will be the duty of this committee to lay out a detailed plan to accomplish the desired result and submit it to a meeting of the general committee to be called within the next two or three weeks.

Committee on Invitations—To this committee is given the responsibility of recommending to the general committee the names of men of sufficient prominence in the nation to add to the pulling power of the affair as a whole, and also men of sufficient prominence in the state of Connecticut to justify their being treated as guests of the occasion—and upon approval of this list by the general committee to send out, by authority of the general committee, formal invitations and secure their attendance.

This list should be prepared and ready for presentation to the general committee at a meeting to be called within the next two or three weeks.

Committee on Athletics—It is the desire of the general committee that the committee on athletics prepare a general programme that shall include athletic events of various classes to occupy practically the entire time from from 10.30 to 11 o'clock in the morning to about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, drawing the contestants or participants from the various organizations in eastern Connecticut, and, if possible, through the help of the committee on resources, make the prizes sufficiently attractive to appeal to the amateurs throughout the state.

We want to make this feature of the day's entertainment sufficiently attractive to draw attention from all over the state of Connecticut, and to make the publicity resulting therefrom of importance enough to call for publication in the metropolitan dailies.

A programme should be promptly prepared, with an estimate of the expense involved, including such prizes as the committee recommends, and presented to a meeting of the general committee to be called within the next two or three weeks.

Committee on Boy Scouts—It is the desire of the general committee that the committee on Boy Scouts arrange to make use of the Boy Scouts under such conditions as to interest them as well as the general public, their activities to include contests of various sorts, and also to make use of the boys as orditles, or in any other way that may be suggested by the committee.

The contests to occupy a considerable amout of time, possibly extending throughout the entire day, for it is the belief of the general committee that the attendance will be such that we will be justified in planning for a sort of three ring circus, so that one activity will not, in any way, interfere with or detract from another.

Together with the programme, which should be presented in writing, there should be estimates of any expense which may be involved, and suggested as to transportation for the boys, if transportation is needed.

Committee on barbecue and refreshments: This committee is involved in the obligation of devising, and submitting to the general committee, at a meeting later to be called, a plan for providing a barbecue and such other refreshments as they may deem necessary or advisable, and, later, carry out the plan approved by the general committee.

It is by the general committee thought that a barbecue is desirable, largely, because of its novelty, but the question of whether this should be included as a part of the consideration for which tickets will be sold, or should be treated as a matter entirely distinct from the other activities of the mass meeting, is one that requires careful consideration, and perhaps would be largely influenced by the nature of the gathering and the facilities of the place which may be decided upon.

It has been suggested that concessions for the sale of refreshments of various kinds might be sold or rented.

In considering this, the effect upon the general resources of the event as a whole should be given careful consideration.

Committee on publicity: On this committee will devolve the responsibility of keeping constantly before the public, through the daily papers, and in such other ways as may be devised, the fact that a barbecue is to be held in the Thames valley, and to see to it that on the day of the event the publicity be given the widest possible circulation.

This committee should work in the closest co-operation with H. R. Branche, secretary of the Thames Valley Citizens committee, who is now roving particular attention to this matter of publicity.

In the event that the committee finds it necessary to plan a campaign that involves the expenditure of money, the plan should, first, be submitted to the general committee before assuming any financial obligation.

Committee on time and place: On this committee will devolve the obligation of suggesting a location for the event, with the definite understanding that it must be at some point bordering on the Thames river, easy of approach by rail or bus transportation, as well as by automobile, with ample parking facilities and such other facilities as are necessary for an affair of the character proposed.

Time: That will, naturally, be dictated, partly, by the result of the activities of the committee on invitations, for it is the desire of the general committee that we secure for this occasion men of prominece, not only within but without the state of Connecticut; if possible, men of national prominence, who will, by their acceptance, add importance to the event.

It will be the duty of this committee to carefully investigate all of the locations, of which many have been offered and suggested, and make a written report to the general committee at a meeting later to be called.

After outlining the committees' duties Mr. Perkins stated that considerable thought and time had been spent on the selection of chairmen and vice chairmen of the various committees. The list of chairmen and vice chairmen of the seven committees, as approved, follows:

Time and place, James G. Hammond, chairman; Hon. Nelson J. Ayling, vice chairman.

Barbeque and refreshments, Adelard Morin, chairman; Joseph Keefe, vice chairman.

Publicity, Leroy A. Nash, chairman; John J. O'Rourke, vice chairman.

Resources, James L. Case, chairman; E. E. Regan, vice chairman.

Athletics, James Pedace, chairman; Cornelius Costello, vice chairman.

Invitations, John M. Lee, chairman; William A. Holt, vice chairman.

Boy Scouts contest, F. E. Burdick, chairman; E. V. Ross, vice chairman.

During the evening the various subcommittees held meetings at which there were general discussions of the plans for the barbecue. A meeting of the general committee will be called within a week or two at which time reports from the sub-committees, which will hold meetings in the meantime, will be received and acted upon.

Greer as supervisor of the Mansfield schools was made here by Mrs. R. E. Stearns, chairman of the Mansfield school committee.

Mr. Garrison's appointment is for the approaching school year, and it is made by the state board of education. He is a graduate of Trenton Normal school, and he also studied educational methods at Yale and New York university.

The action of the school committee in voting to close the grade school at Eagleville follows closely on the recommendation of Director of Rural Education Light, who in his report on a survey of the Mansfield school situation stated that the pupils of Eagleville could be better served if they were transported to a school in another section of the town. Beginning next September Eagleville students will attend the Mansfield Depot school.

EXPEDITION MAY THROW NEW LIGHT ON HISTORY

MONROE, Neb., July 23 (AP)—New light is expected to be thrown on early history of the west through excavations being made in the cornfields along Looking Glass creek north of here by E. E. Blackman, curator of the Nebraska State Historical society.

The curator expects to discover relics and evidence which will establish the site of the massacre by Indians in 1720 of a Spanish caravan under the command of Colonel Villasur. The massacre, which long has been a matter of dispute among historians of the west, marked the halt of Spanish conquests to the north during the 18th century.

Recently discovered documents, located in Spain and France by A. B. Thomas of the University of California, and the discovery of bits of chain armor and ancient coins resulted in the present search for concrete evidence to establish the exact location of the massacre.

Colonel Don Pedro de Villasur was despatched from Santa Fe to conduct a reconnaissance of the French along the Missouri.

In August, 1720, the caravan came upon the Pawnees. The Spanish cavaliers were received with friendly greetings by the Indians and an interpreter was sent to parley with the savages. For two days, Villasur waited fruitlessly for reply. Fearing treachery he decided to retreat and retraced a day's journey where camp was made for the night.

The break of dawn the following day found the Spaniards astir making ready to continue southward. Suddenly in the confusion of breaking camp the party was swept by a murderous fire of shot and arrows. Colonel Villasur and virtually his entire party were slain before a defense could be organized.

SAXAPHONE COMES FORWARD IN A NEW ROLE—CRIME PREVENTOR

ELKHART, Ind., July 23 (AP)—Young America is safely blowing away its excessive and sometimes dangerous energy through the saxaphone, the sliding trombone and similar instruments, in the opinion of C. D. Greenleaf, of Elkhart, president of the National association of Band and Instrument Manufacturers.

"It is a serious problem with many parents in these days to find wholesome methods of recreation for their children, and the band and orchestra furnish one solution," Mr. Greenleaf said.

"They furnish an ideal outlet for the energies of the 'gang' which might otherwise be expressed in ways not nearly so healthful. The growing interest in music among our young people will, in my judgment, in a few years make America a musical nation."

JAPANESE STUDENTS TOLD KING'S ENGLISH BETTER

TOKYO, July 23 (AP)—Sir John Tilley, British ambassador to Japan, is in disagreement with certain American savants regarding the comparative quality of "English as she is spoke" on either side of the Atlantic.

He informed students of a Tokyo graduating class that "with all respect to our American friends," the proper place to learn the language is in England, "where the language was formed."

While England's English is not to be compared to America's English, Sir John said, continued friendship between Great Britain, America and Japan is absolutely necessary for the general welfare of the world.

SKINNY, 28 YEAR OLD PONY, WINS ANNUAL POLO MEDAL

CHICAGO, July 23 (AP)—A 28-year-old pony, Skinny, which has played polo every season since 1906, heads the list of 74 winners or annual medals awarded for the best membership in the United States Polo association.

Three more of the ponies receiving the medals for the 1925 season were more than 16 years old, and more then half of them were over seven years old. The youngest was five.

Before he sold Skinny to D. L. McCarthy, of the Toronto Polo club, Major General McBrien frequently used to ride him through four chukkers. Mr. McCarthy has played him regularly since he bought him.

PRISCILLA'S BEAUTY AID WAS SNOW AND IT WAS FREE

CULVER CITY, Cal., July 23 (AP)—Vanity, vanity, all is vanity!

Even the demure, modest Puritan maiden, it was recently discovered, had her beauty "question and answer box." Unlike flappers of the modern day, with their rouges, lip sticks, mascaras and what not, the Puritan flapper's cosmetics did not cost a penny.

Research for Lillian Gish's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, The Scarlet Letter, shows that the only means allowed young girls of the time for embellishing their complexion was a rather severe form of endeavor.

"For ye complexion," says an old manuscript in the archives, "Ye young girl may wash the face in snow, the tingling cold bringing forth ye blood and importing a rich glow of health which is ye true beauty."

TWINS ARE SO MUCH ALIKE THAT EAR MARKS ARE NECESSARY

TOKYO, July 23 (AP)—Feature of feature, inch for inch and ounce for ounce, Kazuo Kaneko and Tsuguo Kaneko, twins, are so much alike that even their parents were unable to distinguish between them. In voice, manners, likes and dislikes they are dublicates.

Called to the colors, recently, the examining officers could find no identifying marks so were forced to affix marks to their ear lobes so that commanding officers might know to which one they were giving orders.

Movie Camera A Witness

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 23 (AP)—The amateur movie camera has been called into court as a witness.

A laborer sued the local street railway company, charging he had become lame as the result of an accident. After the plaintiff had introduced medical testimony to support his contention, the defendant brought in the motion picture.

The film showed the laborer leaving his home, bounding down the steps with the air of an athlete. Then, as he neared a doctor's office, he registered lameness. Defense counsel had employed a photographer, who had wrapped his cine-kodak in paper to get the evidence.

The court denied the indemnity and held the plaintiff for perjury.

Jap Students Coming Here

WASHINGTON, July 23.—(AP)—The idea of American university students going abroad, especially to Europe, for a summer tour, is to have an Oriental counterpart.

One hundred Japanese students will reach Pacific coast cities for a brief sojourn as the first step in what its promoters expect to be an influence for mutual good-will between the two countries. The program calls for an annual interchange of students, the Americans going to the Island Kingdom to gain clearer understanding of that country, and the Japanese coming to the United States for a like object.

ANDRE MESSAGER COMES OUT STRONG FOR JAZZ

PARIS, July 23 (AP)—The Condescending attitude hitherto assumed by musical Paris toward jazz as a form of music received a decided shock when it found a highly respected composer like Andre Messager among the admirers of jazz.

The composer of Veronique, Beaucaire and other works which count as classics in light opera, has come out with the declaration, "I adore jazz American jazz!" And I am not the only musician to love it! How can a musician fail to love jazz? It has brought us new rythms, new harmonies, a new instrumentation and has awakened in us new sensations. In short, it has created something new . . . to create something new . . .

"In France we don't know what real jazz is, with a very few exceptions, and as a specimen of true jazz, Messager out George Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue on his gramaphone.

Garden Finds New Opera

PARIS, July 23 (AP)—Chicago will have the first hearing of a new French opera next season.

Emile Bergerat's play, More Than Queen has been set to music by the composer, Marcel Bertrand. Mary Garden, after hearing Madame Cortot and David Devries go through the libretto and the score, decided to produce the work in Chicago at the beginning of next season, taking the role of Josephine herself.

The work will be given in Paris next spring, under Mary Garden's direction, at one of the theaters under the management of the Brothers Isola, formerly directors of the Opera Comique.

Philippine Sugar Crop Drops

MANILA, P. I., July 23 (AP)—The latest estimate of the 1925-1926 cane sugar crop of the Philippine Islands is 375,000 tons, which is approximately 135,000 tons below the previous crop.

Advices indicate that the 1926-27 yield will be much larger.

LEGAL ENTANGLEMENTS CALL HALT ON PLANS FOR DEMPSEY-TUNNEY BOUT

CHICAGO, July 24.—(AP)—Tex Rickard's plans for holding a world's championship fight between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney in Chicago next September came to a sudden and abrupt halt tonight when his attorneys, after examining the contracts held by E. E. Clements of the Chicago Coliseum club, advised Rickard that Clements had "A Fairly Good Claim" on the champion's services for a match with Harry Wills, the negro thaHenger.

Rickard, still professing every hope that he would be able to stage the Dempsey-Tunney contest as planned September 11, immediately plunged into the task of untangling the legal entanglements involving the champion's signature. He declined to reveal, however, just what steps would be taken to clear away the obstacles confronting him. He had a long session tonight with the group of Chicagoians who are associated with him in the venture.

"I can't say a thing or do a thing until this contract business is settled," Rickard said. "My attorneys tell me that Clements has a claim on Dempsey's services. Until this is adjusted, my plans are at a standstill."

Seldon Clark, millionaire vice-president of the Sinclair Oil Company, confirmed reports tonight he would be associated with Rickard in promoting the Dempsey-Tunney contest in Chicago, and that seven other Chicagoans, all of them prominent and wealthy, also would be interested.

Clark declared that neither he nor his associates would share in the profits, but consented to aid Rickard in handling the fund for charity. Rickard's plans provide for guaranteeing $100,000 to be evenly divided between the policemens' and firemens' widows and orphans funds.

Roy Cannon, a Milwaukee attorney, with a reputation as an authority on sports contracts, conferred with Rickard today at the New York promoter's request. Cannon, a one-time friend of Dempsey and his former manager Jack Kearns, drew up the managerial contract between Dempsey and Kearns which expires next August 3, and was called to Huntington, W. Va., a few weeks ago to go over the legal points of the Dempsey-Wills contract signed at Niles, Michigan, last September. Cannon is reported to have advised Rickard, along with other attorneys, that Clement's claim was valid.

RICKARD TELLS TUNNEY EVERYTHING WILL BE O. K.

NEW YORK, July 24.—(AP)—The turn in the heavyweight title fight situation at Chicago today found conflicting echoes along New York's Rialto alley.

While Gene Tunney's manage, Billy Gibson, received telephonic word from Tex Rickard that "everything would be froned out" to pave the way for Tunney to fight Dempsey, Paddy Mullins, manager of Harry Wills, indicated he saw fresh hope of gaining the much sought championship battle for his negro challenger.

Mullins declared that he had twice refused $50,000 to tear up his contract with Floyd Fitzsimmons for a Dempsey match but he refused to say from what source the offer came. He would not say whether Rickard was involved in either of the offers.

Mullins said he had been summoned to Chicago for a conference Monday or Tuesday.

"Everything looks fine to me now," said the usually laconic Paddy. "I have never taken Rickard's moves seriously. Wills is ready to step into the ring with Dempsey on a week's notice."

Tunney left this afternoon by automobile for Saratoga Springs, N. Y., to continue light training he has been doing at Summit, N. J. The challenger weighed 192 today and looked in fine condition.

Unless there is a further hitch in Rickard's plans Tunney will move his training quarters to the vicinity of Chicago about the first week of August. Gibson will go there early next week and pick a sit, preferably in the Wisconsin woods.

Flaherty was on the mound for the winners and he pitched nice ball. Gillis, pitching for the losers also twirled good ball but his support erred at critical moments.

The feature of the game was Mingo's home run with one on base. This was a terrific drive and rolled down the road in center field. Philadelphia, July 23.—(AP)—The Athletics slump continued unabated today when they dropped their seventh straight by losing to Cleveland, 8 to 5. The locals went to pieces in the field and kindly scoring charged them with only five errors. Al Simmons hit a home run in the first inning with two on base. Score:

TIGERS POUND OUT 19 HITS TO BEAT SENATORS

Washington, July 23.—(AP)—Detroit pounded Washington pitchers for 19 hits to win the fourth game of the series 9 to 4 today. The Tigers massed their attack in two innings, putting over four runs in each. The game lasted two hours and 40 minutes. Manager Ty Cobb taking up much of it in an argument with umpires McGowan and Connolly over a balk by Pitcher Collins and again when he endeavored to have a spectator removed from the stands. Cobb said the fan had been reviling him. The police made no arrests. Score:

BROWNS BEAT RED SOX IN TENTH INNING

Boston, July 23.—(AP)—The second overtime game in as many days proved costly to the Red Sox when St. Louis pushed across two runs in the tenth inning to defeat Boston 6 to 4 here today. It was the Brown's fourth straight win here.

PETER MANNING SETS NEW RECORD AT KALAMAZOO

KALAMAZOO, Mich., July 23.—(AP)—Ann Bradford's Girl, piloted by Dickerson, won the free-for-all pace feature event of the closing day's program of the Grand Circuit races here today. With Sir Roche, winner of the Free-for-all pacing event at Toledo last week out of the way because of illness, the Dickerson entry had little trouble winning from Tarzan Grattan, Lapalome and Grace Direct.

Guy Richard, the favorite, took the first two hearts of the 2:05 trot without much difficulty but was obliged to follow Favonia under the wire the third time around. Guy Trogan earned third money.

Peter Manning, champion trotter, hung up a new track record for Michigan by trotting as exhibition mile in 2:02.

WHITE ENTERS FINALS IN LONGWOOD TENNIS

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 23.—(AP)—Continuing the sensational tennis that brought him victory over a conqueror of William T. Tilden, 2nd., and Japan's national champion, Lewis N. White, Harvard law student from Austin, Texas, fought his way into the finals of the 34th annual Longwood bowl singles tournament today by defeating Takejchi Harada, first ranking Japanese Davis cup star, in straight sets, on the Longwood Cricket club grass courts.

His victory by the scores of 8-6, 7-5, 6-1, was considered the more surprising because of his defeat at the hands of the same opponent a few weeks ago at Agawam.

Refusing to be hurried and declining to go after many shots, White gave the impression that he was on the defensive most of the time. Analysis of his game, however, showed he apparently was content to merely return every possible shot and let Harada defeat himself on errors.

ASHLAND ACCOS TO PLAY MOOSUP SCOUTS SUNDAY

The Ashland Accos of Jewett City are piling up an enviable reputation in eastern Connecticut baseball. Though the team is made up of youngsters and claim an average age of eighteen years they are taking on teams which might appear to be beyond their class in a baseball sense. To date the team has won sixteen games this season and lost but three.

This coming Sunday the youngsters tackle the Moosup Scouts at Ashland Park and, as this is one of the three teams to hang a defeat on the Jewett City boys this season, a battle for blood is sure to be on tap.

The lineups for Sunday's game are as follows.

Moosup Scouts: Burke cf; Felix lf; Tatro 3b; Valian ss; Charlie rf; Belisvance 2b; Willie 1b; Russell C. Shaw p.

For the home team: Pepen 2b; Skocylas 1b; Burda ss; Miller c; Legasse lf; Takmon 3b; Sekula rf; Juber cf; Minta p.

The Ashland Accos are looking for games at home or away. Address communications to Pete Sekula, box 1211 or telephone 100.

AMERICAN REPRESENTATIVES LEAVE TO MAKE PLANS FOR 1928 OLYMPICS

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP)—America's campaign or preparation for Olympic conquest in the international games at Amsterdam, Holland, in 1928 will get officially under way tomorrow with the departure for Europe of two emissaries—Lawson Robertson of the University of Pennsylvania, head coach of the 1924 team, and Murray Hulbert of New York, president of the Amateur Athletic Union.

The are departing on separate liners, Robertson of the Volendam bound direct for Amsterdam and Hulbert on the Paris bound for France, but they have similar objectives—to make a survey of housing conditions in Holland, attend the meeting of the international amateur athletic federation at the Hague, August 5 to 8, and generally lay the groundwork for Uncle Sam's athletic invasion two years hence.

From the point of view of maintaining all around supremacy the coming olympics promises to provide a more critical test for America than ever before, Robertson believes, with a new threat looming in the re-entry of Germany for the first time since 1913 Gams at Stockholm.

"Germany will be the national we'll have to watch in 1928," Robertson declared today. "This will be particularly true in track and field sports in which I look for the Germans to give us more formidable opposition than Finland has done in the past two olympics."

"Germany has staged a remarkable athletic come-back since the war," Robertson declared. "Look what Germany did in the recent British championships," he declared. "In the 100-yard dash five of the six finalist were Germans, one of them taking first place. Then their middle distance runner, Dr. Otto Peltzer, astonished everybody by racing to a new world's record of 1:51 3-5 in the half-mile, breaking Ted Meredith's ten-year-mark, besides giving a bad beating to Dougie Lowe, the British and olympic champion.

"It will be necessary to re-build our forces for 1928 in the spirits, the veterans such as Scholz, Paddock and Murchison have passed their peak. Their most promising successors now, on the basis of the past season' performance, are Russell of Cornell, Locke of Nebraska, and Borah of Southern California."

Where the country has felt a decline in running ability, development of proficiency in the field events has more than balanced, the scale in our favor, Robertson pointed out. This development he added, is shown particularly by the performances of such men as Kuck, Schwarse and Houser in the shot, Discus and Javelin, by King and Osborn in the high jump, Barnes and Carr in the pole vault, hubbard in the broad-jump.

POWER CO. TEAM WINS FIFTH STRAIGHT GAME

The Eastern Conn. Power Co. won its fifth straight game in the twilight league, Friday evening at the expense of the Bon Tons, 7 to 1.

Several of the players that Manager Wilbur had signed up for the game failed to appear, so the Bon Tons presented a lineup made up largely of second string and several others from the crowd.

Harry Mills consented to pitch for the Bon Tons, and was largely responsible for keeping the score down as low as it was. He held the E. C. P to five hits, fanned three and assisted in retiring seven of the batters. Eddie Murphy twirled for the winners, and was never in danger. He also allowed five hits and fanned two.

The E. C. P. started off the first inning and scored five runs on singles by Yerrington, Murphy, Dugas, Greene, and Simcox, and several errors by the Bon Tons. In both the second and fourth, they scored one run, bringing their total to seven.

The Bon Tons scored their only run in the second on a double by Scott and a single by Tommy James.

Tommy James led the hitters with two singles out of two trips to the plate, giving him a percentage of 1.000 for the game.

WESTERLY

WATCH HILL SYNDICATE BUYS FORT MANSFIELD

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I. July 23—The "Fort Mansfield reservation of Rhode Island," as it is known to government records has become the property of a Watch Hill syndicate, formed for the purpose of retaining control of this section, so that its use would not be for any purpose unfavorable to this coterie of Watch Hill cottage owners. Representing the syndicate as a bidder and as spokesman was Elton Parks. Other members of the syndicate management are Thomas D. Thacher, Frank Hibbard, Richard B. Mellon and John M. Goetchius.

It was necessary for them to bid on a cash payment basis a total of $311,700 and on the five year deferred payment plan $370,200, for the seven tracts of land as they were offered separately to the highest bidder by the government auctioneer.

At 12:19 the auction was started, when there were present three hundred interested attendants, members of the Watch Hill summer colony, representative citizens of Westerly, real estate agents and their representatives, from Westerly and surrounding towns and cities, who were left in the lurch when the bids were increased by thousands of dollars at a jump. The land description was first read and then the conditions of the sale and the government valuation total as read was $91,[illegible]

Announcement was made that representatives were present from the U. S. quartermaster general's department and the department of justice. Several questions were answered as to the amount prospective bidders should have on deposit with the clerk of the auction and statement was made that the same riparian rights would be given successful bidders as the government had received. The matter of bidding was a more or less involved one, since the same tracts of land were put up several successive times, as per the conditions of the auction. As an example Item No. 3 consisting of Tract 1 and 2 of 2.64 acres was first offered and the bidding started $10,000 and then between Max Kalter representing Herman Dornbusch of New York proposed syndicate and Elton Parks of the Watch Hill syndicate, it moved $10,500, $11,000, $12,000, $12,500, $13,000 (this sold in two places) $14,000, $15,000, $16,000, $16,500, $17,000, $18,000, $19,000 and $20,000, "all done, sold for $20,000 to Elton Parks on a cash basis."

On the deferred payment count Item 1 bidding was started at $20,000, by Pottager Rousseau of Woonsocket and finally sold to Syndicate Representive Parks for $27,000.

Put up in separate tracts No. 1 parcel was started at $10,000 and sold to the Watch Hill syndicate for $41,000 on the cash payment plan and on the deferred payment this same tract No. 1 began at $42,000 and closed to the Watch Hill syndicate at $47,000.

Tract No. 2 on cash basis began at $900 and closed at $4,700 to the W. H. syndicate. As indicative of the high rate paid this parcel had a frontage of only 56 feet on the ocean.

Tracts 4, 5, 6 and 7 of 110.24 acres as a whole on the cash basis plan bidding began at $62,000 and closed to Watch Hill Syndicate at $160,000. On the deferred plan the same started at $165,000 and closed at $170,000 to Mr. Parks.

Successively then were put up Tracts 3 to 7 inclusive and the following were the tracts with bids in table form for the entire properties:

Tract No.	Cash Basis	Def. Pay't.
3	15,000	28,500
5	15,000	20,500
6	75,000	90,000
7	80,000	95,000
Total	$211,700	Total $370,200

DEATH OF JOHN H. SEGAR NATIVE OF STAFFORD SPRINGS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, July 23—The death of John Herbert Segar, 65, occurred this afternoon at 12:30 o'clock at his home, corner of Elm and Cross streets. Mr. Segar although in poor health for the past two years, died rather unexpectedly from heart trouble. For several years he has been a teller in the Pawcatuck Bank and Trust company.

He was born March 28, 1863 in Stafford Springs, Conn., the son of William A. and Sarah A. Segar. Removing in 1876, with his family, he has made his home here since that time. Besides his widow, Annie Dickins Segar, he is survived by two brothers, Charles L. Segar of Westerly and Edward E. Segar of Manchester, Conn., and two sisters, Mrs. George H. Symonds of Hartford and Mrs. A. J. Tilden of Waterbury.

When a young man Mr. Segar passed some time at Fort Cheyenne, Wyoming, when he was in an outpost store, frequented by Indians and traders. Returning to Westerly he was at one time proprietor of the Dixon House and for many years proprietor of the Misquamicut Inn, at Watch Hill. He later took over Peter's Spa on Main street and operated a high grade restaurant there, known as The Spa.

Mr. Segar was active in Masonic circles, holding membership in Franklin lodge No. 20 F. & A. M., of Westerly; Palmer chapter No. 28, R. A. M., of Pawcatuck, also was a member of Narragansett commandery No. 27, Knights Templar of Westerly in which organization he was a member of the escort for many years.

Westerly was visited by an intense electrical storm Friday morning, making its approach from the south about 3:30 and just before it reached the center section of the town an extra heavy electrical discharge caused one stroke to be sounded on the Westerly fire bell. Although the storm passed over in less than half an hour, the flashes of lightning were so rapid in succession as to seem almost continuous. Electric light circuits were burned out and transformers and motors in the business center also suffered. Many telephones were put out of commission. On the New Haven railroad electrical equipment was so affected that a semaphore signal west of the station could not be operated and passing trains were flagged by hand until the necessary repairs could be made.

Mrs. H. J. Kelsey of Amherst, Mass., left Westerly Friday morning for Norwich, on her return home, after visiting for several days with the family of Isaac O. Smith, in Westerly.

Rev. G. Edgar Tobin, rector of Christ Episcopal church of Westerly, will begin his vacation Monday, Aug. 9th.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

Keep Quiet

What hustle and bustle your ears both command,
And life's full of noise like a super jazz band.
To your ears, put your fingers, and
As your mind's eye
Just look at the "Farm," you maybe shall spy.

The quiet of cornfields, windless and warm;
The quiet which gathers before the dread storm;
The quiet of midnight in rose-scented lane;
The quiet of mothers who nurse you in pain;
The quiet of snow, as it covers the ground;
The quiet of woods, which the twilight has crown'd.
The quiet of children in bed and asleep;
The quiet of God's tiny creatures which creep;
The quiet of mountains, majestic and grand;
The quiet of deserts, with cactus-spread sand;
The quiet of churches; the quiet of books;
The quiet of handclasps, and kind, loving looks.

Some folks like noise, and they tell us so, too,
But I prefer quiet, and stillness, don't you?

The Picnic Party

Oh, Mr. Jones and Mrs. Jones
Declared one August day,
That before the summer was Ended they'd have a holiday.
They decided on a picnic
In a grove just out of town,
They asked all their relations,
And also Mr. Brown.

Chorus

Oh what's more fun than a
Picnic party with the victuals
All on the ground,
The bugs in the butter
The ants in the milk
And skeeters buzzing around.

They went in for big carriages
And when they reached the spot,
They found the ice was melted,
And the butter was piping hot,
The sugar, too, was missing,
The spoons were left behind
And the handle to the ice-cream freezer
Was all that they could find.

Oh, Mr. Brown the handsome man
On whom the ladies dote,
Sat right down in the frying pan,
And burnt his Sunday coat.
And big fat Jim, the giant,
Who moves like a live hay stack
His foot upset the lemonade tub
And it went off Mrs. Jones' back.
They broke the dishes, split the milk,
And left it there to sour,
Two lovers went off in the woods
And fooled away an hour.
The horses, they got frightened
They reared and jumped and kicked
They split our load in a big mud hole
So ends the Jones picnic.

Chorus

Oh what's more fun than a
Picnic party with the victuals
All on the ground.
The bugs in the butter,
The ants in the milk
And skeeters buzzing around.

Belle Brandon

'Neath a tree by the margin of a woodland
Whose spreading leafy boughs sweep the ground,
With a path leading thither o'er the prairie
Where silence hung the night garb around,
Where oft I have wandered in the evening
When the summer winds were fragrant on the lea,
There I saw the little beauty, Belle Brandon
And we met 'neath the old arbor tree.

Belle Brandon was a birdling of the mountain
In freedom she sported on the lea,
And they said the life-current of the red man
Tinged her veins from a far distant sea,
And she loved her humble dwelling on the prairie,
And her guileless happy heart clung to me.
And I loved the little beauty, Belle Brandon
And we both loved the old arbor tree.

On the trunk of an aged tree I carved them
And our names on the sturdy oak remain,
But I now repair in sorrow to its shelter,
And murmur in the wild winds my pain
And I sat there in solitude, repining,
For the beauty dream night brought to me
Death has wed the little beauty, Belle Brandon
And she sleeps 'neath the old arbor tree.

PEDESTRIAN: Letter forwarded as requested.

GOOD RECIPES AND GOOD WORDS

Dear Corner Members: I have just finished reading some of the recipes and thought maybe you would like some of my favorite ones.

Meat Loaf: 1 pound ham, 1 pound fresh pork, 1 clove garlic, 1 small onion, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 teaspoon pepper, 2 teaspoons curry powder, 1 1-2 tablespoons sage, 1-3 cup cream. Force ham, pork, garlic and onion through the meat chopper, add seasonings, and put through chopper again. Then add egg white and cream. Put four strips of uncooked ham fat on center of cheesecloth press mixture into shape and place over fat. Roll in cheese cloth and tie tightly. Place on a wire rack in a kettle and add 3 quarts water boiling, 1-4 cup vinegar and 1 teaspoon salt. Cover and let simmer 2 1-2 hours. Drain, cool and put under a weight. This is delicious cut thin for lunch boxes. I use evaporated milk instead of cream and sometimes I leave out the curry powder and sage and add 2 tablespoons Bell's poultry seasoning.

Brown Bread: 1 Cup rye meal, 1 cup corn meal, 1 cup wheat or white flour, 3-4 tablespoon soda, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 cup molasses, 2 cups sour or 1 3-4 cups sweet milk, or water. Mix and sift dry ingredients add molasses and milk stir until thoroughly mixed. Pour into mold being sure the pail or can is not more than 2-3 full. Cover and steam 4 hours after which I dry it out about 8 or 10 minutes in a slow oven.

Paula: Was so glad to get that recipe for Irish bread. Had some once and loved it but never knew how it was made before.

I agree with the Corner sister who wrote in a long time ago on the merits of the W. W. Backus hospital. I am just home from there and certainly I was treated so well that my illness was more a delightful vacation than a trial. Not enough can be said for the nurses and the staff.

Alwilda: I want to thank you and Mrs. D. for your kindness and also wish to thank you for the things you sent me while I was ill.

Kitty Lou: I am going to try that Mahogany cake as soon as I finish writing this letter.

Mary Gusta: I wish you'd smile once in a while as you pass on your merry way homeward.

Just Pete: Am sorry you've moved from here for a glimpse once in a while is better than none. I'll bet Caro misses you.

Lilac Lady and Azile: Greetings to you and I hope Azile's bad rheumatism is better now that summer is here. 1492: Your rambler roses are beautiful.

Gypsy Wanda: Thanks for your sympathy for I heard that while I was in Norwich you were coming to see me but I guess you didn't know I was so far away.

Butterfly: I wonder how you are these days. I haven't seen you in a long time. With sympathy for all the sick and those who have heavy burdens to bear and a greeting to the editor.

WHO KNOWS THIS MEAT PIE?

Dear Cornerites: Will every member of the Corner please answer this and send in the name that belongs to this meat pie?

I think it is time the Corner had something to awaken its members. I understand there are almost a 1,000 members. I am something like Aunt Het who says "where art thou?"

This recipe I am sending is in one of a favorite comedian.

Two pounds lean steak, 1 beef kidney, 1 small onion. Cut the steak and kidney into two inch pieces. Flour them, add salt and pepper to taste. Line a deep pie dish with rich pie crush, put an inverted egg cup in the center. Fill with meat and finely chopped onion, add water almost to top of dish.

Roll pastry one-half inch thick cover all. Make several small holes in pastry. Bake three hours in moderate oven.

Soot Patties—Boil beets until tender. Mash and mix with bread crumbs cold if the crumbs are soft. If they are dry heat them. Put in a piece of butter when cold mix 1 beaten egg, form in pattie and fry or bake in oven. Salmon is tasty with these.

Biscuit: 2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons sugar, 1 teaspoon of salt, sifted three times, add 3 tablespoons shorten worked in with finger tips, 1-3 teaspoon lemon rind, 2-3 cup milk. Place on a floured board and pat out biscuit, bake in hot oven 12 minutes.

Frosted currants are so nice to use, and all you have to do is select large, perfect bunches and dip them in the partly beaten white of an egg, to which a little cold water has been added. Drain a moment, (I tie a string and hang them up) then roll them in powdered sugar—not confectioners', but powdered.

Currants for sauce. These are delicious. Take large red or white, sometimes I use the two together, cover generously with granulated sugar. Set away in refrigerator for three days or more. I leave them in four to five days if not in a hurry for them.

Roasted Duckling: This is a recipe from a famous chef who traveled around the world gathering recipes.

Cut off the head and legs, singe, draw, neatly wipe and truss a fine tender duckling of about five pounds, keeping the liver. Place in a small roasting pan with 1-3 gill water, half an ounce of butter, divided over the bird, sprinkle, 1 teaspoon salt and 1-3 teaspoon white pepper over it; set it in a moderate oven to roast for 50 minutes; turn it several times while roasting to get a good brown color all around, baste it occasionally in its own gravy. Remove from the oven untruss, dress on hot dish and skim the fat from the gravy. Strain the gravy over the duck, decorate the dish with watercress and send to the table with apple sauce separately.

FALL BEST TIME FOR EXPOSITION

Dear Editor and Members: The letters and poetry in the Social Corner are greatly appreciated by me. As I have not had anything of interest to write, thought I had better keep quiet and give space to others. Wish to thank Kitty Lou for gift — just what I wanted. Have been suffering with rheumatism so have not been able to attend any of the Social Corner meetings. Hope to be able to learn to operate my tin-lizzy and perhaps get to one picnic this summer.

Aunt Jerusha: The slips you sent me are rooting nicely. How many are planning to attend the sesqui-centennial at Philadelphia? Adam went in June but the exposition was not then complete. Better visit in this fall and take in Washington, D. C. at the same time. I greatly enjoyed my trip to the national capital years ago.

Eve sailed for England June 7th. Had a rough voyage but glad to reach terra-firma.

Am glad to say we had a quiet July 4th—safe and sane I'll tell the world!

Albertine: Thank you for the stamps. Your letter has been mislaid.

Sympathy to all troubles ones.

Greetings to new and old members.

ICINGS BY A NEW WAY

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I am sending a new way for making icings. I think it a nice idea in beginning the work of making icing to have all the materials at hand.

The utensils required are a measuring cup; two spoons—one for measuring, one for stirring; the roller and sifter for the sugar; and the two vessels necessary for steaming the icing. I do not advise the use of the double boiler, I think it too deep for this work and being unhandy, time is lost. Also in so deep a vessel it is difficult for me to blend the ingredients thoroughly. I use an aluminum bowl that fits in the top of my teakettle.

I like the XXXX sugar called for in these recipes. It is a sugar having the consistency of flour, sometimes known as confectioners' sugar. It is not the same as sold under the name of powdered sugar, and in order to have your icing come out o. k. the distinction between the two should be carefully noted. Powdered sugar has a grain; even though it is very fine, it can still be seen it is composed of little granules or powder. This is not so of confectioners' sugar. You will find when the difference between them cannot be detected by the eye it will be distinguished by the taste.

Icings are made in many ways, but the principle is the same. Sugar and water are boiled to the soft ball stage, then poured slowly over the beaten white of egg, beating constantly. Flavoring is added when the icing is cool enough not to cook the egg.

Fudge Icing: 1 cup sugar, 1-2 cup milk, 1 square chocolate, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Put sugar, milk and chocolate in bowl, boil until soft ball stage, add butter and vanilla, beat until creamy.

Caramel Icing: 1 cup brown sugar, 1-2 cup milk, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Put sugar and milk in bowl, boil until soft ball stage, add butter and vanilla, beat until creamy.

Boiled Icing: 1 cup granulated sugar, 1-3 cup water, 1 egg white, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Put sugar and water in bowl, boil until soft ball stage, pour slowly over beaten white of egg, beating constantly, add vanilla when cool enough not to cook egg.

Cocoanut Icing: 1 cup granulated sugar, 1-3 cup water, 1 egg white, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup cocoanut. Put sugar and water in bowl, boil until soft ball stage, pour slowly over beaten white of egg, beating constantly, add vanilla when cool enough not to cook egg, add cocoanut.

Chocolate Icing: 1 cup granulated sugar, 1-3 cup water, 1 egg white, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 square chocolate. Put sugar, water and chocolate in bowl, boil until soft ball stage, pour slowly over beaten white of egg, beating constantly, add vanilla when cool enough not to cook egg.

Mocha Icing: 2 cups of confectioners sugar, 4 teaspoons coffee. Cream butter and sugar. Melt the chocolate over steam add coffee, then stir in the blended sugar and butter. Follow my directions given for steaming, cooling and spreading.

Brown Sugar Icing: 4 tablespoons sweet cream, 1 1-3 tablespoons light brown sugar, 1-4 cup butter.

Any one of these icings make a delicious filling for a layer cake and are especially good when combined with pecans, almonds, raisins or home-made citron.

Spread the lower layer cake with half of the amount of icing. When this has set, scatter over it first one ingredient of the filling, as the raisins, then another, as the pecans, with the spatula, spread on top of these the remainder of the icing, and on this place the second layer of the cake. By this method scattering the nuts and fruit, the icing is not discolored and the different ingredients evenly distributed.

But since I have learned that I should boil all of my icing I have better results. This idea every cook should know.

KITTY LOU.

GREETINGS FROM PEGGY ANNE

Dear Social Corner Friends: In looking over "our" page in The Bulletin and like many other sisters, finding very few letters, thought I'd better get busy and write.

You know, or at least some of you do, that living so far away from the "social center," and not being able to attend any of the meetings or good times, one has not the same interest, as those who are able to attend both. It has been a long time since I have seen a Bulletin until recently. Hubby subscribed for it, for my special benefit.

Thirteen years ago in June I attended my first picnic with Wee Peggy who was only six weeks old. I often think of the good time we had that day. Quite a few of the sisters who attended that picnic at Coventry lake have passed on, and some are married.

Mavis: Received your card and will answer it soon.

Aunt Sarah: Have you got your lights going "full blast?" You will enjoy them.

Tiny: Why don't you come to Manchester? You drive a car and could bring another sister with you. Make it a reunion.

Whirlwind—How do you like your office in P. S.? I had the pleasure of installing my oldest daughter of 20 as M. E. C. last January.

Pollyanna: Are you writing under a different name? I saw in The Bulletin news, that you were visiting your daughter. Why not come this way sometime?

Olga and Lonesome Pine: Are you attending the Union Sunday school picnic at Mohegan park? You were there the last time I was. We sat on the teeter board, us light weights.

Biddy: Are you still cackling? I haven't heard you lately.

Must close or this will reach the waste basket.

Best regards to all.

PEGGY ANNE.

EVERYONE NEEDS A VACATION

Dear Social Corner: First, I want to thank the editor for the yellow slip, which came as an agreeable surprise.

Was much interested in reading an account of Lucille Drew's trip to Washington, also Francena's.

Four years ago I visited there for a week and made a similar visit 15 years ago, so can enjoy all I hear pertaining to our national capitol. On my former trip, my visit to the capitol while congress also the U. S. supreme court was in session was of great interest.

I enjoyed seeing many prominent men in political circles or whom I had often heard through the press and hearing them discuss legislative matters.

I am not a politician but am always interested in the political affairs of our country.

Lack of letters in the Social Corner is probably due to the fact that many of the sisters are taking their vacation.

I believe whatever our position in life we all need a change. We owe it to ourselves as well as to those with whom we come in contact.

In many cases I believe it is a necessity.

I once heard of a man who said his wife went insane, but did not know what made her, because she had not visited away from home for 30 years. Do you wonder she was insane?

By associating with others our minds are broadened and we look on life from a different point of view. When vacation days are over and we return to our former routine of duties, I trust we shall hear through the Corner the good times each has enjoyed during the summer.

Mila: Why not write and tell us how you are?

Success to the Corner.

NAOMI.

GOOD HELPS FROM ECLIPSE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I agree with you in saying, "How sorry I felt that our Corner page had so few letters week before last.

But even so I find that it did some good. It caused us to hear from some who have been silent for several weeks and that is something. It is, indeed, "an ill wind that blows no good."

Lucille Drew: I am always interested in reading of the different trips taken by the sisters and especially so when I have visited that place myself. Am so glad I spoke of the Congressional library, and so glad that you had visited there and that you spoke of not seeing our morning Bulletin on file for if you noticed our Social Corner editor assured you that it should be there every day which is pleasant news to all who visit the capital.

Glad you saw the president and his wife. Sorry you missed seeing the crown prince and princess of Sweden, but, as is true, we can only be in one place at a time.

Kitty Lou: Your letter with instructions for running a furnace I think very fine and well worth trying.

It certainly is very discouraging the way that the coal disappears into the hungry mouth of a furnace.

Lular Wylie: Speaking of lovely drives, how does the Mohawk trail strike you? I never made the trip myself but have been told by many that it is a wonderfully interesting drive.

Hope you receive many suggestions to choose from.

Francena: Enjoyed the description you gave of your visit in the District of Columbia, especially as to Arlington. I can yet feel the thrill as I stood by the grave of the Unknown Soldier. Will add a few hints that may interest, the housekeepers.

To have potatoes nice and white when served, do not use the saucepan in which they are boiled for any other purpose.

A baked milk pudding will not boil over during the cooking process if a small bowl of water is left standing on the bottom of the oven.

Always stand cup custards in a pan of water while baking. Have the water about one inch deep.

Always stand cup custards in a pan of water while baking. Have the water about one inch deep.

When boiling beef, ham or bacon, let it remain in the liquid in which it has boiled until it is cold. This will keep it moist should you wish to serve the meat while it is hot, do so and then return what is left to cool in the liquor.

When you wish to warm over a joint let it stand in cold water about 5 minutes before putting it in the oven. It will seem like a fresh roast.

Kerosene rubbed on woodwork with a soft cloth will quickly remove all dust and dirt.

To dressmakers, when sewing on velvet the finest basting thread should be used, and then cut every few inches, not pulled out in the ordinary way, or marks will be left on the velvet.

Lemons juice will remove oil and grease stains from brown or tan shoes.

To clean an aluminum saucepan that has been badly burned, pour in a little water and boil an onion in it, the burnt substance will rise to the top and leave the pan clean.

To remove rust from steel, nickle or iron, cover the rusted parts with grease, leave for a few days and then wipe with a cloth dipped in ammonia.

If a good or choice piece of furniture becomes scratched, paint the scratched places with iodine, applied with a camel-hair brush. Then polish with any good furniture polish.

To clean enamel pans and remove all stains, use salt applied with a soft cloth. Then rinse with hot water.

To keep hooks and eyes from rusting when used on wash garments, boil them in strong soda and water.

Rubber hot-water bottles should be suspended upside down when not in use.

To clean a hair brush make a solution of a teaspoon of borax, and a tablespoon of soda with warm water enough to dip the brush up and down. Be careful not to wet the back of brush. Faded carpets are greatly brightened by being rubbed with a soft cloth, wrung from a solution made of warm water into which a tablespoon of borax and a little ammonia have been dissolved.

Always starch the corner of table or bed linen articles that you wish to mark with indelible ink. That makes a clean firm surface to write on.

If a patent leather shoe pinches any part of the foot, a cloth soaked in boiling water placed where the shoe hurts while the shoe is on the foot will soften the leather to the shape of the foot.

Dry the green tops of celery in an oven, rub them to powder, store powder in glass jars and use to flavor stews and soups.

We have been having ideal summer weather for the picnic parties and it will be interesting to hear about the many beautiful trips.

To all in trouble I extend deepest sympathy, cheer and greetings to shut ins hoping they will soon be able to get out into the beautiful summer weather of sunshine and flowers.

Our late spring was very discouraging but the bright nice days make us forget. Best wishes and happy vacations to all.

APPRECIATING WHAT IS DONE FOR US

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: While answering some letters, thought I'd better do my share toward the Corner page. We sure had a lot of nice letters last Saturday.

Wish I could have gone on the picnic to Atlantic beach, but it was impossible with three boys, the youngest just two weeks old.

Fuller Phun got the right number when she wrote a few weeks ago. Can't you give me a little description of yourself so that I will not tax my brains too much.

I have never attended a Corner meeting but hope to some day and meet some of the sisters.

In reading over the letters, one gets different ideals and the recipes are fine. They generally hit the right spot.

Ola's letter last Saturday gave one a chance to think. Do we appreciate what is done for us?" She was thinking of the lovely things we see in this world. And yet there is another way to look at it. People with cars generally think of those that have to walk, and have no cars, and take them for rides. They see parts of the country they would probably never see otherwise and yet do they appreciate what is being done for them? Some or them do, but others think that the car-owners only did what they ought to.

Must close now. Best wishes to the Social Corner.

FINE DAY AT ATLANTIC BEACH

Dear Editor and Sisters: You have all heard of the place that is paved with good intentions. I am sure that I must have paved a long, wide avenue with my good intentions of writing letters that never get written.

I do enjoy reading the Corner letters so much, but, as one sister said, where would the editor print them if we all wrote once a month?

It attended the meeting of Club 6 at Atlantic beach Tuesday and had such a good time. The weather was ideal and so were the "eats." I heard one sister say that she thought all the members of the Social Corner were good cooks for she had never eaten anything at any of the dinners which wasn't very nice.

We missed Crimson Rambler and hope she can come to our next meeting.

If is very warm today and the pleasantest things I can think to write of are dishes of ice cream and bathing suits.

Balsam Fir: I enjoyed your letter last week very much. We have a friend who spends every summer at Jackson, N. H., and I have some beautiful pictures of the country around there.

Black Eyed Susie: I wish you might meet with us again. I was taken for you yesterday. Wouldn't she be surprised if she should meet you and see what a difference between us?

Foxglove and Whirlwind: Hope you had a nice ride home and that the sick folks are better.

White Daisy: Didn't you all have lots of courage to come such a distance. Have thought of your delicious drink many times today.

Y. Y. and E. L. M.: After I got home last night I had a caller who told me of a trip she took to Atantic beach the day before and she had four blow outs. Aren't we lucky that we didn't have one. E. L. M. is a wonderful driver anyway.

Cosmos: Hope you have a fine visit in Boston, and don't miss the train. Am glad you are feeling better.

American Girl: Where did you go after dinner? I didn't see you again.

Melissa: Hope to see you in two weeks.

Best wishes to all.

GOOD DAY AND TIME AT ATLANTIC BEACH

Dear Corner Members: Again the Shore Line club meeting day has come and gone. We had a good day and hope every one had a good time. Rete and Ruthina the hostesses did their best to make every one comfortable.

We were so glad to welcome the big bus load that came from Willimantic and all those that got there in various ways from near and far. New York, Willimantic, North Franklin, Norwich, New London and Gales Ferry were well represented and last but not least it was our pleasure to have Whirlwind and Foxglove with two friends drive all the way from Southington to spend the day with us. We missed Nancy Peck who was not well enough to make the trip. We were all so sorry to hear of the illness of Clarinda who has been such an interested member of our club. Hope she will be able to meet with us in August at Mystic, R. Natural having invited us to meet there, she furnishing the hall. We are glad to welcome Connie and Bachelor Girl into the club.

Through mistake, some one must have taken a wrong box that contained two linen napkins and there was also a table spoon, with an initial, missing. If anyone found these will they please say so through the Corner page and I will forward return postage and address by way of the editor.

MOST HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS

Dear Sisters: These are the most helpful suggestions I ever had.

General proportion to be used as a guide in flour mixture.

One-quarter teaspoon salt to one cup flour.

Use two teaspoons baking powder to 1 cup flour.

Use two tablespoons shortening to one cup flour as a maximum amount.

Use 1 teaspoon soda to 1 cup of acid wetting, viz, butter milk and molasses.

One egg is equal to 1-4 cup wetting (that is one thing bothered me for some time.)

There are three methods of mixing flour mixture: Stirring, beating, and folding.

The flour mixtures are classified in the following groups:

1—A thin batter—equal parts of flour and water.

2—A thick batter twice as much flour as wetting.

3—Soft dough, 3 times as much flour as wetting.

4—Stiff dough, 4 times as much flour as wetting. This a good proportion for bread etc.

The recipes below are for a gas range:

Cake layers requires a hot or quick over 450 degrees F. 1 to 15 minutes:

Drop or cup cakes, moderate 20 to 35 minutes.

Loaf cake, moderate 350 degrees, 45 to 60 minutes.

Fruit cake, slow 275 degrees, 1 to 6 hours.

Sponge cake, moderate 325 degrees, 30 to 45 minutes.

Angel food, moderate 325 degrees, 30 to 45 minutes.

Muffins and corn bread, moderate, 400 degrees F. 25 to 30 minutes.

Biscuit, hot or quick, 450 F. 10 to 15 minutes.

Ginger bread, moderate, 325 degrees, 30 to 35 minutes.

Quick loaf cake, moderate, 350 F. 45 minutes to one hour.

Cookies, moderate, 350 F. 12 to 15 minutes.

Cookies, molasses or chocolate, moderate 350 degrees F. 15 minutes.

Double crust pie, (uncooked filling). Hot or quick 450 degrees F. for ten minutes and then for 30 minutes.

Double crust pie (cooked filling) hot or quick, 450 degrees F., 12 to 15 minutes.

Pastry shell, hot or quick 500 degrees F., 12 to 15 minutes.

Custards, individual, moderate 325, 35 to 40 minutes.

Custards, moderate, 325 degrees F., 60 to 70 minutes.

If you want to bake in coal stove deduct 25 degrees F., in each case from the oven temperature.

HELPING OUT CORNER

Corner Friends: I see the Corner needs help so will send in some recipes which I know you will like.

Inexpensive Sponge Cake: 2 eggs beaten separately, beat yolks until light color and thick, add 1 cup sugar gradually and continue beating until light colored mixture. Next add 3-4 cup hot milk, the remaining 1-3 cup sugar, and flavoring, then 1 cup of flour, 2 teaspoons of baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt. Lastly fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Bake about 27 minutes, in a moderate oven. I bake mine in a shallow pan. I should judge this would cost about 25 cents and take about 40 minutes.

Chocolate Buttermilk Cake: 1 1-2 cups flour, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup malted chocolate, 1 cup butter or sour milk, 2 tablespoons melted butted, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder, soda, salt, three times. Then work in butter, add buttermilk, mix well together and bake in two layers. This should cost about 45 cents and take about 50 minutes.

Frosting: 1 tablespoon of chocolate, 1 teapoon butter, stir in powdered sugar until thick with a little strong coffee to the consistency to spread. The cost of making the frosting is not over 20 cents. It can be made in 15 minutes.

HELP WANTED ABOUT VARNISHING A PIANO

Dear Social Corner Sisters: To begin with what hot weather! My, but we're having our share. Today was a roaster. All I did was drink iced tea and coffee and now I'm warmer than ever. Well, never mind, next Christmas we'll wish we had some of the good old summer time.

We're real lucky in a way that no storms have come to do damage as in other places like I read of in Monday's paper.

Well, I think it's about time I thanked our kind editor for my Social Corner pin. I certainly am very grateful to him because by wearing it I have found quite a number of sisters already.

Have any of you tried putting a tablespoon of peanut butter in plain white frosting? Well next time you make a cake and frost it with plain frosting try this, it's delicious.

If any of you are troubled with red ants try keeping a small bag of sulphur in the drawers and closets where you find them and you'll certainly see them disappear.

Have any of the sisters had any experience varnishing a piano? Mine is badly marred and the varnish is peeling and I thought if I sandpapered it down and used a good varnish I might make it look like something.

I'm sure if some kind sister has had experience and would tell about it through the Social Corner I would appreciate it I'm sure.

Ma of Greene Gables: I waved to you last Wednesday but the holes in hubby's socks must have taken all your attention because you didn't wave back and kept on darning. I went and visited with your friends in Brooklyn where you visited that old church you wrote about. I had the same driver you had too. I didn't have time to visit the church although I would have loved to. But I was given a promise that when I came again Mr. B. would be very glad to take me there and visit it.

I hope more new members write. Don't leave it all to the old members. I can say they are very faithful. I notice every week that our page has all the nicest letters from the members who have belonged to the club ever since it was started. I'm sure we could all write nice letters if we tried. So new members let's go.

I guess I'll have to hang up and say good bye for now, because I want to write again so here's hoping we see letters galore.

Yours as ever,

FULLER PHUN.

WISE TO FIND OUT ABOUT ANTIQUES BEFORE SELLING

Dear Social Corner Friends: Three antique hunters have been in to see us for a bottle 6 1-2 inches tall, dark blue stopple included, with flange 4 1-4 inches where stopple enters and 2 1-4 inches just below gradually increasing in size to base which is 3 1-4 inches. It has 8 ribs about one inch plain space at top below flange and is rough on bottom which indicates that it is hand blown and that increases its value. One party offered $8 and one from New York $10. Immediately I saw in my mind the small articles that could be purchased with the money and before deciding, about the same instant, recalled my dear grandma to whom the article belonged, her home and the table where the bottle used to be placed whenever vinegar was required on the food. I still have the precious keepsake. One thing more the bottle itself is just turned from white, possibly could be called a blue shade.

Another bottle, brown in color holding a quart, left by my mother, has raised in the front the form of an eagle with wings spread resting on a branch, with the word Liberty over the head of the bird. One back side is Willington Glass company, West Willington, Conn. To satisfy my own curiosity I called up and learned there used to be a factory there but it has not been operated for 60 years or more. The bottle looked as if made in halves, then pressed together. It is smooth on bottom. Have two green pint bottles eagle on one side, horn of plenty on other side of one, while on the other is an urn with grape leaves and grapes in it. The other side has a cornicopia with similar decorations. Both of these are rough on bottom. Some of these experts tell us the green are more valuable ranging in price from $30 to $50. Many tell you a little more on same subject but different objects. It is wise to find out about antiques before selling.

GREETINGS FROM SCOTTIE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I hope all are enjoying this nice weather and going to all the picnics they can. I would like to go to them all if possible, but circumstances will not permit. Sorry I could not go to Atantic beach with Club No. 6. I am hoping to be able to get to some of their meetings.

Maple Leaf: What a lovely time we had at your birthday party. I can almost taste some of the good things yet, even if there was no cabbage, eh?

We all were very sorry to hear that Wandering Jew had gone to her long home. She was always so pleasant. She will be missed from the club meetings.

I have been reminded several times that it was time to write as I had promised. Well, there are so many who can write interesting letters that it seems too bad to take up the space for mine.

Necia and True Blue: Did you get home safely. Mayfayre, Black Eyed Susie and I were in luck. We had an auto ride to Norwich.

Calla Lilly: Someone was asking where you were that you had not been heard from for so long. I hope you are not sick. Let us hear.

Sister Ready: Where are you? On a vacation, eh? With best wishes to all.

SCOTTIE.

FRESH VEGETABLES AND FRUIT

To the Editor and Members of Social Corner: Hope all who attend the picnic at the beach have a pleasant outing. Several years ago there was a popular song, entitled The Picnic Party. I am sending it in; some of you may have heard to.

There have been several letters about cats recently, so I will tell a cat story.

My mother's youngest sister, Aunt Mary, dearly loved cats. When she was about seven years old she had three dear tabbies. When each cat presented her with five kittens she was delighted. Every mealtime she put down three pates of food for her cat families. It was a sight—three mother cats and 15 kittens, 18 cats altogether! Aunt Mary was happy as she watched them eat, and called her family to see her lovely cats. But her own mother was doing some thinking: When each of those 15 kittens would have five kittens, 75 cats horrors! the house was full of cats now!

She called the hired man and asked him to dispose of the whole lot. Aunt Mary was inconsolable. The wise child asked if she could keep what she could hold in her apron. As her apron was so tiny grandma said, Yes, she could keep all she could hold in her aprop.

She ran out to the hired man and began picking up kittens, but as fast as she put one in her apron some of them jumped out on the other side. To hold the apron with one hand and pick up wiggling kittens with the other was slow work. She kept crying, "Stay in my apron, naughty kitty. Man will kill you, my pretty kitty, if you run out."

Grandma was watching her and she soon relented and told the hired man to postpone the execution. Then she told Aunt Mary to try and find homes for some of them with nice people who wanted a kitten, so Aunt Mary went peddling kittens to people she thought would be good to her darlings.

Wiltwyck: Glad your garden is so productive and you are rewarded for your work. At present we are having a feast of peas. My favorite is Prince Edward, one of the telephones. Found a pod today with ten larke peas in it.

Nearly all have nine large peas. Red, black and yellow raspberries are fine now. They make delicious short cakes.

After living in city flats for a lifetime it seems glorious to be able to have all these good vegetables and fruit feasts and clean when we want them. The recent rain has been a great help to farms and we are grateful for it.

Best wishes to all.

MY GARDEN AT "THE FARM"

Dear Social Corner Folks: As Mavis and Samantha have both asked for another letter from me I have again "taken my pen in hand." Samantha's personal letter to me was the only answer to my S. O. S. call for a list of good books to read. Perhaps other sisters were having trouble in finding worth while books among the new ones and so did not send in a list. I enjoyed reading, Oh, Money, Money, recommended by Samantha but am sorry to say the others were not in our library. Our librarian told me that many who took books are asking for some of the older novels in preference to the new trash, so Samantha and I are not so hopelessly old-fashioned after all.

The July 11th Social Corner page was especially interesting with its practical hints, recipes, descriptions of outings and other things. Wiltwyck's garden letter appealed to me; for in the summer I am as ardent a garden fan as I am a radio fan in the winter. For a number of years I have had a lot of pleasure and satisfaction in planting, weeding, hoeing and harvesting garden crops, and I know of no better panacea for nerves than to get out of doors and to work among things.

My tiny garden in town is only an aggravation. I had just sowed a few seeds in it when the maltese cat on the fenced called to her chum in the next yard, "Mari-er, Mari-er, do come quickly and see what a lovely public comfort station our neighbor is preparing for us." And Marl'er came, and by the looks of my flower bed in the morning all the other cats had come to investigate. After that I put up sticks, "row on row," but they only served to mark the graves of buried hopes and the seeds that "didn't come up." One neighbor tried to console me by saying, "Well, you've got a good crop of sticks, anyway."

My garden at "the farm" is about a quarter of an acre in size, and keeps me busy most of my spare time. One end is bordered with annuals as is also both sides of the path through the center of the garden. The rest is devoted to vegetables, and the deer, rabbits and woodchucks are also devoted to the vegetables so the question often arises as to who will get the biggest share, myself, or the wild animals, with the odds in favor of the animals, for, to quote an old Texas-caret ad, "They work while you sleep." One yesterday we were congratulating ourselves that now we had some scare-crows that were really keeping the animals away; and then, this morning I discovered fresh prints of deer hoofs in the moist earth, and that he had generously sampled the beets, parsnips, carrots and lettuce. Avoiding the scare-crown at the other end of the garden he had made his meal of "garden sass" within 20 feet of the house.

By the way, if in your travels abroad you come across a garden with scare-crows dressed in old colonial costumes you will know that it belongs to The Friendly Voice. Having come into possession of some moth-eaten clothes of a former generation we utilized them in that way. One dress with tight waist and full gathered skirt is a regular flapper when the wind blows. A white shirt with arms clasped lovingly around a small peach tree, on a breezy day often give a very creditable performance of the Charleston. But to me the scarecrow presiding over the fool of the garden is the most awe inspiring. He is dressed in a long-tailed ministerial Prince Albert, "all buttoned down before." On a windless day his shoulders sag and he looks sorrowful and dejected. At other times he tosses his arms like an old-time Methodist exhorter and seems to rant and rave at an unseen audience. I have often fancied that if he really could speak his warning to us would be to us would be to "Watch and spray." Anyway the words would be eminently fitting as I doubt whether any nearby garden can boast of more bugs or every variety than ours, in spite of the fact that my husband sprays and often with bordeaux, arsenate of lead, nicotine, etc., while I sprinkle lime with a liberal hand over cucumbers and other garden truck. Sometimes, after a particularly strenuous day, I begin to think that David Grayson was right when he said, "Our gardens are best in the dreaming." But perhaps the very next morning while the dew still shimmers on each blade of grass and the night mists are still tangled in the trees I go down the long garden walk and stop before my row of Shirley poppies to note with keen delight their lovely shapes and shades and texture, and I know that no dream flower can be half so beautiful as these. And how the bees revel in them. They come from long distances to gather their load of pollen. "Zoom-zoom. Buzz-buzz-s-s-s." Bumblebee and honey bee and little green flies that sting minnie together amiably on the same flower, each intent on his own business. I find that I must gather my Shirley poppies very early in the day if I would have them intact, for the big bumble-bee becomes actually boisterous when he visits them, and tumbles and rolls among the stamens until they become a broken mass and the full beauty of the flower is spoiled. Some people complain that Shirley poppies wither quickly; but by picking only freshly opened blossoms early in the morning I have no trouble keeping them three or even four days.

When I began this letter I had no intention of writing a treatise on gardening, but once having started on this subject which is interesting to me I have found it difficult to change to another. In fact there are many more things I would like to write about concerning my garden and the people who have helped me with it in time gone by. As the years roll by and conditions change it has been increasingly hard to get help in the country. A busy neighbor plows and harrows for us with a slow-plodding yoke of oxen and he often expects me to help him. I doubt whether any of the sisters who have only seen me in town would recognize me in my old dress of nondescript coloring and style, shoes of the "common or garden variety" and a black cap with the word "Nursery" across the front. It is not the dainty dress I used to dream of wearing in my garden, but I soon

LOOT FROM STATE PIER GARAGES DISCOVERED IN A C.V. CAR, NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 23—Several garages at the state pier, where officers connected with the United States Coast Guard service store their automobiles were burglarized last night. Contrary to the usual procedure of garage thieves, none of the automobiles stored there were stolen, but all the cars were stripped of whatever was movable, both as regards equipment of the autos as well as what was found in the cars. The burglaries were discovered this morning when the owners of the automobiles visited the garages and a complaint was made to the police. A short time later, an employe of the railroad informed the police that a large quantity of miscellaneous articles had been found in a passenger car in the yard of the Central Vermont railroad, East New London. Sergeants John Cavanaugh and Nelson Smith went to the railroad yard and then to the location of the burglaries and conducted an investigation, in the hope of ascertaining the identity of the crooks. The plunder was taken from the cars and carried but a short distance from the garages and deposited in the railroad car where it is believed the crooks would await a favorable opportunity before removing the loot and converting it into cash. The robbing of the garages, it is believed, is the work of sailors connected with the coast guard service, several hundred of whom are stationed on the pier.

There is no material change today in the condition of Charles H. Baldwin, 579 Bank street, who attempted suicide Wednesday night by inhaling gas in a restaurant building formerly conducted by him on Atlantic street. At Lawrence Memorial hospital this afternoon it was stated that there was a very slight improvement in the condition of the patient, but that he is still on the danger list and whether he will recover would not be decided for several days.

Judge of Probate Arthur B. Calkins has recovered from illness, which confined him to his residence, Granite street, for several days.

Business before the police court dropped to a single case today, something unusual. Steve Boska necessitated the session of court by getting drunk yesterday and going home, where he created a breach of peace in striking his wife, who is the mother of several children; and who finds the care of them difficult even when her husband is working and contributing to the family. Steve admitted his offense, but he was penitent. The court fined him, but then suspended execution of the sentence, as its enforcement would bring an additional hardship upon mother and children.

The police department is arranging to have a dance and members of the police force are about the city soliciting the purchase of tickets, that the proceeds may be applied toward the purchase of uniforms for the officers.

The railroads are carrying great quantities of coal through this city as if in anticipation of avoiding any such conditions as prevailed during the strike of last winter. Dealers urged consumers to store up with coal during the warm weather months and thus be independent of conditions that may arise later.

Notwithstanding there is a sign a yard square on the corner of Green and Pearl streets warning that vehicles must not enter and that traffic must be in but one direction a well known merchant drove into the street this morning in the direction in which traffic is restricted. Had he been apprehended for his carelessness he would have grumbled and condemned some one for his plight. To get by other vehicles in the street he was forced to operate his automobile upon the sidewalk for a considerable distance.

Mary Elizabeth Moran, Mary Alice Moran and Mary Elizabeth Moran, guardian, have sold two dwellings on Main street to Mary Emma Lincoln.

The funeral of Peter Lakowski, of Uncasville, was held at 9 o'clock this morning at St. John's church, Montville, and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. James A. O'Meara, the pastor. Acquaintances of Mr. Lakowsky acted as bearers. Burial was in Palmertown.

Miss Katherine Goss, 66, died this morning at her home 41 West Colt street. Miss Goss, who had been ill a long time, is survived by three brothers, William, Charles and George Goss, all of this city. She was born in New London and had resided here her entire life.

A. R. Cole, of Ledyard street, and Edwin Cruise, of Vauxhall street, made complaint to the police last night that dogs in that vicinity were a nuisance as the continual barking of the animals kept the residents awake. An officer was sent to that vicinity for the purpose of determining the owners of the dogs and warn them to keep the animals quiet, but when he arrived on Vauxhall street there was not evidence of the offense alleged.

The youthful bathers at Green's harbor, Pequot avenue, are to be provided additional pleasure, for a canvas shelter is being erected there. The beach is thronged daily and until nightfall by children who enjoy the bathing, more especially because of the absence of practically all danger owing to the shallow water.

Mrs. Herman Kesosky, of Chesterfield; Alfred Cabral, Greenwich; Mrs. Frank Fisher, Oakdale and Mrs. Sidney Holmes and infant son, Salem, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

Peter Coney, 21, of 21 Pearl street, was painfully injured Wednesday afternoon when the automobile in which he was riding collided with a tree at Colchester. Coney was thrown through the windshield and suffered a laceration of the neck by which he was considerably weakened because of the loss of blood. The automobile was being driven by Charles James, Thames street, Groton, and was en route to New London. At Colchester, it is claimed a passing automobile crowded James' car off the highway by driving to the wrong side of the latter auto. James lost control of the steering wheel and the auto crashed against the tree. Coney was given medical treatment and then removed to his home.

Seymour Manheimer, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Manheimer, 31 Brewer street was struck by an automobile owned and driven by William T. Shea, 49, of Greenlawn, Long Island, last evening at Ocean Beach. The boy suffered bruises of the face and head and a possible fractured collarbone. The child was at the shore resort with its mother and started to go unprotected from the boardwalk to Bentley avenue. As the child reached the avenue through one of the lanes between cottages, a woman and child were crossing the avenue as the automobile approached from the "circle." Shea altered the course of his auto to be diverted in order not to strike the woman and child. At the same time the Manheimer child appeared running from the boardwalk. Before Shea could bring his auto to a stop the child was struck and knocked down. The child was taken to the Red Cross but where he was attended by a physician and where his mother took charge of him.

This evening the automobile of a physician in passing through the streets of Groton jolted a medicine case from the car and it was later found by an autoist and delivered to Captain of Police Andrew McCarthy. The bag is in possession of the officer awaiting a claimant.

Friends of Mrs. Maude Minor Briggs, a former resident of Groton, now of Boston, have received announcement of the marriage of Mrs. Briggs in Boston the 8th inst., with William Bremerman, Boston. Mrs. Bremerman is the widow of Harry Briggs, a former resident of New London and for a number of years employed as freight agent of the Fall River line of the New England Steamship company. She is a sister of Henry C. Miner, of Groton.

Sergeant David Marks, of Providence, stationed here as a member of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad police, is on his vacation of two weeks. Sergeant and Mrs. Marks are spending their holiday time in New York and New England.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin J. McCarry, 36 Garfield avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Dennis J. Doyle, 19 Winthrop street, are visiting in Bayonne, N. J. The party made the trip to New Jersey today by automobile.

The thieves who stole the 26-foot power sloop Francis from her mooring in the harbor Wednesday night and manned the boat to a point off Crescent Beach where she was grounded on a sand-bar, will probably be arrested within the next 24 hours. The local police have the identity of one young man, who undoubtedly is the thief and he has a police court and prison record. After the recovery of the sloop yesterday by Captain Jules Ortman, an examination of the craft revealed that everything movable had been taken from the boat, the plunder stolen involving a loss of about $1,000. Everything possible was taken from the deck and from the cabin and it was of such a quantity that a boat would have to be used in order to get the loot to shore. This, it is believed, was accomplished by the thieves, one of whom was seen near the sloop Wednesday afternoon in a dory, but without oars. It is believed that the dory was towed by the sloop as that vessel left the harbor and that the rowboat was used in transfering the plunder from the sloop to the shore in the vicinity of Crescent Beach, or Niantic.

An automobile owned and driven by Frank May, 425 Montauk avenue and a car owned and driven by John J. Hoey, 29 Dunbury road, Worcester, Mass., collided this evening on Ocean avenue, near Bank street. Both cars were slightly damaged. May was arrested by Motorcycle Officer George McCaskey on complaint of Hoey charged with reckless driving and failing to have a driver's license in his possession. According to May, Hoey was on his way to New Haven and instead of keeping on Bank street when Ocean avenue was reached, he drove his automobile to the latter highway. May was following the Hoey car and when about 200 feet on Ocean avenue, Hoey inquired the road to New Haven from a pedestrian without stopping his car. When directed back to Bank street, Hoey, instead of turning the car around, backed against traffic and struck the May automobile.

The funeral of Albert H. Hahtaway, late of Station 16, Waterford, whose death occurred at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital yesterday following injuries he sustained two months ago by being struck by an unknown automobile in Waterford, was held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Flanders Baptist church. The services were conducted by Rev. H. P. Plumb, pastor of the church. Burial was in Flanders cemetery.

Mrs. Malcolm Brown, of Waterford, a patient at Home Memorial hospital, was able to return to her home today.

An electrical storm struck the city at about 3 o'clock this morning and for severity was one of the worst to visit this city in two or three years. The storm did not last long, but while it prevailed the lightning was most vivid. Shortly before 11 o'clock last night a windstorm began and for a quarter of an hour it was believed that the storm was to break for lightning could be observed well to the northwest. The storm, however, went around the city and in another quarter of an hour the stars and moon shone brightly. However, shortly after 2:30 o'clock the wind broke again and this time the city did not escape so fortunately for accompanied by the wind was rain, lightning and deafening thunder. Just before the storm abated the most vivid of the flashes of lightning occurred and the bolt found its way into the two-family house of Joseph Silva, 3 Lewis street, occupied by Mr. Silva and family and George Goss and family. The current entered the apartment occupied by the Goss family, ripped a carpet into shreds and burned a small place in the floor. It then passed int othe cellar and to the ground. The occupants of the dwelling were asleep, any escaped injury. The storm did not have the anticipated effect of cooling the atmosphere for today the mercury hovered over the 86 degree mark, although this was about six degrees less than yesterday, but there was much humidity, which made the day depressing. Another shower occurred between 6 and 7 this evening another between 7 and 8 o'clock, but they were not accompanied by rain or electricity. Neither shower tended to clear the atmosphere perceptibly and as a result another large crowd of men, women and children sought relief from the heat at Ocean Beach.

STANLEY ROY FORGED CHECK AT NIANTIC

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 23—The Niantic authorities this evening requested the New London police to be on the lookout for Stanley Roy, a young man, who has been employed on a farm owned by a man named Woods at Niantic. Roy is wanted on a charge of forgery. This afternoon he is alleged to have obtained one of Woods' blank checks and making the check payable to himself for $25, tendered it to a merchant and secured its negotiation. He did not return to the farm, but instead, secured the services of a friend, driver of a big Packard automobile, to bring him to this city. It is believed that Roy intends to take a train from New London to go to New York.

JEWETT CITY

SEEKING CARNEGIE REWARD FOR BRAVE JOHN POTTS, JR.

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, July 23—The townspeople feel that John Potts, Jr., should be awarded a Carnegie medal. He saved Mr. Daviditsak's life at great risk, for he fought his efforts until the young man got behind him. He then dove repeatedly for the woman, nearly failing to come up himself the last time. The Bulletin correspondents have taken the matter up with F. M. Wilmot who has charge of the Carnegie Hero Fund commission and have sent a statement of the facts to him, at Pittsburgh, Penn.

No electric power Sunday morning from 4 to 6.—Adv.

In connection with the recent final liquidation of the Briggs Mfg. Co., of Voluntown it is recalled that in 1852, the firm of Treat and Doane owned and operated in Voluntown a store and a cotton mill of considerable size. They also tried a hand at linen manufacturing; and had a small mill properly equipped for that purpose. They put upon the market a quantity of linen cloth, recognized by the trade to be of A1 quality.

Mr. Doane was the father of the popular music writer of some 30 years ago. Mr. Treat was at that time a staunch Anti-Slavery man, and was able to discuss with a great deal of ability this matter, that then stirred the country from north to south. At that time, the late Deacon E. C. Kelgwin one of Jewett City's most honored and respected citizens was a young man employed by this firm, and in him Mr. Treat found a hearty sympathizer and believer in his anti-slavery views.

About this era the famous Horace Greeley, appeared prominently before the people of the United States, as a persistent advocate of the great anti-slavery question, which was fast becoming of vital importance. Between him and Mr. Treat, notes of considerable moment were from time to time exchanged and Mr. Treat as a mark of especial favor, caused a pattern of white linen to be taken from a cut of his own best manufacture, and a pair of trousers were made therefrom and given to Horace Greeley, and were much appreciated by him. From the same cut, at the same time, another pattern was taken, and given to Deacon Kelgwin.

Three-quarters of a century have passed away, the great wars are over, the slaves emancipated, and these distinguished people have gone to their rest. Some 25 years ago, the late Mrs. Kelgwin, second wife of the deacon, found stored away this same piece of linen which was given to the deacon so many years ago, and from it her skilful hands, made a number of aprons of different shapes. Prof. Henry W. Kelgwin, her son, then of Norwich Free Academy, now of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., was given a number of these aprons for his children. At that time Mrs. Kelgwin gave to Earl S. Hiscox, a six months old baby, one of these famous aprons. The owners today feel proud of these historic garments, made from Voluntown linen, from the looms of weavers, who plied their craft close to three generations ago.

After two days with the mercury at from 94 to 100, an electric storm at 3 a. m. Friday brought much needed rain. Some declared that the hot wave would be "busted." Not so, for in Jewett City, all the afternoon the thermometers told a different story; they stood at from 88 to 90 until early evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Perle Whitford and daughter and three sons and Goodwin Turner one of Mrs. Whitford's twin brothers, of Warren, R. I., have been guests at Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Whitford's on Mathewson street. They left Friday for Phenix, Arizona, making the trip by automobile on a camping trip. Mrs. Whitford's mother and other brother have been in the west for some time. Mr. Whitford will be employed on the construction of a copper smelting plant in Douglas, Arizona.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Campbell are at Wethersfield, the guests of their daughters.

It is with much interest that Jewett City notes that Lisbon, its sister town on the west, and closely allied in their common welfare, is to discuss three very important improvements—regarding providing larger accommodations for the school children; whether the town will vote to sell or lease land near the town house to be used for building a waiting room and general store, and to see if the town will subscribe for electric light service.

Miss Esther A. Brown of Brunswick, Me., has been spending a week at the home of her cousin, Arthur M. Brown.

Walter Field, not Frank Fields, was one of the men who rescued the body of the drowned woman from Aspinook pond Thursday evening. Mr. Field, who is chief of the fire company, responded to the call for help sent to the Hose house as soon as possible.

Rev. Frederick C. Taylor of Bolton, Conn., is to preach as a candidate at the Pachaug church Sunday.

John Palmer and son John of Wood Harbor, Florida called on his cousin Everett H. Hiscox Friday.

found out that a "clean gardener is but a superficial creature," and now I wear my oldest clothes without blushing even when caught by callers. Dressed in this manner with whip in hand I pace ahead of the oxen to guide them on their first furrow around the garden, gently flicking the whip across their necks while my neighbor does the "gee-ing and haw-ing." After the first round I am not needed as the oxen have been trained to follow the furrow.

After the garden is plowed and harrowed we have no other help in planting hoeing or spraying. Our neighbors are all busy with their own problems and if I asked their further assistance they might refer me to the words of Dallar Lore Sharp who says, "Work is creative; it is self-expression; and I should let no man do for me what I can do. He robs me of living who robs me or doing."

And now I really must stop or the editor may change my pen-name to Polly Parrot because I talk so much, and I really much prefer the other which is

FINAL PICTURE SERVICE FOR SEASON AT "Y"

The beautiful Bible story of "Isaac and Rebecca" will be shown in moving pictures at the local Y. M. C. A. Sunday at 4 p. m.

An idea of what the pictures will show will be found in the following: When Isaac was grown to manhood, his mother feared that he might take for his wife one of the despised daughters of the Canaanites, and therefore Abraham sent his servant Eliezer to Mesopotamia to find Isaac a wife from his own people. At the well before the gate of Haran, Eliezer found Rebecca who drew water for him and his camels. Rebecca proved to be Isaac's cousin, and with the consent of her people she returned with the servant to Canaan, and became the wife of Isaac. This is certainly one of the most beautiful and impressive of Bible history. To the service both men and women are cordially invited and boys and girls fourteen and over will be admitted. The music will be furnished by H. C. Zabriskie, baritone and his sister, Miss Marcia Zabriskie, pianist.

Christ Episcopal Church

On Sunday, Saint James' day, the fast service held at Christ Episcopal church will be at 8 o'clock in the morning. The Holy eucharist with special intercessions and Thanksgivings. Barnby, The Gloria Tibi and Gracias Tibi by C. Gounod and the Sequence hymn to St. James', first bishop of Jerusalem, composed by A. Williams. Before the sermon F. Weber's hymn, "For All the Saints at Rest," will be sung. At the offertory S. S. Whitney's, All Things Come of Thee, O Lord, Sursum Corda and Sanctus by Prof. J. Camidge, The Benedictus by T. Morley, Adoration hymn, "Adeste Fideles," by J. Reading, Agnus Dei, by T. Adams and Gloria in Excelsis, by A. H. Sullivan will be sung. The recessional will be Saint Athanastus' hymn by E. J. Hopkins.

Broadway Theater

The Broadway theater Sunday begins its engagement of The Devil Horse in which is starred Rex, the untamed, unconquered, magnificent wild horse that Hal Roach has brought to the screen for the third time in a Pathe picture, directed by Fred Jackson.

The Devil Horse is drama written by Hal Roach and inspired by the history of the crimson trails of the pioneer west. From the wrath of the slaying sped the Indians prayed to their Gods for deliverance. Strange, terrible tales they told of a great black horse whose hoofs dealt death to the redskins.

In their superstitious fear he was a supernatural animal—tremendous in size, snorting fire, fleet of foot, as terrifying as lightning—a Devil Horse! But, to a girl who was captured by the Indians, to the man who loved her, to the white men and women fighting valiantly in the Indian attack on their fort, and to the Lady, his mate, the Devil Horse was a hero horse.

The Devil Horse has in its cast Yakima Canutt, Gladys McConnell, Robert Kortman, Fred Jackman, Jr., and hundreds of Crow Indians, cowboys and wild horses.

What is foretold to be a good old roaring melodrama with crooks, master crooks, innocent victims entrapped, murder, imprisonment, and exposure abounding throughout, is to be offered at the Broadway theater Sunday as the second big attraction. The same is The Shadow of the Law, the Associated Exhibitors version of Henry Chapman Ford's novel Two Gates. The Shadow of the Law is a Baird-Beck production, starring Clara Bow, Stuart Holmes, Forrest Stanley and Ralph Lewis. Wallace Worsley directed.

In addition to these great features a new Kinograms is offered.

Breed Theater

Edith O'Shaughnessy's famous novel of post-war Vienna, The Viennese Medley, has been transcribed to the screen. June Mathis has just completed the film adaptation under the title of The Greater Glory. It will be shown at the Breed theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

The film story treats of the stupendous changes effected in the old Austrian city by the war. Vienna was once known as the gayest city in the empire. The process of downfall and gradual rehabilitation is followed in the fortunes of a typical well-to-do Viennese family.

June Mathis, who is responsible for The Four Horsemen and other famous screen productions, made a special effort to bring realism into the picture. The Greater Glory is said to contain a side or the great war not hitherto revealed.

More than a year was spent on the production and a small army of stellar actors and actresses form the company. First National releases it as one of the biggest features of the season.

A voluminous cast includes Anna Q. Nilsson, Conway Tearle, Lucy Beaumont, May Allison, Ian Keith, Nigel deBruller, Bridgetta Clark, John Sainpolis, Marcia Manon, Edward Earle, Virginia Southern, Katherine Chambers, Isabelle Keith, Jean Hersholt, Hale Hamilton, Com Macey, Carrie Daumery, Thur Fairfax, Boris Karloff and George Billings.

A special added feature on this bill is America's Polar Triumph, a two-thousand foot pictorial record of the flight of commander Byrd over the North Pole, taken by Byrd from his plane, the Josephine Ford.

SPECIAL MEETING VOTES APPROPRIATIONS OF $151,000

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, July 23.—Appropriations totaling $151,000 were voted at a special city meeting held in the town hall this evening, Mayor John C. Tracey presiding and City Clerk James S. Donohue, Jr., reading the warning. Despite the heat the meeting was well attended and was kept lively through a series of impromptu speeches by a number of electors. The stumbling block was the appropriation which called for $200,000 for the building and repairing of streets. School Committeemen Robert E. Snow, M. E. Lincoln, Alderman Charles H. Beebe, First Selectman Ernest P. Chesebro, Eugent J. Randall and Valentine L. Murphy, led in the discussions on this, amount. It appeared that the appropriation was doomed until a talk by Mr. Murphy brought about a reconsideration of an amendment to take no action and an amendment previously offered that $100,000 be substituted for $200,000 was voted. This specifies that the money be expended for permanent surface on West Main street, from the present westerly point of the pavement, opposite Bridge street, down Bridge street to the railroad, thence along West Main street to Columbia avenue junction. The resolution was taken up and voted on as follows: $15,000 to be used for the installation and construction of a new sewer on West Main street, in a westerly direction from Mansfield avenue, appropriated. An additional appropriation of $3,000 for the police department, for additional men and to meet all bills for the year, appropriated. An appropriation of $5,000 or such parts thereof as may be deemed necessary for the construction and equipment of a garage in the city yard on Watson street, not appropriated. Appropriation of $200,000 for the construction of permanent streets in the city, amended to $100,000. An appropriation of $30,000 for the purchase of a new ladder truck and equipment for the fire department, appropriated. An appropriation of $18,000 to purchase land on North and Meadow streets, formerly occupied by the Lincoln and Boss Lumber and Coal company, now owned by the Willimantic Lumber and Coal company, to be used as an automobile parking space for the public, not appropriated. $10,000 for the purchase of land owned by the Quidnick-Windham Co., between Pleasant street and the Willimantic river, off Bridge street, to be used as a public park, not appropriated; $3,000 for the oiling of the city streets, appropriated. $3,000 for the opening and construction of new streets in the city, not appropriated. The total amount called for in the warning was $290,000.

Motions on the various resolutions were offered by Corporation Counsel William A. King. Explanations on a number of the appropriations were made by Mayor Tracey, Alderman William E. Jackson, Alderman Walter R. King, Fire Chief Henry J. Kelly, City Engineer Robert E. Mitchell, James J. Lee and others.

HOOVER SEES NO REASON FOR RADIO CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, July 23— (AP) — Secretary Hoover sees no reason for calling another conference of radio interests this year, but believes that efforts toward self regulation or radio communication, such as the formation of private associations in various communities would be helpful.

National conferences have been held for the last four years under the auspices of the commerce department, at which broadcasters, listeners and all others connected with radio have discussed their respective problems. To hold another conference this year Mr. Hoover said today simply would be to reaffirm the principles already adopted. He expects congress to write these principles into law at the next session.

No material change in the broadcasting situation is expected by the commerce secretary to result from the new policy of licensing all new stations which are ready to operate. Of the six hundred applications for licenses on file, only about 10 are from broadcasters who are equipped for operation.

In view of an opinion by the justice department that commerce officials have no authority to restrict wave lengths, stations that want to broadcast on a higher band than they have been using will be permitted to do so. The first license of that kind was issued to WTAG, a 100 watt station operated by the Worcester, Mass., Telegram-Gazette. It has been operated on 368 meters and received a license to broadcast at 546 meters, the same as now used by KSD, St. Louis, Post Dispatch, and KFUO, Concordia Seminary of St. Louis. About 15 stations are using the 360 meter wave length.

Radio officials of the commerce department said that under good reception conditions in the winter, listeners in the vicinity of the Worcester and St. Louis stations might have some difficulty.

Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian through his attorney informed Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, that he would be unable to appear before the senate's alien property investigating committee at this time.

When Your Radiator Leaks
stop and think before you put any so-called anti-leak compounds into it. They will corrode and clog up the whole cooling system and do more harm than good. MARKET WAS IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, July 24.—(AP)—The stock market experienced a further readjustment of speculative accounts today with the result that there was considerable irregularity in price movements.

Public participation was on an exceedingly small scale, and what little advantage there was in the days fluctuations rested largely with professional traders working for lower prices. Bear traders made occasional attacks on supposedly vulnerable issues, but they failed to bring about any general unsettlement. On the other hand, the few pools which were active on the side of rising prices were unable to attract a public following although they did succeed in boosting a few issues to new high levels for the year.

The weekly mercantile reviews laid stress on the unusual mid-summer expansion of business, and held out hopes for further recovery in the third quarter. Intense heat in some areas has stimulated sales of hot weather merchandise. Two of the most interesting domestic developments of the day were the approval of the proposed Southwestern Railroad merger by the directors of the Kansas City Southern, and an increase in lead prices.

The announcement that former Premier Poincare had succeeded in forming a new French coalition cabinet was reflected in the further recovery of the foreign exchanges and the rising trend of French Bond prices. French francs which had collapsed below 2 cents earlier in the week, ruled around 2.35 cents. Belgian francs rallied close to 2.40 cents and demand sterling was slightly higher at $4.85 7-8, despite the larger number of cotton bills that make their appearance at this season of the year.

The industrial and railroad averages showed practically no change in the day. Several of the Standard Industrials drifted lower on the unusual week-end realising. U. S. Steel common showed a net decline of 3-8 at 138 1-4 after having touched 140 1-2 during the morning. General Motors closed 3-4 lower at 166 after fluctuating between 164 1-2 and 168 1-4. Excellent buying took place, however, in American Can, which was bid up to a new high of 59 3-8 for the present stock, and then sagged a point.

*New 1926 peak prices also were recorded by Air Reduction, American Power and Light, Burns Brothers A, and Greene Cananea Copper. Oils showed better resistance to pressure, pan-handlers producers and refiners closing 2 points higher on the day.

Weakness developed in some of the high priced industrial specialties. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe broke from 243 to 230 1-2 and then rebounded to 232 1-2, off 7 1-2 net. Foundation Company broke nearly 6 points to 91 1-4. Intertype sank to a new low at 69.

Call money held at 4 per cent. all day. The New York Stock Exchange reported a larger turnover in call loans than for a week past, with the supply more abundant than usual. Time money and Commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Wheat prices drifted lower when an early rally based on reports of higher temperatures in the west, failed to hold. Cotton prices broke about $1.50 a bale as a result of the bearish interpretation placed upon the government report putting condition at 70.7 per cent. and indicated yield at 15.- 368,000 bales, but rallied later on adverse weather reports, closing 11 to 15 points net higher. Raw sugar was unchanged but the futures market was firm. Coffee prices showed little change.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 23.—(AP)—Rapidly enlarging stocks of domestic wheat with receipts assuming record proportions turned the wheat market here downward today after an early advance. Closing quotations on Wheat were heavy at 1-4 to 1 1-8c net decline with corn unchanged to 3-8c higher, oats 1-8-1-4 to 1-2c up, and provisions varying from 12c setback to a rise of 10c.

Piling up of stocks of wheat in the southwest attracted particular interest, Kansas City having alone received 7,500,000 bushels in the last five days. Primary arrivals as a whole have reached an aggregate of nearly 18,000,000 bushels so far this week, one of the largest totals ever known for any similar period. Under such circumstances, cash wheat prices, both here and at Kansas City showed a tendency to sag and on some transactions were 1c a bushel down.

Corn owed its strength to numerous dry weather complaints from the main portion of the corn belt. Copious rains were said to be needed in many sections. Oats were affected by reports that yields as a rule promise to be light.

For the most part provisions were firm, influenced by the action of hog values and of corn.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP)—More favorable foreign and domestic news steadied the Bond market today, bringing about a moderate improvement in prices. French obligations continued to reflect the more cheerful outlook for a solution of the nation's financial difficulties while domestic issues were helped by the retention of the 3 1-2 per cent Federal Reserve Bank rate.

Gains in the French group were limited to fractions but the tone of trading was one of distinct improvement, exerting a favorable influence on the rest of the foreign list. Belgian bonds advanced sympathetically and a number of German issues resumed their upward movement.

The principal trading feature in the domestic list was the vigorous rally of local traction liens following the termination of the subway strike. Interborough Rapid Transit issues gained 1 to 2 points and the other transportations bonds moved ahead at a more moderate pace.

Price movements elsewhere were conflicting. Investment Railroad issues made a better showing than those of a speculative cast, but gains and losses for the group as a whole struck an even balance. Atchison 4s of 1956, Chicago & Alton 3s and Delaware & Hudson 5 1-2s lost ground but New York Central Refunding 5s, Nickel Plate 5 1-2s and Baltimore & Ohio 5s were fractionally higher.

Oil company liens moved up under the leadership of Skelly and Pan-American convertibles, but selling of other industrials included Bethlehem Steel 5 1-2s and Old Ben Coal 6s.

CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP)—Extreme dullness characterized today's Curb market, with price movements narrow and irregular. Professional traders appeared to be waiting for a more definite indication of the trend on the "bog board" before undertaking new commitments on the smaller exchange.

Heavy liquidation of the oils which has been in progress for a fortnight, or longer, appears to have been completed, at least temporarily. Moderate gains were recorded by some of the pipe line stocks.

Motor shares showed mostly small fractional changes with the establishment of a new 1926 high by federal and extension of the recent advance in Durant among the new features. Coal shares were firm. Baking issues showed further improvement, General Baking advancing a point. Artificial Silk shares were heavy.

Public utilities were mixed. American Gas & Electric and American Light & Traction each advanced about 3 points but United Gas Improvement continued to yield on a traditional "selling on the good news" following the announcement of a proposed 25 per cent stock dividend.

Several factories in town Thursday reported inside temperatures as high as 127 degrees and that the machinery was too hot to work with. This intense heat made itself felt on Friday for several score employes failed to report for duty as they had not recovered from the heat of the previous day. LIGHTNING CAUSES $700 DAMAGE AT NELSON PLACE HOUSE

Damage amounting to approximately $700 was done by a bolt of lightning that entered the home of Myles E. Standish at 14 Nelson place during the electrical storm that hit Norwich about 7 o'clock Friday morning. The lightning entered the house near the eaves at the south east corner and tearing a hole through the side of the building shot along the partitions of a bedroom tearing lath and plaster from the walls. Hitting some of the electric wiring it continued down to the first floor where it jumped into a radio set and completely demolished the set. The bolt left by the radio ground wire.

In the bedroom a strip of plaster about four feet wide and extending from the ceiling to the floor was ripped off together with the laths. A window casing was torn out and hurled across the room and onto the bed. Holes were torn in curtains and draperies were torn from the fastenings. In the dining room on the first floor the chain pulls for the lights were melted off and the electric service and telephone put out of commission.

Mr. and Mrs. Standish were not at home at the time, Mrs. Standish being at Quaker Hill where she is spending the summer with her son. Mr. Standish was at the home of his mother, Mrs. C. H. Standish at 52 Asylum street. In the house were Mrs. Jeannette M. Kent and her daughter, Alyce, who although somewhat stunned by the concussion were not injured.

Shortly before 7 o'clock Friday morning lightning struck the house owned and occupied by Arthur Sylvia, No. 69 Pearl street. The lightning evidently entered the house on the electric light wire. It burned out the lights in the house and set fire to a calendar on the wall. The lightning then went into the cellar and to the ground without causing further damage. The fire department was called out but the flames had been extinguished before their arrival.

Lightning entered the Central Fire station on Chestnut street and burned out a fuse, killing circuit No. 4. Chief H. L. Stanton immediately replaced the burned out fuse with a new one and the circuit was ready for service.

During the storm about 3 o'clock in the morning lightning struck the chimney at the Blackston house, Connecticut College for Women, New London. The chimney was crumbled by the bolt and pieces of the slate roof were crushed and scattered to the ground. There was no damage inside the building.

FIRST BAPTIST VACATION SCHOOL CLOSES SEASON

The fourth annual church vacation school which has been conducted at the First Baptist church during the past four weeks, was brought to a successful close Friday evening when exercises was held in the Sunday school parlors at the church and the many interesting pieces of work done by the children were displayed for the benefit of relatives and friends.

The parents and friends of the pupils were welcomed by Rev. Edward C. Dunbar, pastor of the church, following which the entertainment was presented under the supervision of Miss Marion Browning, principal. The opening number was Onward Christian Soldiers, sung as the members of the school marched to their places at the front of the auditorium. This was followed by the repeating in unison of the motto of the school. The program then continued as follows:

Pupils perfect since registering were: Norman Dunbar, Wayne Rathbun, Claire Wilcox and Frace Runn. Pupils missing one day were Verna Smith, Elwood Frink and Orde Peacan. The enrollment in the school averaged 53 during the four weeks, 30 boys and 23 girls.

The exhibits of work done by the pupils was exceptionally large and showed much work on the part of the instructors and that the children enjoyed their work. Every child had at least a dozen pieces to exhibit and the work was well executed. The girls' craft work included reed baskets twine bags, breakfast sets, beads, holders, painted vases and many other useful articles. Numerous scrap books were also made and these are to be sent to missions in India.

The beginners' work included Japanese lanterns, paper chains, curtain pulls, furniture, caps, mats, reins, pinwheels, fish bowls, jointed animals, memorandum pads and other useful articles, while the boys' craft work included medicine cabinets, blackboards, candle-sticks, tabarets, book ends, bird houses, bread boards, meat choppers and numerous other articles for household uses.

The responsibility for the school and the vast amount of work done, as well as the credit for the exceptionally fine showing, belong to the pupils and to their teachers, Mrs. Fred Wilson and Miss Doris Pulsifer, in charge of craft work Rev. Edward C. Dunbar, supervisor of primary department and boys' craft work, and Miss Marion Browning, principal of the vacation school and supervisor of the junior department and girls' craft work.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

The Misses Sayles, of Norwich Town, are at South Hartswell, Me. for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark A. Browning of Toledo arrived at Groton Long Point Friday to spend two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Calvin L. Swan.

Miss Betty Gilman, of New York, a senior at Smith College, will arrive in town today (Saturday) for a visit of a week with Miss Caroline T. Gilman.

Mrs. J. Edward Driscoll, of Washington street is the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Cassidy, of Waterbury, at their cottage on Block Island.

Norwich friends who are at Harwichport, Mass., this month are pleased to welcome Mrs. Richard R. Graham, now of Providence, recently returned from a trip around the world and who is at the former Tirrell cottage for the summer.

Three Norwich girls now abroad, Misses Mary Hinckley, Marion and Louise Bailey, who have been guests at Hotel Gwalia, Upper Woburn Place, London, write home of attending a tea given by Lord Saye and Seal, a member of the House of Lords. After tea on the terrace the host conducted the guests through the various chambers of the Parliament buildings. There is Eastern Connecticut interest in the incident, from the fact that it was another Lord Saye and Seal from whom the town of Saybrook received its name. The founders of the town of Norwich came from Saybrook.

OUTLINED PUBLICITY PROGRAM OF THAMES VALLEY COMMITTEE

The publicity programme of the Thames Valley Citizens' committee was outlined by Herbert R. Branche, of this city, secretary of the committee, in a talk which he gave at the weekly meeting of the New London Rotary club Thursday noon at the Mohican hotel. President F. W. Edgerton presided at the meeting and introduced Mr. Branche, who spoke in part, as follows:

Your president has invited me to come before your organization and tell you about the Thames valley barbecue, that we expect to hold, along the banks of the Thames river, between New London and Norwich.

Before taking up the barbecue, I feel it will be timely to mention the causes that have made it appear necessary to pull off an event of more than ordinary importance, here and at this particular time.

This being the 150th anniversary, of our birth as a nation and inasmuch as the federal government is recognizing the importance of the occasion, commemorating the event by holding the sesqui-centennial, in Philadelphia, it would seem quite fitting that we turn our thoughts backward, over our industrial and commercial pathways of at least 50 years.

Born and reared in New London county, I speak with the knowledge, born of experience. As a small boy, my earliest recollection had to do with playing around a small, one cylinder machine, paper mill, of which my father was part owner and superintendent. As in all New England villages, prior to and at that period, each little community had its saw mill, grist mill, shingle mill, cider mill, blacksmith's forge and lastly its all important shoemaker or cobblers shop.

As a boy of 5 years, I well remember the first pair of cow-hide boots, purchased at the country store for me, and how proud I felt in their possession.

I cite these mile stones, in hurriedly passing along the path-way of life, as they affected me and as they existed when I came upon the scene of action.

In 1876, 50 years ago, the 200 anniversary of the nation's birth was being celebrated in Philadelphia, and the great industrial and commercial development along these lines, as a nation, was well displayed.

Fifty years ago, Providence could boast of being the home of the stationary engine, the Corliss steam engine, the Harris Corliss, the Armington and Sims and the Providence steam engine. All were made there. Today, they have gone their way, either consolidated with other makes or were unable to meet competition and went out of business.

This illustrates one of the reasons why the New England governors sent out that S. O. S. call, one year ago and held the Worcester conference, inviting all industrial, commercial, civic and agricultural interests of New England in conference, in order that ways and means might be found to keep these New England states, in the front ranks of the industrial and commercial armies of the world.

Back to eastern Connecticut, the Thames valley and the barbecue.

Through the efforts of the Thames Valley council, No. 309 U. C. T. of A. composed of some 210 commercial travelers, came the birth of the Thames Valley Citizens committee. The traveling men have been among the first to feel the industrial depression in New England, and we here in the Thames Valley among the first to apply a remedy. One of the first things done by our organization was to call a conference of the mayors of New London and Norwich together with their courts of common council, and a few of the larger representative heads of local industries, in order to get a closer working arrangement between these twin cities. As was stated at that initial meeting: "Instead of pitting eastern Connecticut communities, in a mad struggle, for supremacy, against each other, it has ever been our contention that there should be a greater amalgamation of eastern Connecticut's civic forces, into one great cohesive unit for the upbuilding of this the grandest section of our splendid common-wealth."

There was so much enthusiasm at the first joint meeting of the mayors and councils of the twin cities of New London and Norwich, that a request was made for a second meeting, and from the second meeting came the above organization, the objects and purposes of which, primarily, are the industrial and commercial development of the Thames valley and eastern Connecticut.

Two ideas for publicity was determined upon. One, that we should publish a Brochure, depicting our many and superior, historical, recreational educational and industrial advantages; and the other, that we hold a huge joint outing, and barbecue of all the civic, industrial, athletic, commercial and fraternal organizations in eastern Connecticut, along the shore of the Thames river valley.

Facts about the barbecue: Twenty two organizations have already expressed their approval and support of the barbecue.

Seven committees have been named to carry forward the work and all organizations participating will have representation on all committees.

One hundred and ten names have already been assigned to committees representing organizations co-operating.

State and metropolitan papers have agreed to carry photogravure sheets of the huge barbecue and a general write up of the Thames valley.

We expect to have free transportation on the Thames river from its mouth to its source on that day.

We expect to have a series of athletic events that have never been approached in the Thames valley.

We expect to have a veteran, to handle the barbecue roast, when several head of cattle, sheep, chicken, lobsters, etc., will be prepared for the hungry crowd who will attend.

There will be sweet corn, watermelon and ice cream enough for 5,000 to 10,000 people.

There will be a special committee appointed to assist metropolitan and state newspaper representatives prior to, and on the big day.

There will be banners displayed across the street in New London and Norwich, publicising the huge barbecue, day and date.

NORWICH MINISTERS' ASS'N HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

Accepting the invitation of Rev. Dr. David A. Pitt, pastor of the Central Baptist church, members of the Norwich Ministers' association held their annual meeting Friday afternoon at the summer home of Dr. Pitt, at Pine lodge, Voluntown.

The ministers left the city by automobile early in the afternoon and the meeting was under in the grove about the lodge, far from the heat of the city. The session was presided over by Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church, vice president of the association, in the absence of Rev. J. Eldred Brown, the president. The usual reports were heard and the nominating committee presented the following names of officers for the ensuing year, their election being unanimous:

President, Archedeacon J. Eldred Brown, rector of Trinity Episcopal church; vice president, Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey, First Congregational church, Norwich Town; secretary, Rev. A. N. Foster, Church of the Good Shepherd, Universalist; treasurer, Rev. Dr. Alexander H. Abbott, United Congregational church; union committee for the Young Men's Christian association, Rev. J. Eldred Brown, Rev. David A. Pitt, Rev. J. Harlow Graham and Rev. Charles H. Ricketts.

Following the meeting a most enjoyable social time was had in the grove beneath the pines, where a box luncheon was in order. Ice cream and coffee were served by the host. Adding to the pleasure of the occasion was the presence of the wives of the clergymen who were entertained most pleasantly by Mrs. Pitt.

The session closed with the usual vesper service at sunset, in charge of Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, senior officer of the association. Adjournment was taken at 7 o'clock when the return home was made after a day of pleasure with Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Pitt, who proved ideal entertainers.

LIQUOR CASES ARE CONTINUED UNTIL MONDAY

The cases of William Roderick of Woonsocket and Belmire Rodiques of East Providence, R. I., Portuguese, charged with violation of the liquor law by keeping liquor with intent to sell, were continued until Monday morning of next week, when they will be presented Friday morning before Judge Arthur F. Libby of the city court.

Attorney Thomas J. Kelley, counsel for the accused, asked for the continuance, stating that he had only had 10 minutes to talk with his clients and that he understood that there was some defense testimony to be offered. Judge Libby informed him that five policemen were witnesses for the state and that it would inconvenience them to have a continuance. He granted a 10 minute recess for counsel for the defense to find proper grounds for a continuance.

When court reconvened Attorney Kelly again made his request and it was granted by the court. Bonds were fixed at $3500 and were furnished.

The accused were arrested Thursday night following a raid at No. 123 Talman street, where considerable liquor was found in sub-cellars in the building.

EYESTRAINS

Eyestrains cause most nervous disorders. Even the smallest inaccuracy in vision weakens the nerve force. Scientific investigations indicate that seven out of ten persons have faulty vision. This is positively unnecessary. Good glasses will correct poor eyesight and make eyestrain impossible.

Correct errors in vision before they injure your health. Form the habit of regularly consulting us. Save your eyes.

Fred S. Duesenberg, one of the world's greatest builders of racing cars and manufacturer of the $7000 Duesenberg automobile, told George W. Sutton, Jr., America's leading automotive writer, "The Auburn is a Darn Good Car." They both agreed upon it 100%.

Add Mr. Harry Miller's statement that the Auburn is the smoothest stock car he has ever driven and you have samples of the kind of praise the Auburn is receiving from the most "hard-boiled" automobile critics.

But the greatest praise comes from Auburn owners. The engineering authority arrives at his estimate of Auburn's superior quality by his knowledge of the comparative way cars are built today. The owner may not be an engineer but he comes to the same conclusion by the unequalled satisfaction he gets from his car. You will find that to an Auburn owner his car is almost his religion. See the new Auburn, drive it, compare it and if it does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy.

POETRY

Those That Go Down to the Sea

Men who have loved the ships they took to sea,
Loved the tall masts, the prows that dreamed the foam,
Have learned, deep in their hearts how it might be
That there is yet a dearer thing than home.
The decks they walk, the rigging in the stars,
The clean boards counted in the watch they keep,— Theirs, and the sunlight on the slippery spars,
Will haunt them ever, waking and asleep.

Ashore, these men are not as other men;
They walk as strangers through the crowded street,
Or, brooding by their fires, they hear again
The drone astern, where gurgling waters meet.
Or see again a wide and blue lagoon,
And a lone ship that rides there with the moon.
—David Morton, in "Ships in Harbour."

The Free Life of the Bird

(From the Russian of Alexander Sergyevitch Pushkin)

Painful labor, grievous sorrow
Never on God's birdling rest;
And it fears no dark tomorrow;
Builds herself no lasting nest.

On the bough it sleeps light-swinging
Till the ruddy morn appears;
Then it shakes its glad wings, singing,
For the voice of God it hears.

After Spring's delightful weather,
When the burning Summer's fled,
And the Autumn brings together
For men's grieving, for men's dread.

Mists and storms in gloomy legions,
Then the bird across the main
Flies to far-off Southern regions
Till the Spring returns again.
—Nathan Haskell Dole.

The cause of early morning rappings and the jingling of the telephone bell in the home of Mrs. Joseph Heaslip at Hagerstown, Md., had been looked for in vain by police and telephone officials. So at 3 o'clock in the morning Mrs. Heaslip arose and sat down by a window in the rooms where the sounds had been registering. Shortly after 4 o'clock a red-headed woodpecker began operating on a telephone pole. The phone instantly rang and the rappings of the woodpecker came through the room amazingly audible.

Passenger revenues of New Zealand railways are said to be much affected by the competition of privately owned motor services operating on parallel routes. In the neighborhood of Wellington alone some 30 cars are operating on routes from 15 to 125 miles in length, the main service being from Wellington to Wanganui, obtainably catering for interstown traffic. It actually does a little more than one-fifth interior traffic. The quicker service and cheaper rates charged, added to the fact that connections with other bus lines are conveniently made, have diverted traffic from the railways.

IN TEXAS PRIMARY MOODY IS LEADING "MA" FERGUSON

Attorney General Moody Leads "Ma" Ferguson by 72,209 Votes for Democratic Gubernatorial Nomination in Returns From 224 of the 252 Counties—As Moody Lacks a Majority, Which is Necessary for Nomination, It is Probable a Run-off Primary Will be Held in August Between Moody and Ferguson.

DALLAS, Texas, July 25.—(AP)—Miriam A. Ferguson, woman governor of Texas, seeking renomination in the democratic gubernatorial primary, today was trailing Dan Moody, youthful attorney general, by 72,209 votes when 224 of the 252 counties in Texas, including 34 complete, had reported to the Texas election bureau.

Moody, however, lacked 13,961 of having a majority, which is necessary for nomination. Moody's vote was 356,936 and Mrs. Ferguson's 184,827.

Lunch Davidson, Houston lumberman, was third with 79,914.

Other candidates in the race polled an almost negligible vote. The Rev. E. Y. Zimmerman, of Naples, had 1,760; Mrs. Edith Wilmans of Dallas, 2,477; and Mrs. K. M. Johnston, 1,019.

Unless Moody receives a majority, a run-off primary would be held August 28 between the two highest candidates.

The standing of Governor Ferguson and Moody when 452,967 ballots had been tabulated indicated they would be the two eligible for the second primary. Texas election bureau officials estimated that the total vote yesterday in the democratic primary would be between 670,000 and 700,000.

Moody started out with a majority over all others in the race with the first returns after the polls closed last night, and held it at varying figures until midnight. At that hour it began to dwindle, until at 3 p. m. today, it lacked more than 13,000 of being more than half the total vote at that time tabulated for governor.

Interest was attached today to the statement at the opening of Mrs. Ferguson's campaign, to the effect that if Moody led her by one vote she should resign, provided Moody would agree to resign his position as attorney general if she led him by 25,000.

Speaking late last night to an audience at Austin, Mr. Moody asserted Texas would have a new governor within a week, but he did not elaborate.

Governor Ferguson's answer to a question last night as to whether she would quit office if Moody received more votes than she did, was that she would have nothing to say until the final outcome was learned, which she expected to be within three days.

"I have been through elections before and the reports in favor of Moody do not alarm me," she said.

In the republican primary—the first in Texas—there was a factional fight which brought out two lists of candidates for many offices, including governor in Texas, the democratic nomination is considered equivalent to final election but the republicans expect to poll 30,000 votes in their initial primary. Returns from 60 counties, 13 complete, for the republican nomination for governor gave H. H. Haines, the candidate backed by R. B. Creager, national committeeman, 2,900 and E. P. Scott of Corpus Christi, backed by Congressman Wurzbach, 2,073.

Wurbach, the only republican congressman from Texas, seemed to have a safe lead for re-nomination over his Creager opponent, Fred E. Knetsch.

All incumbent democratic congressmen on the fact of present returns have safe leads over their opponents.

The only close race appeared to be in the tenth district where Congressman James P. Buchanan of Brenham was opposed by James R. Hamilton. On the latest returns Buchanan had a lead of 500.

LATEST RETURNS FROM TEXAS PRIMARY ELECTION

DALLAS, Texas, July 25.—(AP)—Attorney General Dan Moody's lead over Governor Miriam Ferguson in the democratic gubernatorial primary was increased to more than 93,000 votes tonight when 224 out of the 252 counties in the state, including 48 complete, had reported.

The vote stood Moody 319,673; Ferguson 220,976.

Lynch Davidson of Houston, running third, had 95,886; the Rev. O. F. Zimmerman, 1,964, Mrs. K. M. Johnston, 1,718; Mrs. Edith Wilmans 3,609.

Mr. Moody lacks more than 4,000 of a majority, necessary for nomination on the basis of these returns.

THREE FATALITIES IN COLLAPSE OF FOOTBRIDGE

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 25.—(AP)—The collapse of a small footbridge over Coal river at Whiteville, 60 miles from here had caused the death of six persons tonight. Five were killed instantly and one died later from injuries suffered when the span gave way last night under the weight of about 125 spectators who had crowded upon it to view a free carnival act.

Most of the 60 spectators injured, when they were dropped 20 feet to the shallow water of the river bed were women and children. Thirty-two were brought to Charleston hospitals. The remainder were treated at the scene for broken bones and bruises and later taken home.

The footbridge, about 100 feet long and five feet wide, was suspended on steel cables from concrete towers on each side of the river. In the free act, Harry McClain saturated his clothing with gasoline, set it on fire and ran under the bridge to dive into the water. As he passed under the span he crowd shifted from one side of the bridge to the other to get a better view. The steel cable broke at one end of the span, sliding the spectators off one end and dropping them about 20 feet to the river bed.

Work of treating the injured was quickly organized by physicians from surrounding mining towns. Governor Howard M. Gore ordered physicians and nurses of the state health department to the scene from Charleston by automobile and he followed in a special relief train. As the governor's special neared Whitesville it met another relief train on the way to Charleston with the most seriously injured. Physicians and nurses aboard the governor's special as well as the executive transferred to the relief train and returned to Charleston.

PRISONER WAS BEATEN BY FELLOW INMATES

CHICAGO, July 25.—(AP)—In the bull pen of "murderers row" in the county jail today, 68 prisoners formed a circle inside which Martin J. Durkin, ohief gunman, facing a penitentiary sentence for the murder of a federal agent, was severely beaten for making alleged insulting remarks about women.

When guards arrived, Durkin's face was severely battered but none would say who did it or the exact cause of the fight.

The attack upon Durkin, an investigation disclosed was not by one man but was a concentrated assault by the body of prisoners.

Durkin was not able to identify his assailants. "The fists flew so fast," he said, "that I was not able to see who hit me."

Jail officials described the assault as the method used by the prisoners in punishing a fellow member who was "in bad" with them. Durkin told the officials that he had made an insulting remark about the sweetheart of one of the prisoners.

LEROY JEFFERS KILLED WHEN PLANE FELL

WOWKA, Calif., July 25.—(AP)—Leroy Jeffers, noted author, lecturer and explorer of New York was killed here today when an airplane in which he was a passenger, crashed to the ground. Dr. Sterling Bunnell, of San Francisco, pilot of the machine, suffered a fractured hip.

Witnesses said the airplane apparently shot out of control, plunging 100 feet into the flower garden of a hotel here. Dr. Bunnell is president of the San Francisco branch of the National Aeronautic society.

Jeffers organized the Associated Mountaineering Clubs of North America and was a Fellow of the Royal Geographical society, London.

ONE OF FIVE THIEVES WAS CAUGHT AFTER $13,000 HOLD-UP

NEW YORK, July 25.—(AP)—One of the five bandits who held up and robbed the Reid Ice Cream Co., today of cash and checks totaling $13,000 was captured shortly after the robbery, when the bandit's car crashed into a fire hydrant. The other four escaped with the loot after a gun battle with police.

The captured man, Peter Powers, denied earlier reports that John (Bum) Rogers, notorious robber and escaped convict was a member of the band. Police also said the first report of Rogers' participation in the holdup was erroneous.

Cecil Linderman, shot in the abdomen when he attempted to stop the robbers' flight from the fourth floor of the ice cream company, is reported in a serious condition.

Powers, the police say, was driver of the car identified as that in which the robbers left the scene of the hold-up.

The crash of the car on a busy corner attracted a large crowd. Three police who ran to investigate were fired upon by the occupants of the car, but fearful of hitting bystanders, held their fire until the crowd scattered, enabling four of the bandits to make good their escape.

SUCCEEDED IN ELIMINATING AN ECHO FROM CHURCH

CLINTON, Mass., July 25.—(AP)—The First Congregational church of this town today won a 25 year fight with an echo which has consistently interrupted devotional services since the erection of the edifice a quarter of a century ago.

The engineer agreed not to charge for his work if unsuccessful, provided the church would pay the cost of a $700 staging. Last week he finished relining the interior of the building and today's service was agreed on as a test.

It was successful in every detail. The Rev. Nathan H. Gist preached an uninterrupted sermon, members of the board shouted at each other without raising an echo, music rolled through the auditorium without a tangled note and the engineer received a check for $4,400.

EDWARD DONOVAN WAS KILLED BY AUTOMOBILIST

FRAMINGHAM, Mass., July 25.—(AP)—Edward (Piper) Donovan, former sprinter and brother of William ("Pooch") Donovan, Harvard's veteran trainer was killed here by an automobilist who escaped after the accident. His body was found in the road apparently some time after he had been struck, and local and state police began a search for the motorist. Death was due to a fractured skull.

Donovan was 58 years old, a shoe worker by trade and in his heyday as an athlete, was credited with a 9 3-5 seconds hundred yard dash at Brockton. He also was the first American to win the Sheffield sprint in England. His home was in Natick.

TWO PRISONERS KILLED IN ATTEMPTED JAIL BREAK

LANSING, Kas., July 25.—(AP)—Destruction of a part of the state prison here by fire and the killing of at least two guards, are believed to have been two of the steps by Ernest Hardwick, 19 year old bandit, and five other prisoners to gain their freedom here last night.

Hardwick and R. W. Edwards, another prisoner, were killed by Edward Ransom, a guard in the attempted delivery, and Captain R. E. Manatt, a veteran of the prison patrol was seriously stabbed, but is expected to recover.

CABLED PARAGAPHS

LONDON, July 25.—(AP)—Four battleships, King George V, Ajax, Thunderer and Agamemnon, 15 destroyers and one submarine will be struck from the navy list this year and scrapped. This is in accordance with the terms of the Washington treaty.

NAPLES, July 25.—(AP)—Vesuvius became eruption today, giving a brilliant display of fireworks to many thousands of tourists. Those familiar with the volcano declare the eruption is harmless. Many visitors organized expeditions to climb the slopes of Vesuvius to view the phenomenon from close range.

MOSCOW, Russia, July 25.—(AP)—Gregory Zinovieff, close associate of Lenin, and who has had a prominent part in communistic activities in Russia since the inception of the movement, has been ousted from the political bureau of the central executive committee of the communist party.

LONDON, July 25.—(AP)—Spoiled boys make bad husbands. So says Miss H. S. Copper Hodson, health inspector of the Durham county council. "Mothers who are too indulgent to their sons give wives self-centered husbands who, because they been thoroughly spoiled, never lift a finger to help in the home," Miss Hodgson declared at a sanitary congress here. She was speak on some of the difficulties of rearing children.

HARMONIOUS BLENDING OF EAST AND WEST

SARAJEVO, Yugo-Slavia, July 25.—(AP)—Twelve years have gone by since the crime that precipitated the world conflict was committed in Sarajevo, but the little Bosnian town remains as obscure and unpretentious as it was in the days when it was under the Turks.

It has slept throughout the 12 years of Europe's reconstruction, unconscious of the mighty part it played in the war which left several nations in ruins. From the tops of its "nine-and-nine" minarets Turkish muezzins still call the faithful to prayer, while thousands of unbelievers do their daily tasks in the bazaars.

The only evidence the American traveler finds that the Austrian Archduke Franse Joseph was murdered here is a small tablet on a building near which the Austrian noble was shot down. American tourists invariably take out their cameras and photograph the spot.

The little River Mljacka, whose placid waters were stained with the dripping blood of the slain duke, winds its peaceful way into the valley beyond, oblivious of the fact that its name is mentioned in a thousand histories in connection with the assassination of the heir to the Austrian throne.

The people of the town seem lethargic, indifferent and indolent. Many of them are Moslems who, unaffected by Turkey's example, still wear the time-honored fez prescribed by Mahamet. They sit in their dimunitive bazaars, legs crossed, inscrutable and imperturbable, seemingly unmoved by the tide of life and color which goes by.

From the street of the Coppersmiths comes the rythmic beating of hammers; in the street of the Leathersellers sit the cobblers and shoe merchants, serenely plying their trade. Potters, silver filigree workers, carpet weavers, spice merchants, and a host of other trades are represented in the rows of bazaars.

Since the former Austrian province of Bosnia-Herzegovina passed over to Yugo-Slavia, Sarajevo has become increasingly attractive as a tourist center.

Nowhere in Europe does the American traveller find such a harmonious blending of east and west. The Moslems of the Orient rub elbows with the westerner of Europe. Peasant women, mounted on donkeys, with distaff in hand, and white-robed cameltenders, with trains of their faithful beasts or burden following them, make their way slowly through the torturous streets, while modern American motor-cars, shoot along the principal thoroughfares.

CRAB BEDS PROTECTED BY STATE GUNBOAT

NORFOLK, Va., July 25.—(AP)—The Virginia crab beds of lower Tangier Sound in Chesapeake bay today lay under the protecting one-pounders of the state gunboat Commodore Maury, marking the end for the present at least, of a long war against Maryland poachers.

The scene of of a pitched battle Friday night between the poachers and the crew of the Virginia police patrol boat Marguerite, the sound was Sabbath-quiet today with one of the invading fishing craft in sight. How many of the Marylanders were wounded in the fight with the patrol boat was not known, but the crew of four were confindent they had registered several hits, while escaping injury themselves.

Captain A. B. Hudgins, commanding the gunboat, which was sent to the relief of the Marguerite will begin an investigation tomorrow. His report to Commissioners of Fisheries Houston was: Found things not so good. Will stay several days and start investigation Monday." No elaborating rport has been received.

The battle on Friday between the Marguerite and the poachers culminated a long feud between Virginia fishermen and pochers from the Maryland crab waters. Ill feeling grew out of the recently enacted Virginia conservation laws which restrict to Virginia residents the right to fish in the state's waters. The situation was said to have been aggravated because of a scarcity of marketable crabs in the Maryland waters while Virginia areas were plentifully stocked at a time when prices for crabs were soaring.

He saw government agents seize more than 20 bottles of whiskey, gin, wines and champagnes which had filled two of the dresser drawers. The assortment was removed to the federal building as evidence.

REV. NORRIS' SECOND SERMON SINCE SLAYING

FORT WORTH, Texas, July 25.—(AP)—Facing another session next Tuesday of the grand jury investigating the shooting by the Rev. J. Frank Norris of D. E. Chipps, lumberman, the minister today preached his second Sunday sermon since the shooting.

The First Baptist church, in which the shooting occurred, was not so largely attended as last Sunday to hear the pastor's sermon.

His subject today was taken from St. Paul's epistle to the Hebrews, tenth and eleventh chapters, the text being:

"Now, faith is the substance of things hoped for." He touched on the story of Cain and Abel and that of the killing of the Egyptian by Moses and the latter's subsequent flight, "without leaving a forwarding address"—as Dr. Norris put it.

Rahab, who betrayed Jericho into the hands of the Jews, shall occupy the same seat of power as Moses and Abraham, because she too, had faith, the minister said.

He made no direct allusion to the slaying of Chipps, who was shot to death in the study of the church July 17.

Prayers Offered For Catholics of Mexico

By 1,500,000 Roman Catholics in New York City—Cardinal Hayes Issued Call.

NEW YORK, July 25—(AP)—New York's 1,500,000 Roman Catholics were called upon today by Cardinal Hayes to pray for their co-religionists in Mexico on August 1, the date on which a proposed economic and social blockade of that country is to become effective.

Cardinal Hayes denounced the treatment of Catholics by the Mexican government as constituting a "distressful and dreadful crisis." His pastoral letter, charging that "shocking injustices are perpetrated by an anti-Christian government against priests and a religious and faithful Catholic people," was read at all the masses today.

The pastoral letter was prepared before reports reached New York that the pope was said to regard with disfavor the proposal by the Archbishop of Mexico City of a retaliatory boycott. The letter was sent to priests of the diocese earlier in the week, Monsignor M. J. Lavelle of St. Patrick's cathedral said tody, and no change in it had been made.

The cardinal had received no word from the vatican of any adverse attitude of the pope to the proposed boycott, Monsignor Lavelle said. The pastoral letter did not refer to the boycott, but called for prayers for the Mexican Catholics on next Sunday, the feast of St. Peter in chains. A similar call was issued from all Catholic pulpits today at the request of the pope. Monsignor Lavelle said Cardinal Hayes had been informed of the suspension of all religious services and the withdrawal of priests from all churches in Mexico, but had no comment to make on this action.

RITES BY CATHOLIC PRIESTS PROHIBITED IN MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, July 25—(AP)—All religious services in Catholic churches throughout Mexico requiring the offices of priests will be suspended after July 31 by order of the Catholic Episcopate which has addressed a pastoral letter to the Catholics of Mexico.

The letter, which is signed by the Archbishop of Mexico, the most Reverend Mora Y Del Rio, the seven other archbishops and 29 bishops, protests against the new religious regulations promulgated by the Mexican government, and proclaims the various penalties which may be imposed against those of the Catholic faith who are responsible for the new laws or in any way aid in putting them into effect.

Among these penalties is ex-communication of those who issue laws, regulations or decrees against the rights and liberty of the church, those who prevent the exercise of religious jurisdiction, and those who usurp ecclesiastic property.

The letter therefore implies that President Calles and all officials of the government responsible for issuing or enforcing the regulations may be ex-communicated.

It is declared by the episcopate, in protesting against the governmental decree, that work will be carried on for amendment of this decree and the anti-religious provisions of the constitution, and that the clergy will not desist from their purpose until it is attained.

The letter was issued in agreement with the expressed views of Pope Pius XI, who in his last apostolic letter spoke of the iniquity of the degrees and laws sanctioned by the Mexican authities against Catholics in Mexico.

While religious services will cease in all Catholic churches and all priests will be withdrawn, the church buildings will remain open for worshippers, and the letter expresses confidence that the churches will be protected by the worshippers, and exhorts all Catholics to remain faithful to their religion It predicts that after the present persecutions the Catholich church in Mexico will emerge with greater strength and glory than before.

A fifth woman held at police headquarters will be questioned tomorrow. The quizzings are all related to the Mellett case inasmuch as they are conducted in an effort to find out how openly vice has been permitted in Canton and if the denizens have knowledge of a plot of retaliation against the publisher.

Heads of the investigation indicated today that a sweeping inquiry into the narcotic "trade in Canton and vicinity may be made in an effort to uncover leads. Mellett had been influential in sending narcotic peddlers to the Atlanta penitentiary.

FEWER DISPLAYS OF LEGS AND MORE BRAINS NEEDED

Culver City, Calif., July 25—(AP)—Fewer displays of legs and more of brains constitute a formula of success for film stars in the opinion of Samuel Goldwyn, pioneer producer, who made this statement tonight apropos of the recently reiterated Will Hays policy of "clean motion pictures."

Goldwyn continued "photographs of the nude, or semi-nude female's form divine, are passe in the movies. They are not only a possible detriment to public morals, but also a mighty poor type of exploitation.

The day when you could substitute legs for brains in the motion picture has gone forever," Goldwyn concluded.

HUGE FINANCIAL TASK NOW CONFRONTS FRENCH GOV'T

Premier Poincare Must Raise from Four Billion to Five Billion Francs Within the Next Thirty Days—Premier is Opposed to Foreign Credits—An Increase in Taxes, Both Direct and Indirect, and a Forced Loan Are Regarded as Forming the Basis of the New Government's Plans.

PARIS, July 25.—(AP)—Premier Poincare is faced with the herculean task of raising from four billion to five billion francs within the next 30 days and met his ministers in cabinet council today to talk it over.

The premier's plans have not yet been divulged, but one thing appears certain, "France must consent to renewed financial sacrifices."

M. Poincare made no secret of his opposition to foreign credits, if they can be avoided, and admitted that the situation of the treasury as drawn by De Monzie, the finance minister, Wednesday, was only a pale reflection of the actual state of affairs.

The ministers deferred announcing what they intended to do in the way of the financial redemption of the franc, but discussed among themselves several important points—first, no moratorium for national defense, as short term treasury bonds; second, no funding; third, no advance from the Bank of France on the 1926 taxes.

The financial projects will not be definitely drafted until Tuesday morning, and will be referred to the finance committee immediately after their introduction in the chamber of that day. M. Poincare will urge that they must be voted before August 8.

An increase in taxes, both direct and indirect, and a forced loan are regarded as forming the basis of the new government's plans. It is known that the question of a forced loan was discussed at the cabinet council today, but its application appears difficult; many of the ministers pointed out that the experiences along this line attempted by other countries were very discouraging.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW TO BE GUEST OF COMMONS

LONDON, July 25—(AP)—George Bernard Shaw, who will be 70 tomorrow—and is as Shawian as ever,—will be honored guest at a dinner in the house of commons, which is expected to add still another controversy to the long list of those which have sizzled and crackled as sidelights to his literary career.

It was proposed that Shaw's birthday speech be broadcast, but the British Broadcasting company, which is something of a government monopoly, undertook to extract a pledge from him not to make controversial utterances, and, as might be expected, he declined any such pledge for his 70th birthday party—or his 89th; 90th or 100th, so the speech will not be broadcast, but the public is awaiting with even more interest than otherwise what G. B. S. will say, for one phase of his career which is never dull, is jostling the English in particular and the world in general—making them like it and pay him handsomely for his barter and repartee.

The newspapers are filled with columns of adultation and critical analysis of Shaw's remarkable personality and genius, with many tributes from abroad, especially American and continental.

JOYCE HAWLEY DENIES ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE

CHICAGO, July 25—(AP)—Recovering from an overdose of a sleeping potion, in the County hospital tonight, Joyce Hawley, "the bath tub girl," protested vehemently that she had no intention of committing suicide when she took the medicine last night in her hotel room.

She was discharged a week ago from her cabaret job in Morton Grove,—suburb, when village officials protested to the tavern keeper. And tonight Joyce admitted she was flat broke but "scared to die." Her dismissal resulted from publicity over her recent arrest for disregarding traffic signals and "cussing" the police.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Daugelas, went to the hospital to see her, but her father declared Joyce's present predicament seemed to him "another advertising stunt."

Joyce said she was sitting out for a walk last night from her hotel with an army officer, when she was affronted by the remarks of a man in front of the hotel and she returned to her room. Unable to go to sleep, she took three doses of sleeping powder, which, instead of quieting her, brought on hysteria. County hospital physicians said her condition was not serious.

SULTAN FINDS FRANCE HOTTER THAT MOROCCO

PARIS, July 25—(AP)—The Sultan of Morocco thinks its hotter in France than in his own country.

Mulai Youssef admits that is the only grievance he had against France, saying: "It is too abnormally hot. I never felt such heat in Morocco."

Curiously enough, the thermometer never rose above 90 since the arrival in France of the Moroccan ruler, since 100 is a regular thing in his domain.

Otherwise the sultan was delighted with the reception he received everywhere, from officials and populace. He came to France to attend the Bastile day celebrations and the ceremonies attendant upon the opening of a Moslem mosque in Paris.

Concerning Abd-el-Krim, Mulai Youssef is inclined to belittle the importance of the Riffian chief.

STRIKING WORKERS CLASHED WITH POLICE

PASSAIC, N. J., July 25—(AP)—Striking fur workers from New York clashed with the police today when the strikers attempted to form a parade following a joint meeting with Passaic textile strikers.

J., was charged with assault and battery. She was alleged to have stoned an officer. The others were charged with disorderly conduct. They were Eva, Sylvia and Esther Kleinan, sisters, of New York; Vancheazo Coco, an Italian, labor organizer of New York; John Sedo, a textile striker of Clifton, N. J.

About 350 fur strikers came here in automobiles for the joint meeting with the textile strikers. They left their cars about a block from the meeting hall and proceeded to form a parade. Police tore down their banners and fruitrated their attempt.

After the meeting, which was addressed by Albert Weisbord, leader of the textile strikers, and Ben Gold, leader of the furriers, another effort to parade was made. It was then that the clash came.

Weisbord said he was leaving for Washington tonight or tomorrow to confer with Senator Borah as a possible mediator of the textile strike

100,000 VISITED SESQUI-CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION

PHILADELJHIA, July 25.—(AP)—Free amusements at the sesqui-centennial exposition today drew one of the largest crowds on record. Up to 7 p. m., nearly 75,000 persons had paid the 50 cents admission to the grounds, which gave them free access to the concessions on the gladway, where all the amusements are concentrated. Crowds were still pouring through the scores of turnstiles and officials estimated the day's attendance would reach 100,000.

The Pennsylvania state building was the only evidence of the fight of religious bodies to keep the exposition closed on the Sabbath. Its doors were closed by order of Governor Pinchot. Reports were in circulation that the Methodist men's committee of 100 which is leading the campaign for it closed Sunday, had detectives on hand to gather evidence for further court action under the blue laws of 1784. These reports, however, lacked verification.

The approach led to a detection of the odor of liquor. Barker was brought to headquarters and charged with being intoxicated. The young man insisted on having a medical examination and Dr. M. D. Reardan was called. The physician found that Barker had been drinking, but was not drunk. In the meantime a search had been made of the sedan. In it was found a gallon jug containing about one pint of alcohol cuplits, three pint bottles filled with the stuff, a funnel and one empty pint bottle. WILLIMANTIC, July 26—Rounded up by Deputy Sheriff Allison L. Frink of Andover, a few hours after having stolen about $100 from the grocery and general merchandise store conducted by Edward A. Standish, Saturday morning, Steve Lukukukha, 17, who resides in the southern part of Andover, near the Hebron town line, was brought before the justice court and found guilty of theft. Justice of the Peace Charles A. Faulkner imposed a fine of $5 and costs, amounting to $14.65, and gave the youth a suspended sentence in the reform school for boys at Meriden, placing him on probation for six months. The money was recovered. After his store had been opened for some time, Mr. Standish had occasion to make change for a customer and discovered that $100 was missin gfrom his cash drawer. Enumerating the persons who had been seen in or about the store that morning his mind became fixed on Lukukuha. Sheriff Frink called the boy at home and after some grilling secured a confession from him. The youth said he had rushed into the place and taken the money when he saw Mr. Standish go into the cellar of the store. He had not counted the amount, which he had hidden in a stone wall.

Musky and happy and tanned a deep brown, the 97 men and three officers of Company C, 169th Infantry, returned Sunday afternoon from the rigors of camp life at Camp Trumbull, Niantic, making the return trip, as they did the outgoing, in three large motor motor buses. The local company, the largest to the regiment, was the only one to ride in such style, all other units traveling in special trains. Captain Joseph R. Morrison, with Lieutenants Elliott S. Smith and Edward Morrison, were highly pleased with the two weeks at camp. Every detail was carried out in top-notch shape and the general behavior of the boys was beyond reproach. The Thread City boys were especially fortunate in having general good health. Several special affairs were enjoyed during the stay at Niantic. The most recent attraction for the local boys was a mock court martin twhich resulted in the acquittal of two local boys, Theodore Martin and Private Lucas.

Upon the breaking of camp First Lieutenant Elliott S. Smith and Mrs. Smith left on a trip in celebration of their 15th wedding anniversary. With them are their two sons, Bude and Elliott Smith.

Brief Paragraphs

Probation Officer S. Arnold Peckham is reported as improving at St. Joseph's hospital and is now able to sit up.

The Girl Scouts of the Congregational church broke camp Saturday after two weeks stay at Camp Cheerful, Crystal lake, Eastford.

Cadet Watson Burton of the U. S. Coast Guard Academy, who has been on a cruise from the Bay of Fundy to Bermuda, is spending a 34-hour furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Burton.

Miss Bourque, who was but 17, died last Saturday in St. Joseph's hospital, Providence, from septic poisoning that followed an illegal operation, according to Medical Examiner Clifford H. Griffin of Providence.

East Providence police said last night that the woman designated by Mrs. Bourque, mother of Emelda, to be the one who performed the operation, had left town at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in an automobile with two men.

Deputy Chief Patterson requested the newspapers to publish nothing in connection with the case that would handicap the police in their investigation of the matter.

Sometime after her departure, Deputy Chief Fred L. Patterson, armed with a "Jane Doe" warrant, arrived at the house at 3 Willett avenue, prepared to arrest the woman on a charge of having performed an illegal operation.

The warrant was approved by Attorney General Charles P. Sisson late yesterday afternoon after a conference of Mr. Sisson, Chief Everett W. Adams, Everett D. Higgins, clerk of the seventh district court; Russell W. Richmond, acting town solicitor, and Deputy Chief Patterson. Mrs. Bourque was awaiting to identify the prisoner to be brought in.

While the conference was on, the woman under suspicion is believed to have been informed by some one from out-of-town, that she was about to be arrested.

With her disappearance, the East Providence police are in a quandary. The possibility that the woman, feeling that she will be apprehended in time, may surrender, is their only hope.

Asked why the arrest had not been made Friday night, after Mrs. Bourque had come to East Providence on a subpoena to tell the police where the operation had been performed, Chief Adams last night said that details were lacking and that the East Providence police had no witness.

Handicapped also by the absence of Deputy Chief Patterson, who was off duty and who, ordinarily would have been assigned to the case, Chief Adams took no action Friday night. Mrs. Bourque was not interviewed by Chief Adams, he said, but by others.

"Mrs. Bourque left before got there," explained the chief.

Asked if he had had any information earlier casting suspicion upon the house at 3 Willett avenue, Chief Adams said the place had been under surveillance, and that there had been ugly rumors about it, but nothing in his opinion to justify police action.

Why there was no arrest made on the charge of "being a suspicious person," on the description of the woman given by Mrs. Bourque, was explained by Chief Adams in his statement that "the police were without sufficient information and witnesses."

Mrs. Bourque went to East Providence as a result of work done on the case by Inspectors Louis F. Godfrey and James F. Rogers of the Providence police department, who were in Moosup investigating a rumor that the person responsible for the girl's death was a Providence woman. Trooper Urquhart of the Connecticut state police was of assistance to the Providence men in Moosup.

The whereabouts of Mrs. Bourque were in doubt last night, Chief Adams said she was in East Providence under surveillance, but not under restraint. She has admitted that she took her daughter to East Providence, that the operation might be performed.

DANIELSON

WOMAN WANTED IN CASE HAD CHANCE TO ESCAPE

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 26.—On the Connecticut side of the line there were no special developments Sunday in the investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death of Miss Emelda Bourque, 17, a Moosup girl who died a week ago Saturday in St. Joseph's hospital, Providence, as the result of septic poisoning, the result, it is claimed by Rhode Island officials, of an illegal surgical operation.

Premature publicity in Providence frustrated the plans of officials of that city to apprehend the woman who is wanted to answer questions about the alleged operation, and for the time being the case is up in the air. It is indicated that Rhode Island and Connecticut officers are in possession of practically complete facts about the case, as to the manner in which Miss Bourque submitted to an operation and much that led up to the fatal adventure. Mrs. Bourque, mother of the dead girl, is said to have talked freely with the officials about the case and Moosup buzzes with talk about this and that phase of the matter that may not be discussed in print now, but undoubtedly will get ample publicity in due course of time. The death of Miss Bourque has shocked Moosup particularly and the rest of eastern Windham county pot a little.

It was brought more or less into the light of day the of hinted at statement that illegal operations are becoming almost as common as tooth extractions, and the "wise" ones in every community know where to go for a gamble between possible death and certain disgrace, when the necessity for making the choice arises. If all the underground stories about these illegal surgical cases are true, business is good in at least one line, no matter how much complaint there may be about business in general.

Discussing the Bourque case in its Sunday issue, a Providence paper had the following:

More than 20 hours after the East Providence police had received a direct allegation that the illegal operation that caused the death of Emelda Bourque of Moosup, Conn., had been performed at 2 Willett avenue, East Providence, they acted, late yesterday afternoon, only to find that the woman they sought had fled.

PROFITEERING LANDLORDS SOON TO GET A BODY BLOW

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 26.—Final approval of plans now under consideration will give Danielson the greatest home building boom it has known since before the World war and incidentally throw a monkey wrench into the machinery the rent profiteers of this borough have built up to bleed tenants of the last penny the traffic will bear.

Outside interests, sensing that rents for the average family have been boosted to abnormally high figures in the past few years, have established by investigation that they can build a street or two of houses here opening up new territory, and give tenants better and more modern homes for less money than tenants are now paying here for homes that are lacking in many modern essentials.

There is no question about there being a rush for the proposed new homes. The plan is to build 25 to 30 new houses. Competent observers agree that they will be rented immediately, as the builders say they can make money on lower rentals than are being asked for houses now being occupied by tenants subjected to the greed of landlords.

In Danielson many landlords, by far not all of them, but a very considerable number, have put their rents on a weekly payment basis and every few months step the rent up a dollar a week. They have played the game so hard that they now have left the doors open for the building of newer and better homes that can be rented for less money and will show a reasonably good profit.

All this will be changed by the construction program herein mentioned. The effect likely will be that meagrely appointed rents now bringing $7 or $8 a week, will go begging for occupants, at $5 and $6. It is a fact today that some rents are available in choice residential sections of Danielson at less money per week than is asked for poorly appointed homes in out of the way sections of the borough.

The capital for the new construction is available, also the sites. The men back of the building plan say that building as many as 25 or 30 two or three-family houses in one contract, they can rent the homes and make money on even lower rents than many are now paying here for homes that will not even compare with the new ones, either in appointments or location.

It will be interesting to tenants to see how the profiteering landlords will react to this. For one thing, it is taken as a certainty that it will stop the upward boosting of rents—especially in the time when scores of textile operatives are having a difficult time to make their financial budgets balance.

J. C. Witter acted as starter at the races at Pascoag, where hundreds of racegoers were attracted Saturday.

It was indicated at the week end that Attorney Irving H. Miron, of Putnam, would make a determined effort to secure the release from Brooklyn jail of his client, Raymond Wetherbee, who is held without bail in connection with the death of a new-born infant, whose body was taken from a cove of the river near Wilsonville, in the town of Thompson.

Some time late today (Monday), possibly during the night, officers and members of the Service battery are expected to arrive here after nearly three weeks of absence. They are en route from Tobbyhanna, Pa. Captain here at the week end, was reported F. O. Armington, in a letter received till within the grip at a hospital at Tobbyhanna. His case was not considered as at all serious.

Members of the Danielson fire department and their guests, about 100 in all, held a clambake and outing Sunday at the Old Furnace, about two miles east of Danielson. Athletic events filled in the period prior to the splendid bake, with all the fixin's, prepared by King George Jacques of East Killingly. The firemen had a great day, and there were no alarms to interrupt their outing.

With the cooler weather that came Saturday night there was a letting down on the part of hundreds who had failed to sense how weakened and wearied they had become by the terrific heat of the past week. Nevertheless, Saturday night found hundreds of people at dance resorts in the surrounding territory, having a perfectly wonderful time out of their remaining stores of stamina.

At the home in Dayville Sunday at 11 a. m., funeral services for Mrs. Emily Gillette, centenarian who died Friday morning, were conducted by Rev. Charles A. Downs of Goodyear in the presence of numbers of relatives and friends. The body was taken for burial to Colchester, where Mrs. Gillette had been a resident with her grandson, Isaac, for years before coming to Dayville to make her home, about three years ago. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

Now you will hear the impatient motorist proclaim that horse-drawn and heavily laden vehicles that drag through Main street should be diverted to parallel streets, because such rigs obstruct traffic on a narrow, crowded roadway.

It is estimated that at least 75 per cent of the fuel requirements for the next cold weather season have been provided against in Danielson, and if that be true, there need be little worry here this year over coal strikes. And as to cordwood—well, woodchoppers are not in the habit of striking.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Potter of Brooklyn have gone to Maine for a holiday. They are to take a cottage on the coast.

Corn has made an astounding growth in territory hereabouts the past fortnight, especially during the hot weather of the past week. Many fields now have taken on a splendid appearance and farmers are encouraged.

GOING TO SUNDAY SCHOOL, GIRL CARRIED OFF IN CAR

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, July 25.—Eleanor Dormay, aged nine years, who for the past seven years has resided with Mr. and Mrs. Wayland F. Stillman, left her home on Coggswell street, Pawcatuck, to attend Sabbath school at the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church. Reaching a point on Main street, the child was seized and taken into a large touring car with Massachusetts registry, which proceeded through town until it disappeared. Witnesses reported seeing the car parked near the Buick service station and headed up Main street. William D. Wells, proprietor of a shoe store on Main street, witnessed a woman cross the street, take hold of the child as she was passing along alone and then a man assisted her in placing the girl in the back seat occupied by two women. The car started immediately, in spite of the protest of the little girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Stillman soon learned of the girl's disappearance and Mr. Stillman reported the matter to Chief Thomas E. Brown. Chief Brown directed Mr. Stillman to report to him the name of the supposed abductor, who was thought to reside in Attleboro, Mass., but no information or authority was given him by Mr. or Mrs. Stillman on which to proceed.

Mrs. Stillman reported that the girl attended Chautauqua the night before with a neighbor. Saturday morning she thought she heard a knock at her door about 10 or 12 o'clock but the automobile parties went away before she got to the door. She said the little girl was anxious to keep her attendence perfect at Sabbath school and that she had warned her against entering automobiles with parties unknown.

On the curve on the Noose-neck hill road to Providence, out of Westerly, near the junction of High and Pleasant streets, near the residence of Miss Hannah Crandall, High street, there was a Sunday morning automobile crash. About 8:30 o'clock a Dodge roadster, owned and operated by Antonio D. Derobbio, 15 Penn street, Providence, who was accompanied by the Misses Edna and Viola Dunn, came down High street and to avoid hitting two cars turned to the left and hit an electric light pole. A Hudson sedan following and of the same party, on a trip from Providence to New Haven, was driven by Lawrence A. Geary, of 202 Power street, the automobile being owned by Ernest L. Boudreau and Frank I. Geary of 202 Power street, Providence. This machine crashed into the rear of the Dodge roadster and smashed it in. A quantity of glass was broken and the left rear wheel of the Hudson car demolished.

In the Hudson and injured from flying glass were John Dunn, 65, towerman at the New Haven railroad of 365 Plainfield street, Providence, Mrs. Dunn and 11 year old Thomas Dunn. These three were taken to the Westerly hospital in the automobile of Dr. Michael H. Scanlon; they were given attention by him and Dr. J. Gordon Anderson of the hospital staff. Mr. Dunn was found to have sustained severe lacerations of the left hand, requiring six stitches to close; on the right side two ribs were fractured and there were lacerations on the left side of the head.

Mrs. Dunn had a cut two inches long in the center of her forhead, requiring three stitches, also four stiches were taken to close a gash under her right eye.

Thomas Dunn required 11 stitches for severe lacerations on the left thumb and he had a cut on his chin and the left side of his face.

Motorcycle Police Patrolman George L. Madison made the investigation. He was assisted in handling traffic by Constable Frank E. Knight.

An even dozen youngsters filed Sunday morning from police quarters into the office of Judge Oliver H. Williams of the third district court for a juvenile session. The youngsters were caddies who frequented the junction of Elm and Broad streets seeking transportation to the golf clubs at Watch Hill and Pleasant View. Complaints had been made to police authorities that their actions were annoying, not only to motorists, but also disturbed church services. Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown acting upon the complaint and accompanied by Police Officer George L. Madison visited the place in the police touring car, filled it with caddies and returned to the station house. Judge Williams made it plain to the caddies that the continuance of such actions would lead to their being brought before the court on the complaint of reveling. In their own behalf the boys informed the judge that, on an income of 40 cents, a forty-cent expenditure for transportation, plus more for eats, did not leave much by way of profit and loss to be carried over to surplus.

In a drizzling rain, Battery E, 243rd R. I. C. A. C. (H. D.), Capt. John F. Datson, stationed at the armory on Dixon street entrained Saturday morning at 10:30, for a two weeks' tour of duty at Fort H. G. Wright, Fishers Island. The men entered a coach at the middle of the train and did not receive much of a soaking when they quickstepped from the west bound train shelter to the steam cars. As the train pulled out of the station to the farewells of wives and sweethearts, the regimental band, located in one of the coaches, played a stirring march.

Francis Tenney, Mrs. Louise De Koven Phelps and Miss Ottilie Schreiber of the Misquamicut Golf club are entered in the invitation women's tournament golf play at the Shinnecossett golf club, Eastern Point, which begins shortly.

Two thunder storms visited Westerly Sunday, the first shortly after 3 o'clock, which passed over quickly. The same storm, it would seem, made a return appearance two hours later. A heavy downpour of rain accompanied the storms and the sky did not clear up until nearly 10 o. m.

RIVERVIEW BEATS SUB. BASE AND EVENS UP SERIES WITH VELVETMEN

Riverview ball club took both its week-end games winning 5 to 4 from the Sub Base at New London on Saturday in the first game of the series between the two clubs, and on Sunday at the J. B. Martin diamond evened the series with the Velvetmen by beating them 3 to 1 in a pitching battle between Toney West and Lanning.

The battle Sunday afternoon was witnessed by the largest crowd of the season and proved to be an interesting game as has been played at the Velvet mill diamond this year. The Velvetmen were reinforced by Dick Lanning, shine ball artist, who pitched brilliantly throughout the game, errors in the last two innings beating him. For eight innings it was a pitching duel between Lanning and West with honors favoring the Riverview hurler. J. B. Martin pushed the first tally of the game across in the third inning when Smith was passed and took second on Lanning's sacrifice. Krause singled and Smith scored the only run of the game. DeCelles was safe on a questionable decision at first while Krause went to second where he stayed as the next men were easy outs.

Riverview promptly evened the count in the fourth inning. Liberty hit for two bases and Mills put him on third with a sacrifice and when Jimmy Murphy let one of Lanning's shoots get away from him Liberty scored. From then on until the eighth inning the game remained a deadlock. In the first half of the eighth when the combination of Liberty and Mills put the Riverview boys in the lead. Liberty was passed and promptly stole second from where he scored when Mills doubled. Mills died at second as Lanning tightened and fast fielding retired the side.

In their half of the eighth the Velvetmen made a threatening attempt to score but through their own fault failed to tally. With two out a hit by J. Murphy, an error by Liberty and a pass to W. Gley filled the bases. With the bases full Francis Murphy came to bat and Wes put over two strikes, the second of which Murphy protested, and while he was arguing with Umpire Simcox West slipped over the third strike putting an end to the rally. This ended the game as far as the Velvetmen were concerned although they had a man on in the ninth but a fast double play, Clabby to Harrell, cut down any chance of scoring.

The last score of the game came in the ninth when with one away Lefty Dugas clouted one up against the mill for what would have been an easy homer had not the ground rules held him at second. Belair fanned but West drove him in with a ball that was too hard for Thirdbaseman Gley to handle. The scoring ended with this play. The score:

Saturday's Game

Piling up five runs in the first three innings Riverview had a lead which the Sub Base failed to overcome in the game Saturday afternoon at Morgan field, New London, although they made attempts in the sixth and eighth innings and came within one run of tying. The final score was 5 to 4.

Lefty Dugas started the game and for five innings held the sailors to four scattered hits but with the last of the ninth he weakened and passed three men, filling the bases. Meska singled to right and Ancell and Harrington scored. West was sent in and passed the first man to face him. Walker hit to Hamel but Harrell scored on the putout. The Base attempted the squeeze play but it went wrong and the runner was nailed at the plate. The next batter popped out, leaving the Base two runs behind.

In the eighth another run scored when Harrell singled and stole second and scored on Meska's single. The three next batters were easy outs. The Base had two men on in the ninth but good fielding by Belair held them to the bags.

Riverview runs came on hits behind errors and some spectacular base running. With two out in the first inning Mills was passed and Hamel was safe on an error by the Base second sacker. Mills scoring and Hamel pulling up at third. Clabby filed out ending the inning. Two more runs were added in the second inning when Farrell was safe on an infield error. Moore fanned and Belair was passed. Lefty Dugas came through with a neat double which scored both Farrel and Belair. The next two hitters were easy outs. The third inning saw Riverview push two counters across the plate. With one out Hamel and Clabby singled and Farrel sent them home with a single to deep center. This ended Riverview scoring for Meska tightened and held the visitors well for the remainder of the game. The score:

Couture was on the mound for the locals and pitched good ball besides being given good support. Zip Gero, Chapman Tech luminary pitched for the Shamrocks and was hit at opportune times, which coupled with errors at critical moments accounted for the locals win.

NATIONAL LEAGUE RACE IS BECOMING TIGHT

NEW YORK, July 25—(AP)—The National league dispute looked far from being settled at the close of the week with six clubs in the pack so closely bunched that but six games separated the pacemaking Pirates from the Giants and Robins who were deadlocked in fifth place.

In sharp contrast was the nine-game leeway held by the Yankees over the second place Indians in the American circuit marathon. However, a difference of only three contests rested between Cleveland and Washington which was sixth in line.

Six victories out of seven games enabled the world champions to assume the crest from the Reds by a margin of five percentage points. Living up to their reputation, the Braves poked through the trouble makers by beating the Reds twice. Incidentally, they were the only triumphs of the Boston outfit for the week.

The fortunes, good and otherwise, of the Mackmen appear to run in streaks. The Athletics had a run of seven consecutive defeats before the bugaboo was shaken which put them in third place, one game distant from Tris Speaker's tribe.

The St. Louis Browns fattened up a somewhat falling account by plucking a series from the Boston Red Sox which helped them direct the American parade jointly with the Tigers for the week with six games won and two lost.

Sisler's club gathered 108 hits for the high total and run honors were divided with Detroit, each team accounting for 56. There were 636 safeties in the American against 527 in the National and of 26 home runs in both leagues, 14 were furnished by the American batsmen. The Yankees knocked out seven of the circuit wallops.

High temperatures were not confined to thermometers. At Pittsburgh, Pitchers Aldridge and Morrison fell from grace for stretching the club rules. Aldridge was fined and Morrison suspended indefinitely. Eddie Moore was fined and then made to walk the plank into the Braves' fold.

Goose Goslin drew the wrath of Manager Harris at Washington for alleged indifference on the diamond and was benched.

FIST FIGHT FEATURE BOSTON'S VICTORY OVER REDS

Cincinnati, July 25—(AP)—Boston went on a batting rampage today and took the last game of the series from Cincinnati, 8 to 4. The game was enlivened by two flat fights. In the third inning, Pinelli and Arthur Devlin, who was coaching at third for the visitors got into an argument and exchanged blows. Players of both teams gathered about the scene and the fight became general. City police rushed on the field and restored order. Pinelli was put out of the game.

In the next inning, Welsh and Picinich collided as the former ran into the plate. Picinich made a wild swing at the runner but missed, and it looked for a moment as though hostilities would be renewed. Instead of following up the attack, however, Picinich apologized. He was ordered out of the game by the umpire.

Devlin was the chief sufferer. He received a split cheek and a badly bruised eye at the hands of Pinelli.

Substitute Outfielder Wilson, of the Braves was arrested and taken to jail. Police charged that he struck Inspector Kane during the first altercation. Score:

DEMPSEY EAGER TO HAVE THE CROWDS WATCH HIM AS HE TRAINS FOR BOUT

COLORADO, SPRINGS, Colo., July 25.—(AP)—Pride in his profession and his love for the "roar of the crowd" are the things urging Jack Dempsey, king of the heavyweights, back into the ring to risk his title and incidentally, his revamped nose.

The heavyweight champion has chatted naively, like a boy in his teens, with the Associated Press representative who has accompanied him on more than one occasion through the various phases of his preliminary training for the bout in which he will risk his crown next fall. From the rubbing table to the breakfast table, from the gymnasium and along the dusty roads Dempsey has spoken intimately and has "opened up," as perhaps he never has done since the day six years ago when he felled the giant Jess Willard in Toledo.

Keeping himself physically fit, is a fetish with the champion. "I believe in keeping fit at all times," he explained. "That is my business and that is my philosophy or life just noe. I never hold an opponent cheaply and because of I train rigorously for a bout. The result is I am in great shape." "I feel wonderful, I tell you," the rood natured giant says frequently, and bears out his assertion by the boy-like love for "rough house," in which he indulges almost constantly with his bosom companion, Trainer and friend, Jerry Livadis.

"I don't drink or smoke, you know," said the champion. "I do want to fight, th- gh-that's my job and that's why I'm keeping fit."—this came from the rubbing table as Dempsey surveyed with evident pride his muscular frame.

Again at the breakfast table, he confided "why I'm only 31—celebrated my birthday last month. I'm an outdoor man, no loafing for me. If I'm not training, I'm hunting or fishing. I'm ground or my profession and I want to get back in the ring."

Jack is a gregarious person and thoroughly loves a crowd. In fact he isn't happy when alone, even on his jaunts o.. hikes he hates to be unaccompanied. "The crowds keep me on edge," he said. "I work for them, feel that must do my best. Its because of this feeling that I'm asking the public to come out of the gym and watch me train, I like to have 'em—ask 'em to come, won't you?" he queried, grinning boyishly. And the crowds have come, too. Daily the bah room at the Broadmoor hotel proboscis will stand the gaff of a which has been converted into a gymnasium for the champion's use, is packed. Much audible comment is heard over his failure to charge admission to his workouts. "Why should I make 'em pay? He asked. "I like to have 'em here."

Dempsey's declaration that he is f.t., is borne out by his appearance, tanned and burned by the wind and sun, he scales at 205 pounds with no spare poundage visible about his unusually trim waist. The "Hollywood nose," is the only shadow of doubt across the champion's field of confidence, whether the revamped hard go in the ring is a matter of speculation both of Dempsey and Lividas. Theatrically, it is a success:: for Dempsey breathes during the mast atnuous exertion with less effort than ever before, but whether or not, it will stand up under a series of smashing blows, from the gloved mitt of a sturdy challenger, is another question.

"WHO REMODELED DEMPSEY'S NOSE?" IS THE QUESTION

NEW YORK, July 25.—(AP)—An affidavit filed in court may settle the question of who remodeled Jack Dempsey's nose.

It also may establish the fact that the champion's new nose can stand a 25 per cent heavier punch than his old one.

The affidavit is attacked to a summons and complaint filed yesterday by attorney for Dr. William E. Balsinge of Los Angeles, asking an injunction to restrain Dr. Louis P. Berne of this city from claiming credit for the operation.

Dr. Balsinger says: "On or about the 18th day of August 1924, I remodeled, straightened and "corrected" the nose of the said Jack Dempsey. A reconstructed, Dempsey's nose is fully 25 per cent stronger than his old one, and therefore can sustain a blow at least 25 per cent harder than any his former nose could staand. Jack Dempsey was so pleased with the result of his nasal operation that he recommended many friends of his mostly men engaged in the boxing profession, to be treated similarly by me."

In an accompanying affidavit Dempsey repeats the doctor's statement that his nose is 25 per cent stronger than it was and says he is delighted with the operation. He adds:

"I never, at any time was attended, treated or operated upon by the said Dr. Berne, the defendant herein."

TILDEN WINS HIS FIRST MATCH IN METRO TENNIS

NEW YORK, July 25—(AP)—William T. Tilden celebrated his first New York appearance of the outdoor tournament season today with an easy triumph over the veteran A. L. Bruneau in the opening round of the Metropolitan tennis championship.

Fresh from the conquest of the Texan, Lewis N. White, in the Longwood bowl final, the national titleholder swept through Bruneau with the loss of only three games, 6-2, 6-0.

His remarkable assortment of strokes was always under complete control and the gallery was treated to a brilliant display of the champion's versatility.

Following Tilden on the court, Vincent Richards, America's No. 3 ranking player, scored with equal decisiveness over Horace Orser, the former junior champion, 6-2, 6-1 in a second round contest.

Bringing under control the strokes which fell from a less reliable racquet yesterday in his victory over Sekio Tawara, the champion's youthful rival won almost as he pleased today.

His first service ball was a consistently reliable point winner, four times it brought him love game victories while he was steady at the baseline and spectacular at the net.

In contrast to the one-sided victories of Tilden and Richards, B. I. C. Norton, who shares with them a place in the first ten, was compelled to go three sets to subdue Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., in the second round, 6-8, 8-6, 6-1. Handicapped in his court covering by an injured leg the former South African star compelled to call upon all his strategy to save the match against the vigorous assault of the New Jersey junior.

No Twilight Games This Week

Due to the lack of suitable grounds, there will be no games played in the Twilight league this week. The carnival which is playing at the Duwell field all week makes the postponement necessary.

COONEY'S TRIPLE WINS GAME FOR CUBS

CHICAGO, July 25—(AP)—Jim Cooney's triple in the ninth inning gave Chicago a 5 to 4 victory over Philadelphia in the final game of the series which the visitors won three games to two. The Phillies took the lead in the seventh inning by driving Piercy off the mound, but Chicago tied the count in the eighth when Pinch Hitter Kelley crashed a double which scored Cooney. The game started in a drizzling rain which did not clear until the eighth inning. Score:

AUTOMOTIVE TRAIN STOPS

Four years ago the interstate commerce commission was convinced that the railroads should give added protection to the traveling public by equipping their lines with systems of automatic train control. In the meantime, after slight delay orders to that effect have been carried out by 49 carriers which have placed such equipment on at least one division and since then 19 of them have installed such a device on a second division, making a total of 1704 miles of road with such equipment and 1065 locomotives made subject to such control. Before the work in completed there will be 4450 miles with such safety devices and a total of 3858 locomotives.

As the result of the operation of automatic train controls the commission is satisfied that they have demonstrated their worth. It doesn't insist upon one particular system, but demands the use of an efficient device. That use of such control will result in improvements is to be expected, and that is one of the reasons advanced for delay, since the roads have desired to avoid the necessity of going to large expense to install a system only to be obliged to rip it out and purchase another within a short time.

From time to time the railroads are stating the importance of having some auxiliary system of control. Engineers have been stricken by death in their cabs and others have disregarded signals, until the protection or a device which will stop a train whether or the engineer acts or not has been repeatedly emphasized. When such occurrences are going to be repeated no one knows, and the welfare of the community being transported lies in providing some automatic device that will meet the situation. It is gratifying to note that the results obtained are meeting the approval of the commission, that the roads are responding so well and that a serious situation promises to be well taken care of in a comparatively short time. Reliance upon the human agent was complete in the past. It is fortunate that so much can be placed in the auxiliary control for the future.

MORE HIGHWAY DANGERS

Ever since the development of bus transportation there has been recognition of the need of giving protection to the public transported both as to safety and service. This has been done through regulation and through the insistence that bus line charters be given to responsible companies. It is for such a reason that existing transportation companies have been favored in the establishment of bus lines when several petitions for the same route have been submitted.

It was not long ago that a bus line operating out of Providence was found to have such defective equipment that the patrons were at the mercy of unlighted cars and bad brakes. At Sparkill, N. Y., where ten were killed and 40 injured when a bus carrying an outing party crashed into a brick building it was shown that the latest method of transportation is not always the safest unless there is full observance of the requirements attending the same.

This whole question of bus transportation is one that is found to get more and more attention. As the more and more attention. As the service develops busses get larger and larger. There are now great wide vehicles seating from 40 to 50 persons which require a large amount of the highway and, as was shown in the case of the Sparkill bus, they travel as fast as 40 miles an hour. In making schedules they cut in and out of traffic and make many a driver wonder how he is going to pass without being ditched. The busses and the big vans create frequent and serious problems in the highways.

With the trolleys and the railroads there is only one place for them to run. If they go faster than regular highway traffic they are not likely to interfere with other traffic and they crowd no one out of his part of the highway. Likewise with the old forms of transportation there is frequent inspection of the equipment and engineers are obliged to serve an apprenticeship. The Sparkill case shows not only what may happen to those within the fast and unsafely driven bus which would have been the plight of the driver of a car going in the opposite direction just at that point.

THE LAUSANNE TREATY

One of the things left undone by the last congress was the ratification of the treaty of Lausanne. This is the treaty between this country and Turkey which was negotiated some time ago. It was never regarded as a thoroughly satisfactory one but the best that could be obtained under the prevailing condition. It would mean the resumption of trade and diplomatic relations and the need of such a step has been repeatedly pointed out.

Particular attention is directed to this matter now by the letter which has been written by Bishop Brent of the Episcopal church to Secretary of War Davis in which he asks to have his name withdrawn from further opposition to the treaty and to henceforth be listed as an advocate of ratification when the treaty comes before the senate in December.

This is a right about face. Bishop Brent with a long list of Episcopal clergy urged that the treaty be not ratified. Bishop Brent indicates that this was chiefly because of the sentiment in favor of the Armenians, but such enlightenment as he has since obtained has caused him to alter his views as to the situation and the treaty.

A significant feature in connection with this treaty situation is that the heads of churches which maintain missionary and educational institutions in Turkey have urged ratification. They do not pretend that the treaty is ideal but that it is better than nothing and that it is desirable to get such advantages as it offers in the hopes that with time there can be an improvement. These church and educational workers have emphasized the desirability of making a start with the new Turkish government instead of doing nothing. It is not a case of condoning all that Turkey has been responsible for in the past, but of meeting the present day situation and ending the uncertain situation which is bound to prevail as long as there is no treaty. Bishop Brent's change is of no small significance even as it is that his reversal of views comes about as the result of his consultations about and study of conditions in Turkey.

THE TEXAS CONTEST

For a long time it has been apparent that the people of Texas were dissatisfied with their governor. Mrs. Ferguson was put in the chair of the chief executive as the result of a spectacular campaign but no sooner had she got there than certain of those claims that were set forth against her election began to materialize. Repeatedly it has been shown that her husband a former governor who was disfranchised, is the power behind the throne, that he is virtually the governor again though his wife wears the title. Conditions have developed which have disgusted even the Texans and they realized that the way to end it was to make a change.

The final figures in the primary that was held Saturday are not as yet available but it is evident that Mrs. Ferguson is second by a large plurality, with Attorney General Dan Moody far in the lead. That seems to indicate quite strongly the temper and desire of the voters of Texas. If their judgment of the Ferguson regime has been registered by the primary vote it is that of dissatisfaction and a desire for a change.

By the primary rules of Texas the nominee must get a majority of the votes cast. Moody appears to have come close to it but to have fallen short. This will mean the submission of the Moody and Ferguson names to the voters once more and judging by the feeling and the expression already given there is no question as to the outcome. Viewed from a distance the result in the big lead for Moody was only what was to be expected if the reaction of past events upon the electorate could be rightly anticipated.

BOOTLEGGING ON SHIPS

How extensively bootlegging is being carried on may be indicated by the charges that liquor has been sold on the Leviathan of the United States line. Under orders long since issued the sale of liquor on American ships has been stopped. The contention is not that bars are maintained or that the officials of the ship are cognizant of the dispensing of liquor on the big liner but that some on the vessel have recognized the opportunity of serving the wants of passengers and have been catering thereto on the side. It is such alleged activity that the shipping board chairman is having investigated.

But in view of the great amount of bootlegging that is going on on land there can be no great surprise that the same sort of thing is being practiced abroad shipping board vessels which operate between this and other countries where the getting of liquor is no trouble whatever.

It is one of the phases of enforcement work which is apparently being left to the authorities on the respective vessels. What will be done about it will depend largely upon what the investigation discloses. Those who may be making more money through such transactions than from their regular employment are not going to desist until they are made to. Those who are found out will be obliged to pay the penalty of losing their job if nothing else but perhaps they have been storing up enough shoe they have been at their bootlegging operations to put them in a position to lead a life of ease and influence for the rest of their days whether they do any more work or not. Stories of the profits in bootlegging make it possible for them even become prospective owners of a liner or two

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Four tablespoons of coffee equal one ounce.

Salt and lemon juice will clean tarnished copper.

Oil of eucalyptus will help clear the head if sniffed like one does menthol.

Wash all fresh vegetables no matter how clean they look.

Raw potato rubbed on knives and plates that smell of onions will remove the offensive odor.

Don't grease the pan for sponge cake. Line it with greased paper and then pour in the batter.

A pudding must be mixed softer for baking than for steaming.

Never leave fish unless salted soaking in water. Too long soaking removes the flavor and makes the fish flabby.

Clean tiled floors with warm water and soap, then dry with a soft cloth and finish with a little Eneseed oil on an old silk handkerchief.

If you want to paper a wall that has been whitewashed, brush over every part with equal quantities of vinegar and water, or the paper will not stick.

Mattresses in constant use should be brushed and beaten or run over with the vacuum cleaner once a month.

When the rag rug curls up on the corners and ends, sew hat wire firmly around the edges and it will stay firmly on the floor.

Cheesecloth should be used more commonly for household purposes than it is. The material has the special merit of being firm yet so loosely woven that grease comes out rapidly in washing.

To prevent accidents with bottles containing poison, buy a dozen tiny bells and every time a bottle of poison is brought into the house tie a bell to its neck. Even in the dark the bell will tinkle its warning.

TO WASH BERRIES

Not every one knows how to wash strawberries. Hull a few berries at a time, drop them in a bowl of clean, cold water, and take them out immediately. Put them to drain dry in a colander. The sand sinks to the bottom of the bowl and the juice does not have a chance to run. Continue hulling and washing a few berries at a time. If you turn a whole quart of berries into a bowl at once, some will be watery and tasteless before all are taken out. If you put them in a colander and run water on them, the sand from those above gets on those beneath.

SUMMER CEREALS

In summertime cooked cereals are much more interesting combined with fresh fruit or berries than without. Stir in half a cup of any kind of berries to every cup of cooked cereal just a few minutes before serving.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Wash the skin where the bite is with a solution of soda and water, a teaspoon full of soda to a cup of water.

Do not add the torture of tight shoes to the normal discomfort of hot weather traveling. Wear shoes that are roomy and well ventilated.

When you camp for the night or stop at a hotel you will find your sleep more restful if you will take a few stretching and relaxing exercises before going to bed. Include high kicking and trunk bending exercises to relieve your cramped muscles.

Children's feet should be carefully fitted with the right kind of shoes. Stockings that are too short in the feet are almost as unhygienic as pinching shoes. Fresh hosiery should be put on each day. Toes should be as carefully manicured as fingers.

Bow legs may be corrected before 6 years of age. After that time the bones are too hard to be altered except by surgery. Faulty diet is the principal cause of bow legs. Incorrect posture in early childhood and walking too soon.

MAKES DUSTLESS DUST CLOTHS

With our modern ideas of sanitation we realize the importance of gathering up the dust instead of just brushing it off or one surface into the air where it blows about only to settle on another surface very soon.

For this reason, dust cloths have superseded the old-fashioned feather dusters, and now dustless dusters are taking the place of ordinary dust cloths. These dustless dusters have the advantage of holding the tiny particles to the cloth until it can be taken out of doors and shaken in the sun and air.

To make a dustless duster, immerse a large square of cheesecloth in a strong hot suds. Let it remain in the suds for about an hour, then wring out and dry.

Use the regular way to dust and polish the furniture. As soon as the cloth is badly soiled, it can be washed and re-treated.

PRESERVES SASH CORD

The usefulness of a window-sash cord can be lengthened by a periodical application of tallow or lard. Throw up the window and grease the cord with a slightly heated tallow candle. Then shut the window and apply the same process to the rest of the cord. If tallow candles are not to be had, pure lard should be applied sparingly. On no account use fat with salt. Salt rots the cord quicker than the dampness.

AMUSING CHILDREN

Always have something in reserve for that inevitable day when the children have exhausted every resource of their toys. Black paper and small scissors for cutting silhouettes, a magnifying glass, modelling clay, or colored cardboard for making houses and furniture have infinite possibilities. Encourage the child to use his imagination rather than to depend on mechanical toys and he will amuse himself more and annoy you less with "What shall I do?"

DICTATES OF FASHION

Large hats of crin of Milan in pastel colors are shown with frocks of flowered chiffon.

To wear with summer frocks are shoes of the same delicate colors. They come in linen, canvas and suede.

Small hats of navy blue crocheted straw and large hats of navy blue taffeta emphasize the importance of this particular shade.

For the small girl of three nothing could be more delightfully quaint than a smocked frock or flowered dimity with a little sunbonnet to match.

Shoes of grey or blonde kid are trimmed with snakeskin and the same shade and the motif of decoration is repeated on the bag.

With the sport costume, be it of jersey or silk, the fancy square neckerchief tied carelessly on one shoulder is almost indispensable.

The new military cape that fastens cavalier fashion on the shoulder, is to be seen in chiffon and brocade as well as in more serious fabrics.

A black taffeta frock that is unusually lovely is trimmed with squares of white organdie and a pink rose at the fastening of high collar.

Larger hats continue to dominate the millinery situation. As rivals of the black Milan, there are stunning hair models in the new shade of Burgundy red.

Conventionalised gardenias are made of glazed linen in shades of navy, dark green, brown and purple. They have a certain iridescent effect that is extremely smart.

Covert cloth in shades of green, blue, rose and violet on the order of pastel tones are charming for the summer tailleur and for the coat to complete the ensemble fashioned of gay printed silks.

A most interesting version of the two-piece jumper dress is made of lace in a delicate shade of ecru. Lace frocks of this type, in different colors, are exceedingly smart for immediate wear.

PINK PEARLS FOR SUMMER

The vogue for shades of delicate pink is reflected in lustrous pearls in the most elusive tints of pink and rose color. One especially lovely necklace has a festoon in front caught together with three large white sapphires. Chokers of pink pearls are equally smart. They are matched by stud earrings.

LINEN SHOES GAIN VOGUE

The linen shoes are gaining considerable attention at the moment since they may so readily be colored to match the bright summer frocks. Even the rumor that the spike heel was passing has been spiked and the newer models are higher and spikier than ever. In the leather shoes, the pipings of contrasting shade to the shoe itself frequently match the hat and handbag of the wearer.

FOR THE SMALL BOY

Comfortable clothes for the small boy consist of wide skirts of blue flannel and a turtle neck jumper or dark wool or of blue wool striped with white. Similar suits show tweed shirts and knitted jumpers which repeat the pattern of the material.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Starch should be mixed with soapy water. This will prevent the iron from sticking and will give the linen a gloss.

A tablespoonful of methylated spirit to a gallon of rinsing water will make table linen just stiff enough, and glossy white, too.

A solution of one tablespoon of borax to each quart of water will help remove the shine from those pants. Rub shiny parts with this solution and press, while still damp, on the wrong side or the suit.

The laundress whose clothes are clear and fresh in color is the one who rinses until the water is perfectly clear. Good rinsing is every bit as important as good washing.

SECRET OF WASHING WALLS SUCCESSFULLY

The secret of success in washing walls is to be found in the way the soap and water is applied. To remove all the dirt without streaking the walls use as little water as possible. Soft water is to be preferred. And always it should be lukewarm and renewed often enough to be kept comparatively clean.

Wring part of the moisture out of a soft cloth or a sponge which has been dipped in the clear water. Rub the cloth lightly with a mild soap for the most delicate finishes, and a stronger soap for very dirty kitchen walls, where greases and dust are firmly embedded in the surface. Apply the soap to the wall, rubbing lightly with a circular motion and in a space about as large as the arm can conveniently reach. Rinse each portion immediately with the cloth wrung out of clear warm water. Work quickly and with the windows open if possible, so that the surface will dry immediately after rinsing without an extra rubbing with a dry cloth.

WASHABLE DRAPES

Slip covers, drapes on nursery furniture, covering on a bassinet, shelf curtains or any drape which should be held firmly and at the same time be easily removed for washing, may be fastened by snaps sewed on tape. These are available in many sizes and may be stitched on by machine, or as for shelf curtains, tacked to the shelf and stitched to the drape. If they are accurately measured and sewed firmly it will be found much less trouble to keep delicately-colored slip covers and nursery furniture fresh.

BY WAY OF VARIETY

Even in cooler weather a chance in the dinner menu may be made by duplicating one of our favorite summer cold suppers. But the meal must be started with a piping hot soup to take away the chilly effect.

HOME CANNING

Hold all canned products at room temperature for a week at least, where they can be examined once a day to be sure that they are keeping. If they show signs of leakage, open and use at once or process again for canning.

RECIPES

Sour Cream Cake: One cup sugar, 1 tablespoon lard, 2 eggs, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1 cup sour cream or buttermilk, 2 1-2 cups flour, cream lard and sugar, add eggs. Dissolve soda in sour cream, then add to cake, add vanilla and flour. Beat well and bake in a loaf in a moderate oven. Caramel or chocolate icing goes well with this cake.

Fran Fudge Squares: 4 squares chocolate, 1-2 cup butter, 3 eggs, 1 cup sugar, 1-2 cup flour, 1-2 cup bran, 1-2 cup nut meats, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Melt the chocolate over hot water and add the butter. Beat the eggs until light, add the sugar, and beat well together; then add the melted butter and chocolate and stir in the flour, bran, nuts and vanilla. Pour into a greased pan, making a layer about one-third inch thick. Bake in a moderate oven (380 degrees F.) for about 20 minutes.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Things That Need Attention

Mr. Editor: I wonder if other citizens have noticed the reckless way motorcycles proceed through our city and town, wild and with cut-outs wide open, the jingle-brained riders thereof seemingly enjoying the damnable racket, that disturbs normal people.

Our police will tag autos that park on side streets over night, but the above mentioned are allowed to proceed at peace on their cycles, with the almost approbation of officers of the law.

Something drastic should be done immediately, that is sure.

Another thing that should be brought to the mind of the proper authorities is the deplorable, and shameful condition of Main street, from the McGrory building, to Preston bridge.

The condition of this main thoroughfare is disgraceful, and is typical of the bad advertising Norwich seems to persist in using. It is in much worse shape than an ordinary country road.

If this community is to even prosper and grow, attention to the things named by the writer of this letter, should undoubtedly receive immediate attention.

Respectfully,
OBSERVER.

Norwich, July 24, 1926.

Wants Whole Country Prosperous

Mr. Editor: I wish to thank Marinda C. Robinson, for her kindly suggestion, putting me in the way of valuable information concerning super prosperity. With all kindly intents I wish to inform her that I have plenty of such material at hand, and do not have to dig down into high brow publications for it. My conclusions have been drawn mainly from newspapers and such choice periodicals as come to hand, as well as personal contactw ith the great army of toilers, of which I have been a member for more than 60 years past. I admit that a large number of corporations have made big earnings in the year past. Standard Oil heading the list with $111,000,000, so on down to $90,000,000 the last of five. Ninety-four others earned over $10,000,000 each. This in a measure may account for the increased volume of the income tax. Even this does not indicate wide spread prosperity. In the past century, not so long ago, the working man bought flour by the barrel, coal by the ton; potatoes by the bushel; in these super prosperous days, he buys flour and coal by the bag; potatoes by the pound, Johnny Cake meal in two to five pound cartons, paying an advance of 30 to 40 per cent. We have as I read at the present day a large army of unemployed, recruited from time to time by college flunkies, but the last should not be classed with the former. they are entirely different, they belong to the parasite class. As a native of New England I am more interested in the state of affairs in that section, which is largely concerned in textile industries. Some of these were not able in 1925 to declare anything like normal dividends, hence the curtailing of hours, and in some instances closing down indefinitely. True prosperity should include all. The employes of the General Motors and Ford corporations may be fairly prosperous; what about the mortgaged farms and homes in many sections; the proceeds used in full or part payment for a flivver? I still insist that the country as a whole is far from prosperous, there is a spirit of unrest all over the civilized world and beyond. Witness the labor strikes and other incidents; what about those banks with closed doors in Georgia. The dollar in the bank, the purchasing value representing about 57 cents does not loom up so big in the aggregate. As to statistics, the rose colored one of today may be as stale as a ghost tomorrow. M. C. R. draws comparisons between the teacher, college professor and other professionals and the artisans; there is a marked difference. The college professor has a fixed salary, comfortable apartments to work in, short hours, no deductions for vacations or other time off. The brick layer works out of doors exposed to the elements, extremes of heat and cold; of course in freezing weather mortar must not be allowed to freeze, consequently no work—no pay, subject to weather conditions at all times; hours eight at least. What the country needs is more skilled artisans, more real farmers and fewer high brow educators. The elephant breeds once in ten years, the codfish lays 10,000,000 eggs, there are enough elephants, but too few codfish. Prohibition (I am not a wet) is one of the most colossal farces ever foisted on intelligent people. Don't take any word, take those of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, ex-Vice Pres. Thos. Marshall, and others high in authority. The slogan down with the wets, is of no avail. The wets have a large majority as future events will demonstrate.

HOW WOULD YOU GO

From Norwich to Winsted?

Winsted is in Litchfield county about 30 miles north west of Hartford.

For one driving from Norwich the trip to Hartford could be made by any of the following three routes: Norwich to Colchhester and to Hartford over the Hartford-New London road; by way of Willimantic and Andover to Hartford; or by way of Willimantic and South Coventry, to Bolton Notch and thence to Hartford over the Hartford-Willimantic road. The first mentioned trip would be the shortest, while the last mentioned, although somewhat longer than the second route to Hartford, avoids the heavy traffic from a point about three miles beyond Willimantic until Bolton Notch is reached, incidently, avoiding the dangerous underpass at Andover.

From Hartford the most direct route to Winsted would be Route No. 17, via Avon and Canton, through New Hartford to Winsted.

Via the Colchester-Hartford to Winsted route the mileage would approximate 67 miles. The distance over the Willimantic-Andover to Hartford and Winsted route would be nearly 53 miles, while via the route through South Coventry the distance would approximate 50 miles.

Continuing on through Winsted an additional 16 miles would bring one to Canaan, making a run of nearly 70 miles from Norwich.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Charles S. Whitman, who has been honored with election to the presidency of the American Bar association, is a former governor of New York, in which office he served two terms. Prior to going to Albany he had won a national reputation as a district attorney in New York city, where he led a campaign against law-defying elements of the city. Mr. Whitman first attracted attention, after his graduation from Amherst college in 1890 and from the New York university law school in 1894, by his record in the office of the Corporation Counsel of New York city. He had such a sense of getting justice done to the needy and unfortunate that influence was used to obtain for him a place on the board of magistrates. As governor in the early period of the World war, Mr. Whitman was a stanch champion of preparedness legislation, and of the use of the state school system for military training.

Stories That Recall Others

Not The Same Mistake Twice

Grace had reached the age when the use of new words greatly appealed to her—sometimes with amusing results. In a conversation an older sister had contradicted something which the younger girl had just said, whereupon Grace had exclaimed: "Why, Helen, don't you know better than to contradict me?"

Judging from the laughter which followed her speech she saw that something was wrong and sought to correct her error. With a toss of her head she remarked:

"I didn't mean contradict anyway; I meant interdict."

This time her audience yelled.

Taking Her Medicine in Advance

Ruth, age five, had coaxed repeatedly in the afternoon to be permitted to go two doors down the street to visit with a playmate, but permission had been refused. Sitting on the back door step her course of action had been decided upon, and she called to her mother and said:

"Mother, I'm going now."

Mother replied: "Ruth, if you go I shall have to whip you."

Ruth was silent for a while, but moved by a sudden inspiration came into the house, approached her mother gravely, and said:

"Well, mother, if you're going to whip me, whip me now, and then I'll go."

RADIATOR COMPANY STOREHOUSE BADLY DAMAGED BY FLAMES

A three story brick storehouse owned by the Richmond Radiator company and located opposite the company's plant on South Thames street was badly gutted by fire late Saturday afternoon. The fire was discovered at 5:50 o'clock and box 13, Thames and High street was pulled. Stored on the top floor was a carload of baled excelsior used by the radiator company in packing casting for shipment. The fire started in the excelsior and in the space of a few moments the top floor of the building was a roaring furnace.

When the fire department arrived flames were shooting from the rear of the building clear across the sidewalk on West Thames street and almost across the trolley tracks. The flames were also shooting from the top story windows on the front of the building which faces South Thames street. Huge volumes of dense smoke were rolling from the building, filling the street for a distance of hundreds of feet.

Water lines were quickly laid by Engine company No. 6, Engine company No. 5 and Squad A. Four lines were used, three on the West Thames street side. So intense was the heat and so dense was the smoke that it was extremely difficult for the firemen to get into the building.

They broke open the shute leading into the building on the West Thames street side and directed a stream through the shute into the blazing excelsior. Several holes were chopped in the roof and streams directed down the holes. Captain Archibald Cochrane of Engine company No. 6 had his hair and one eyebrow singed by the flames shooting from the building.

Due to the fact that the shute leading from the top floor to the second floor was closed, the flames were kept confined to the top floor and did not reach a large quantity of loose excelsior on the second floor. The fire which gave the department a hard hour's fight, was one of the meanest the department has had to contend with in months. The loss to the building and contents is estimated at between $1 000 and $1,500. A boy, who was playing with matches on the roof of the building which is almost on a level with the sidewalk on West Thames street, is blamed for the fire. It is thought that he dropped a match down one of the ventilators. Just before the fire was discovered the boy was seen running from the building.

SCHOOL BOARD SELECTS SITE FOR NEW SCHOOL

The site for the new schoolhouse to be erected at Norwich Town has been selected by the members of the town school board after over two months deliberation, during which time numerous locations were looked over.

The site selected, and for which the board has made a deposit to guarantee purchase, is the property of Mrs. Mary W. Geer, Richard J. and Rose M. Carter and Mrs. Millie Edmond, and is located on the main road at Norwich Town about a thousand feet beyond the site of the Sacred Heart church.

Announcement of the purchase at 76-78 West Town street, for the site of the $225,000 school building, was made Saturday by Walter F. Lester, chairman of the school board, who also stated that the deeds for the purchase are expected to be passed within a few days.

The main obstacle the board ran up against in its search for a desirable site for the new school was the price of land in Norwich Town. Fancy figures were asked in numerous cases, while the average demand was too high, for the board to consider. Some of the sites looked over by the committee were properties of James P. McNally, Patrick T. Connell, George L. Randall, Sherwood G. Avery, Joseph H. Hunter, Rutherford H. Snow, William M. Burdick and Pauline J. Hafner. Several other lots were offered for sale but were not considered.

During the past five years the school board has erected two new school buildings in the city, purchase price of property and cost of construction and furnishing having been kept within the appropriation of the citizens. The board intends to keep up this policy in the purchase of the site and building and fitting of the school at Norwich Town.

Mr. Lester states that the new school will be of Colonial design. The building is to contain 16 rooms, eight for the grammar school grades, a large auditorium for the community welfare, and rooms for special departments and class rooms. Some of the departments to be maintained at the school will be domestic science, manual training, etc.

Further announcement was that the West Town street school would be abandoned following completion of the new school, but for a time elementary grades will be continued at Taftville and Town street schools.

The school board comprises, Walter F. Lester, chairman; James C. Macpherson, Robert McNeely, Thomas J. Kelly, Edward J. Brophy and Edward G. McKay.

LARGE AUDIENCE AT Y. M. C. A. SUNDAY SERVICE

The parlors of the local Y. M. C. A. were well filled Sunday afternoon at the closing service of the season. H. C. Zabriskie and his sister, Miss Marcia Zabriskie, contributed much to the service by furnishing enjoyable music. Mr. Zabriskie rendered baritone solos and his sister officiated at the piano. The opening part of the service consisted of the singing of hymns, scripture reading followed by prayer by J. E. Seimes. A short reel of moving pictures on "arts and crafts in India," proved a very informing educational film. The special film of the service was the beautiful Bible story of "Isaac and Rebecca." The photograph was of the finest, and the details of the story were exceedingly true to the Bible narrative; it proved most impressive to all present.

Between the reels General Secretary Edwin Hill gave a brief talk and he spoke in part as follows: "Evidently in the far gone days the people paid more attention to and took more genuine interest in the selection of a life partner than is too many cases in our time. We may see that the parents then selected wives for their sons, but it was evidently not the worst custom. In some cases today it would seem that selecting a life partner means little more than going fishing or hunting. The divorce courts tell an awful story of terribly broken homes and hearts.

No country will ever be what it should be, and if America is to measure up to our hopes and desires the home life must be greatly improved in many cases. I have known some married people who have lived together till middle life and beyond who have been just as truly sweethearts as when they courted one another, and this is as it should be. I believe that next to the gift of Jesus Christ to a man for his salvation, the second best gift of God to man is a sweet, modest, pure woman for his wife. Let us pray that more and more our homes may be what they ought to be, and let us live together in the spirit of that passage, "let each esteem other rather than themselves."

Lewis R. Church operated the moving picture machine.

CUSTOMERS OF SPECTORS WANTED MONEY BACK
(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 23—Four men were arrested Sunday night for breach of the peace following a brawl at the Spector junkyards, Quarry street, bringing the total number of cases scheduled for Monday morning as the result of week end arrests to eight. Samuel and his son, Maurice Spector, owners of the junkyard, complained to the police that two prospective customers for second-hand auto parts, Frank Marsell and Daniel Mauckese had been guilty of breach of the peace. When arrested, these two men filed a counter-complaint against the Spectors who were held on a similar charge. The men were arrested by Motorcycle Officer Marrotte. The trouble started from a disagreement over the value and usefulness of a junk auto part, for which the two customers had already paid and on which they wanted their money refunded. When the money was refused, trouble started.

NORWICH GUARDSMEN ARRIVE HOME FROM TOBYHANNA

Battery B and First Batallon Headquarters and Combat Train, 192nd Field Artillery, C. N. G., of this city, arrived home Saturday night at 9:05 o'clock after one of the best encampments the local outfits have attended at Camp Tobyhanna, Pa. Everything at the camp was held under perfect conditions and the men thoroughly enjoyed their stay at camp. The days were reported as very hot while the nights cool and this accounted for the fact that some of the boys brought home Pennsylvania colds with them.

There were no accidents to the local companies, either on the trip to the camp or on the return, but several holdups on the return trip made it a tedious affair. The first holdup came at the Manhattan transfer station when the train was delayed for nearly two hours and the final holdup came at the Norwich station when the boys were held for two hours before their baggage could be removed from the train and taken to the armory where the men could report off duty.

Everything at the camp was under the direction of regular army men, conditions being the same as for men in the service, the three meals a day costing 59 cents. Discipline was strict.

In competition drills the local companies fared well and the officers and men brought credit to their city. Battery B took second in the competitive drill on guns. Battery A of New London took first, receiving a handsome plaque for their work at a formal regimental parade Friday afternoon. The competitive signal drill was won by Second Battalion and Combat Train of Norwalk, the Norwich men also showing up well in this drill.

In camp with the Norwich companies were companies from other towns in the state and the 111th Light artillery of Newport News, Norfolk, Richmond, Va., and the 109th Field Artillery of Pennsylvania.

On Thursday night at 12:15 o'clock the 192nd Field Artillery got a taste of night manoeuvers, going into position No. 25, the regiment firing from 3 a. m. until 4:20 p. m. on the same day and on their return were ordered to get the tractors and guns into condition for the remaining days.

A coincidence happened on Thursday when a sharp electrical storm flooded the camp area, the same thing having happened in 1925 when the Pennsylvania companies came in to take over the Norwich area.

The camp life was fine according to the local boys and they finished their encampment with a record of 98 per cent perfect, much credit being due to Captain William R. Denison of Battery B and Capt. H. F. Burdick of the Combat Train.

Corporal Kelley of Battery B had a harrowing time in making the camp and experienced the thrills of warfare at Dover according to reports. He was passing through Dover by motorcycle when lightning struck the arsenel there and started the explosion of T. N. T. and heavy shells that wrecked the countryside and took a heavy toll of lives. A large shell exploded in the road about 200 feet ahead of him, hurling him to the ground and throwing his motorcycle on top of him. He was held in that position for nearly an hour before released and his experience was one altogether uncomfortable.

On the return trip the local boys passed through Dover and saw the havoc caused in that village by the explosions. Houses were torn down, shell holes everywhere about, and everything had the appearance of a shell torn area in the front in France.

Some of the men remained at the camp over the week end and will arrive in Norwich today (Monday). It is expected that all local men will report in by Tuesday evening, thus ending the annual encampment of 1926.

WEDDING.
Button—Doyon

At Glasgo, Miss Diana Doyon and Lewis R. Button were married Monday morning at St. Ann's church, by Rev. Ludovic Paradis. Mrs. George Brown, mother of the bride, was matron of honor, and Mr. Brown was best man. The bride wore pink georgette over satin with a picture hat to match and carried tea roses. The matron of honor's gown was pearl grey georgette.

After the ceremony, which was attended by relatives, the bridal party left by automobile on a trip to Vermont.

A short stop was made for the wedding breakfast, which was served at the Wauregan hotel, Norwich, and the party journeyed as far as Springfield, Mass., where they were overnight guests of the bride's uncle, resuming their trip Tuesday. Mr. Brown, who is employed in Vermont, was accompanied by Mrs. Brown, who will remain for six weeks' stay in the Green mountains.

The bride received many beautiful gifts, including cut glass, furniture, china, table and floor lamps, silver, rugs and money. The bride, a former resident of Hartford, was employed by the Fuller Brush Co., of that city. The groom is an employe of the Ninigret company in Jewett City.

After August 1st, Mr. and Mrs. Button will be at home to friends, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Brown, at Glasgo.

Muckerstein—Krieglowa.

Gregory Muckerstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Muckerstein and Miss Mary Krieglowa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Krieglowa of No. 89 Mt. Pleasant street, were united in marriage late Saturday afternoon by Justice of the Peace John H. Barnes. The couple were attended by John Muckerstein, as best man and Mrs. Anna Doerr, sister of the bride, as matron of honor.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white satin trimmed with lace and carried shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor wore peach georgette and her bouquet was of yellow roses. Following the ceremony a dinner was served at the home of the parents of the bride, relatives and friends attending. The bride received many beautiful gifts of glassware, silver, money, etc.

Following their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Muckerstein are to reside in Franklin. The groom is employed by the state highway department as a driver.

SLOW AUTOS MUST GIVE WAY TO FASTER TRAFFIC

Robert T. Hurley, superintendent of the state police department, reports that the traffic problem created by slow driving motorists is again becoming serious. The superintendent said: "The police problem of creating safe driving conditions is today inseparably linked with the problem of expediting the movement of traffic. Unless motorists who choose trunk highways on Sundays and holidays for theirs move at a reasonable rate of speed, it will be necessary for state policemen to ask them to draw to the side of the road until the line of cars in their rear has had an opportunity to pass by."

Two years ago Superintendent Hurley wrote an open letter to the motoring public and caused circulars to be distributed by state policemen pointing out the inconvenience and danger caused to all other motorists by the operator who drove his car at an unusually slow rate of speed. Connecticut was one of the first states to draw the attention of motorists to the traffic hazards created by the operation of cars on heavily traveled state highways at too slow a speed. Many enthusiastic letters were reiced by the state police department in support of the department's action. "It is simply a question at this time," said Superintendent Hurley, "of again reminding the operators of cars that extremes of speed are to be avoided, that driving too slowly when traffic is heavy is almost as dangerous as driving too rapidly."

The menu consisted of baked beans, potato salad, cabbage salad, pickles, chili sauce, brown bread, rolls, pie, cheese and coffee. Editors' Outing Next Monday

The Connecticut Editorial association's summer gathering is to be held this year at Madison, on Monday, Aug. 2. The meetings of the association are usually held on Saturday but this year it is desired to visit Hammonasset beach, the state's big park and Saturday is too crowded a day there for enjoyment.

Released 200 Pheasants

Chairman Edgar T. Thomas of the game bird committee of the New London Fish and Game association Saturday liberated 200 pheasants in the towns of Waterford, Montville, Salem and Groton as part of the state's plan of stocking woodland of the commonwealth with game birds. The pheasants were supplied by the state and came direct from the Markover hatchery at West Greenwich, R. I.

Mrs. Jerome Mayer In Picture

Hartford papers Saturday pictured the graduating class of nurses at the Municipal hospital. Standing with them, among other city officials, was Charity Commissioner Sadie Plaut-Mayer, formerly of Norwich, who is actively interested in the welfare of Hartford's Municipal Home.

COLCHESTER TRUCK AND FLORIDA MACHINE COLLIDE

At the junction of Harland road and Washington street, a serious automobile accident occurred about three o'clock Saturday afternoon, when a powerful Federal truck bearing Connecticut registration No. 26-818, and an Essex coach, No. 358,695-C, Florida registration, collided, causing damages to the coach.

The truck owned by Frederic O. Brown, of Colchester, and driven by his son Harold Brown a constable of Colchester, who had been delivering cattle, was proceeding into Washington street, from Harland road, headed toward Colchester, just as the Florida coach appeared, going in the same direction up Washington street.

Although claimed that the truck had the right of way, the opinion was expressed by several who witnessed the wreck after the accident, that both machines were traveling at a pretty good rate, as when the truck sideswiped the coach, the latter was hurled to the opposite side of the street and practically demolished.

The damages to the truck were apparently slight in comparison, that continuing on its way with a smashed windshield, bent raditor and a portion fo the chasis damaged. Constable Brown had a man riding with him who received minor cuts and bruises.

The Florida coach was driven by E. J Schatz of 78 Dyke street, New London, who also spends a part of the time in Florida. With him was Mrs. Schatz and their little daughter, also a young woman friend. All the occupants were more or less bruised, also cut about the face, etc., from broken glass. The child which was the most seriously injured, with the two women were taken to the Backus hospital, near by, where their wounds were dressed. Later in the afternoon the entire party proceeded on their way in a touring car, after viewing the wrecked coach at the garage of Julian L. Williams of Town street, where it had been removed by his foreman Lloyd Ames and assistants.

Constable Lucius Fenton of Norwich Town, visited the scene and made an investigation, but made no arrests. Many automobiles were parked along Washington ntreet, and the occupants, with others who assembled during the excitement, made up a large crowd of on-lookers. The attacment was given out that both machines were insured. It was also stated that the coach was almost beyond repair.

COLCHESTER AUTO HIT GIRL IN NEW LONDON
(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 25—Louise Mandle, 15, of 20 Raymond street, was struck by a commercial automobile, owned and driven by Sam Kalamanovitch, Colchester merchant, tonight on Broad street. The girl is now at Lawrence hospital, suffering from head injuries and lacerations of the knee. It is possible that the girl has sustained a slight fracture of the skull, but this will not be determined for a day or two.

The girl was a passenger on the Connecticut company trolley car that left State street for Cedar Grove cemetery at 7.30 o'clock. When the trolley car reached a point on Broad street, near Williams street, the girl alighted. The commercial automobile was about to pass, and Kalamanovitch instead of bringing his automobile to a stop, continued, with the result that the girl was struck as she stepped to the highway and started for the sidewalk. A passing autoist picked the girl up and summoning Patrolman Lawrence Fardy, the girl was placed in the automobile and conveyed to the hospital. Salamanovitch later went to the police station and reported the accident, stating that the girl ran from the trolley car directly in front of his automobile.

KU KLUX KLAN RECEIVES 25 MEMBERS

Over 500 men and women, members of the order of the Ku Klux Klan, attended a meeting Saturday evening on a hill this side of Gales Ferry. Over 100 members were the regalia of the order. Members were present from Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Florida and other states, bringing together one of the largest gatherins this year. At the close of the meeting during which 25 members were taken into the order, the countryside was illuminated by a fiery cross. Many passing motorists stopped to view the burning cross, which shone far into the night.

MADE GOOD BASS CATCHES AT PACHAUG

During the past week Pachaug pond has been the rendezvous for bass fishermen, who went there to escape the heat, and returned with a number of good sized catches to their credit. Theodore Kendall and Robert Winchester, of Lisbon, reported the two largest big mouth bass caught, the former hooking one weighing 4 1-2 pounds and the latter landing another tipping the scales at 4 pounds. Other good catches have been taken from the pond, the bass ranging in weight from 1 to 4 pounds.

THAMESVILLE GIRL WALKS AGAINST AUTOMOBILE FENDER

Wanda Mikulewicz, 12222,22222222 Wanda Mikulewicz, 12, No. 13 Shipping street, was knocked down and slightly injured early Sunday evening near Shipping and West Thames street by a machine driven by Wallace S. Bennett of R. F. D. No. 7. Mr. Bennett claims the girl walked backwards from behind a trolley car and backed up against the fender of his machine.

Mr. Bennett took the girl to the W. W. Backus hospital where it was found that she was only slightly hurt. Mr. Bennett then took her to her home.

SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST

A proprietary medicine like everything else that comes before the public has to prove its merit. It has to meet competition. The law of the survival of the fittest applies to this as to other things. The fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after fifty years of success, is still one of the largest sellers, proves that it is a dependable, standard remedy and one in which women may have perfect confidence.

WARNS AGAINST ROADSIDE SUPPLIES OF WATER

Regarding roadside water supplies the weekly health bulletin issued by the Connecticut state department of health says:

Private supplies or sources used by the roadside traveler are usually secured from wells, springs and running streams. The only sure method of telling whether or not water from a well or spring is safe is to analyze the water but many unsafe water supplies can be ruled out by inspection. Wells should be located away from cesspools, privies, manure piles, etc., and should not be on a slope from them. The curbing and cover of the well should be tight and waste water should preferably be diverted away. Bucket and chain wells are rapidly becoming obsolete because of the dangers from unclean hands or diseased persons.

Springs should be constructed with tight hosing to avoid surface contamination. Dipping of utensils presents danger to the bucket well and an overflow pipe should be provided and used. Springs also should be located away from polluting influences.

Running streams without the benefit of long storage or purification are always potentially dangerous. Picnickers, hunters or others may deposit excreta on the watershed of the stream so that pollution my wash in. No protection exists for you.

Turbid waters should be avoided because they suggest the probability of surface wash. All water from running pipes by the roadside should be followed up to the source for most of these are not safe for drinking purposes.

You have become accustomed to "Stop, look and listen" before crossing railroad tracks. Become accustomed to the same habit before using private water supplies. They may be just as dangerous.

SATURDAY'S MARKET

NEW YORK, July 24.—(AP)—After periods of weakness and strength characterized yesterday's brief session of the stock market, with closing quotations disclosing considerable irregularity. Trading was in relatively small volume, due to the small attendance on the floor and the continued lack of public interest, the day's sales aggregating 450,000 shares.

Prices broke rather sharply soon after the opening when selling pressure was renewed against the motor shares but good buying support was forthcoming and many of the early losses were substantially reduced or converted into small gains. The market appeared to be marking time pending some definite change in the business or foreign situations which could be used as the basis of a fresh move in either direction.

Sharp rebounds in Davison Chemical and Burns Brothers issues were among the few features on the upside. Equipment developed further weakness despite a growing belief that the Seaboard's inquiry for 35 engines was the forerunner of a brisk fall demand for motive power and cars. Rails were mixed, with a moderate advance in "Cotton Belt" as one of the few changes of interest.

The closing was irregular.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

Comrades Two

A farm is their world—these Comrades Two—
As cheery a pair as I ever knew:
A Boy and his Dog, a Dog and his Boy,
Each to the other a comrade-joy!

No park devices are theirs for play,
For shoot-the-chutes they've a stack of hay,
No great pavilion shields them from storm—
Their barnloft haven is snug and warm.

No merry-go-round you'll hear them vow,
Has half the thrills of a riding plow.
What park has a barn and a wagon shed,
Fence corners, cribs and an onion bed?

These serve them well, they blithely say,
When hide-and-seek's the game they play.
They've thrills in plenty—these Comrades Two—
Days are too short, there's so much to do!

They take excursions along the road,
Laugh at the blinking of Old Man Toad;
Dad Rabbit waits for his daily chase,
While Chipmunk boasts he owns the place.

Bob White's song is an anthem sweet
No tune like his floods a city street;
They dance a jig to Woodpecker's pecks
Then whittle for Owl some wooden specs.

A Boy and his Dog, and Dog and his Boy,
Each to the other a comrade-joy:
Oh, how I pity a Boy whose Dog
Never has barked in a hollow log!
—William Herschell, in Indianapolis News.

(Name Unknown)

Oh! were you ne'er a schoolboy.
And did you never train,
And feel that swelling of the heart,
You ne'er can feel again?
Didst never meet far down the street,
With plumes and banners gay,
While a kettle for a kettle drum,
Bade us march, march away?

It seems to me but yesterday,
Nor scarce so long ago,
Since all our school their muskets took,
To charge the stubborn foe.
Our muskets were of cedar wood,
With ramrods bright and new;
With bayonet forever set,
And painted barrel too.

We charged upon a flock of geese,
And put them all to flight—
Except one sturdy gander,
Which thought to show us fight
But ah! we knew a thing or two.
Our captain wheeled the van
We routed him, we scouted him,
Nor lost a single man.

Our captain was as brave a lad
As e'er commission bore,
All brightly gleamed his new tin sword
A paper cap he wore.
He led us up the steep hillside,
And till the close of day,
We charge the mimic fray.
E. H. Thomas.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

We read in story books of brave deeds of the past and we immediately are led to believe that those so called days of chivalry have passed forever. This is a mistake and stories in the daily papers quickly show this is true. When we read of an account of how some man gave his life for another, how people daily risk their lives to save others from death, or even fine deeds where there is no personal danger, we know that the days of chivalry are still with us.

This would be a sorry world if these deeds of bravery should stop, for it could mean but one thing: that people no longer cared for others, being taken up completely in their own little selves.

This spirit of bravery is not a thing of a moment, even though at times some person who previously had been selfish suddenly makes a great sacrifice. The spirit of bravery is prompted by a training in earlier years. One learns to think of others when young, learns to judge them at their worth and forgive them for their weaknesses. All people are not fortunate enough to be naturally brave. We often hear of people who are afraid and are likely to class them as cowards.

We should not be too hasty in this for something that took place when that man or woman was a child may have brought about this condition. Which, when analized, really amounts to loss of self respect. When we find a boy or girl who has lost this belief in themselves we should not taunt them with it but should assist them to regain their self respect, and, in so doing, bring back that strain of bravery which they have lost because of some cause unknown to us.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

The Thieving Hawk

Dear Uncle Jed: As I was walking in the woods one day, I say a hawk. Everytime he flapped his wings he would go about five feet higher in the air. When he saw me, he flew away.

While coming back, I saw another hawk bringing food to his young ones. But I wonder where he got the food. He must have stolen it, for he is a great thief.

ROBERT HOULE, Age 9.
Willimantic.

Soliloquy of a Summer Child

My school is on. My Sunday school is closed. My music lessons are ended. My physical training is over. I have time for everything. And there's nothing to do.

Dear Uncle Jed: What I have just related to you will never happen to your Wide Awake boys or girls, I hope. I go to Sunday school every Sunday in the year. I read my Bible lesson twice in the morning, learn my memory verse by heart, and do my Sunday school home work. This week I have learned a song with four verses. I help my father in his garden. I hoe my garden in the evening when the sun has gone down. I take my watering pot and water the plants. I take my shiny spade and wheel barrow to the garden and bring it back full of rich dirt to help mother repair the bare spots in our front yard. Then I sow the grass seeds, cover them with more dirt and take care not to walk on them. Now the grass is about an inch high and the color is light green. I gather roses from our rose garden and put them in a vase on the table every morning. Put the day and date on the black board. Pick up my toys and keep my play room in order. I write an interesting letter for our page and last but not least write a thank you letter every time I receive a reward from Uncle Jed, who is always giving and doing so much to please his boys and girls. May our page always flourish is the sincere wish of one Wide Awake. There are many other little things I help out and yet have plenty of time for play and pleasure. I remain as ever a Wide Awake.

EDWIN CARL COLE, Jr., Age 9.
Versailles.

The Uses of Flax.

Dear Uncle Jed: Flax has been cultivated for many centuries. Along the upright stalk, from 18 to 20 inches high, small narrow leaves grow, and the blossoms appear in July and August, and are light blue.

Flax is grown for fiber in Russia, Belgium, Italy, France, Holland, Ireland and Egypt. Little flax fiber is produced in the United States. Plants for fiber production are straight stemmed, while the varieties grown for seed have many branches. Flax seeds are produced in Russia, India, Argentina and the United States. Plants harvested for fiber are pulled up by the roots in order to obtain the greatest possible length. The fiber is separated from the stalk of the plant by retting, a process of partial decay, breaking and scutching, to remove the woody parts, and hackling or combing. In the best grades of flax most of this work is done by hand.

Flax or linen fiber and linseed oil are the chief products of the plant. Tow is a by-product in making linen and flax yarns and fabrics.

Linseed oil is used in paints, varnishes, printer's ink, oilcloth and linoleum. Linseed oilcake is a valuable cattle food. Flax seeds find limited use in medicine.

Flax yarns are used in making rope, twine, bagging and coarse, unbleached fabrics. Linen yarns are made into products of the better grade, including fine linens, cambrics and laces.

Linen is bleached by exposure to the sun and by treatment with a diluted solution of chloride of lime. Linen rags are the stock for best quality paper.

The United States imports flax fiber mainly from Europe, as well as large quantites of linens, laces, etc. Some flax seeds are imported and large amounts of linseed oilcake are sent to Europe.

Nature's Story Book.

Dear Uncle Jed: I will tell you about nature's wonderful story book. In the morning it opens like you or I would open a pictured story book without an end. All trees, bushes and shrubs have large and small green leaves which make the world look like a beautiful green world made to please everybody. The birds warble from morning till night, while the bees are busy making honey and buzzing all day long. Fields of corn wave like a large river with small green waves rippling in the breeze.

The crickets chirp and the wind sings a soothing lullaby in the treetops. All day long the sun shines brightly, making all things in its reach brighter than ever. Butterflies fly here and there, helping in the making of nature's story book. They eat the honey of flowers in one meadow, then, casting a glance in another meadow, they fly into it and enjoy themselves. Finally the sun sinks down, leaving a group of clouds circling around, and thus our wonderful story book has closed into the night.

Picnic at Devil's Den.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have not written to the Wide Awakes for a long time. So I thought I'd write and tell them about our last day of school.

June 20th was our last day of school. We finished cleaning the school about 10 o'clock. We were all getting ready to leave when we were told to get ready for a surprise. We were lined up outside the schoolhouse. We started marching towards the woods but none of us except the teacher knew where we were going. We walked about 30 minutes before we knew where we were bound for. We came to rocks bigger than a two-tenement house, and everywhere we looked there were caves. Last of all we came to the biggest cave, named "The Devil's Den." Some of us went in a little ways and were surprised to see initials and forms of animals carved on a rock. We had lunch on top of a flat rock. Then we tried to find some water to drink but found none so we thought we would start for home. We went about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. We all enjoyed the walk and the surprise very much. I hope the Wide Awakes had a good time also.

The Right Answer

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to the Wide Awakes. I am going to tell you about my trip to Fort Griswold. Last Sunday my father took mother, brother and I down to Fort Griswold in Groton. When we arrived at the old fort my father started to tell us the history about the old fort when an old gentleman walked up to us and asked us if we would like to have him tell us about the battles that were fought on these grounds. We all said yes. After the old gentleman told us the story he took us in and showed us the powder house and the different kinds of bricks that the powder house was made of. When we came out the old gentleman took us all up to see the tunnel. Before we entered the tunnel the old gentleman said to my brother, "Now son, if you was an American soldier and was told to guard this tunnel and not let an enemy enter what would you do if an enemy tried to enter?"

My brother said he would kill him. We all laughed.

A Pleasant Outing

Dear Uncle Jed: A few days before school closed we made plans for our annual school picnic. The children were to bring what the teacher had asked for and at dinner time there would be a fine assortment of goodies.

We did not assemble at the schoolhouse as we

JOE SIMBORSKY ESCAPES FROM NEW LONDON COUNTY JAIL

Joe Simborski, alleged cattle cutter, escaped from the New London county jail in this city Sunday afternoon about 1:30. Taking Turnkey Charles D. Tracy unawares, Simborski pushed him and knocked him down. Simborski then made his escape from the jail through the jail office.

Captain Thomas P. Murphy, on duty at police headquarters, was immediately notified and he sent out a general call to all officers on duty to be on the watch for Simborski. Some months ago Simborski was arrested by the local police in connection with the cattle cutting episodes that aroused cattle owners throughout the city and town. He was bound over to the criminal superior court and when he appeared before that court his case was continued to await deportation proceedings.

Simborski was to have appeared before the next term of the criminal court which will be held early in September. He had been held at the local jail since November 14th last.

Simborski's case last came to the attention of the criminal court in January. He was charged with cruelty to animals. State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown asked a continuance of the case as he said he hoped arrangements might be made to deport Simborski as an undesirable alien. In view of this fact Simborski was ordered held in bonds of $10,000. In default of bonds Simborski was taken back to jail. He is the man who the police believe has been responsible for a number of cases of mutilation of animals.

OVER 200 AUTO TRANSFERS A DAY

Automobiles are changing hands in Connecticut this summer at the rate of about 200 a day, which is the highest transfer rate shown on the records of the department. Much of the department's activity at this season of the year has to do with recording these transfers, of which there were 58,628 in the fiscal year which ended June 30th.

Registrations are being cancelled by the department at the rate of about 275 a day. These cancellations in the great majority of cases arise from the sale of automobiles, and the discrepancy between the daily rate of cancellation and transfers may be due to the fact that many of the cancellations are recorded upon the taking in of an old car by a dealer in an exchange agreement when a new car is bought.

The owner of a car is required to notify the department without delay when he disposes of it and, since he is legal to be held responsible for any damage that might be done by the car so long as it is registered in his name, it is to the owner's advantage to have the department records corrected as soon as possible after he has sold his car.

The rate of registration transfers this summer is about fifty a day in excess of last summer's rate, and the whole number of transfers recorded in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1925 was 44,450. A fee of $1 is charged by the department for recording a transfer and the person applying for the transfer is required to pay the difference in registration fee between his old car and the one he has just acquired, provided the fee for registering the new car is greater.

New registrations are coming into the department this month at the rate of 400 a day, which is about the same as last July's rate. The registration rate for June also, was about the same as the corresponding month of last year.

TRUCK CRASHES INTO MAIN STREET BUILDING

While endeavoring to park his International truck at the left curb on Main street in front of the Shea & Burke store in the Beckwith building, Michael Lybeck, a farmer living in the vicinity of Beach pond, became confused with the gears, the result being that his truck climbed the curb and crashed into the building, the front end dropping into a stairway which goes to a basement store in the building.

Mr. Lybeck was uninjured and climbed from the truck and assisted in getting it back onto the street. The truck was empty but the force of the blow broke iron railings on both sides of the stairway before the truck dropped into the stairway.

Officer Luke Riley investigated the accident and Officer Charles Smith was also sent to the scene to assist in directing traffic. It was found that Lybeck had recently purchased the truck and was not accustomed to the use of the gears, having driven a Ford truck previously.

The police found that Lybeck had no registration for his car and gave him a summons to court for violation of the motor vehicle law. Lybeck claimed that he had sent for a transfer for the car, but had not yet received it.

The only damage to the truck was a broken left headlight, bent fender and radiator.

Go Gas Company Sued

At Worcester Judge Winfred H. Whiting of the superior court has ordered a hearing for next Thursday at Boston on the bill in equity filed in the superior court at Worcester by the Massachusetts Gas and Oil Company. The concern, incorporated as a holding company representing four thousand investors and approximately $1,250,000 in invested funds, asks that the Go-Gas Company be restrained from selling its filling stations to the Standard Oil Company, unless that company agrees to continue the dividends promised the investors. The bill also asks that the further sale of gasoline from these filling stations be prohibited unless provision is made for the promised dividend. It is claimed the investors did so under the agreement that one cent or the money derived from each gallon of gasoline would be divided among the stockholders in the town or city where the station is located. The Go-Gas Company operates 150 stations in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The bill is signed by sixty stockholders.

ST. PATRICK'S PARISH WEEKLY ACTIVITIES

Sunday activities in St. Patrick's church began with the reception of holy communion at the first mass at 7:30 by the "clean speech organization," the Holy Name society. A very good representation of the membership went to the altar, led by their new president, Patrick M. Coleman, who succeeds Michael J. Murphy, efficient head for a number of terms. The rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May read the low mass as is customary, having the assistance of Rev. Myles P. Galvin in administering the Eucharist.

At 9, low mass was read by Father Galvin, and as a result of the many confessions at the week end, there were enough at communion to form an ordinary congregation. The gospel read in every mass throughout the world was that for the ninth Sunday after Pentecost, Luke XIX, 41-47, the Saviour's lamentations over the indifference of Jerusalem.

A large congregation attended the masses for the Italian Catholics at 8:15 and the final service of the day, mass at 10:30.

It was announced that the coming Sunday would be communion Sunday for the Children of Mary society and members of the Immaculate Conception Sodality.

Today, July 26th, the Catholic church venerates St. Anne, mother of the Blessed Virgin, as the model of mothers in the training and teaching of their daughters. In gratitude for favors received, a member of the parish has requested a special votive mass today in honor of St. Anne; and the church will remain open until 8 p. m. that those who wish may pay visits to meditate upon the virtues of "the good Saint Anne," as she is affectionately called. Before the shrine of St. Anne in the church many candles were lighted in memory during Sunday; at the same time devout Catholics always make some offering for the poor. The handsome votive stand to St. Anne is the gift to the church from the Rosary Society, of which Miss Annie G. Stanton is president.

Notice was given that on the coming Sunday, August 1st, Pope Pius has asked the 200,000,000 Catholics throughout the world to pray for the deliverance from persecution of the church in Mexico. August 1st is the date of the feast of St. Peter in chains, which recalls the deliverance of the leader of the Apostles through the prayers of the Universal Church. The hypocritical form of pretended legality under which the Mexican government is waging persecution against Catholic subjects is a world-scandal; and the revival of this single day of prayer for the deliverance of the church in that chaotic country is aptly set on the day when the first bishop of the church, St. Peter was freed through the efficacy of the prayers of the faithful.

Sunday at 1 p. m., over thirty Boy Scouts of the parish left the church for a week's camping at Tippecan, Beach Pond. In the absence on vacation of their scoutmaster, Rev. John J. Reilly, the boys were in charge of John P. Corcoran. Members of the parish loaned the use of cars to transport the boys.

During the week the boys will be visited by members of the parish and as in former years will be provided by the generous housewives with good things which agree with the keen appetites of boys on an outing.

Automobiles to convey the boys were loaned by Otto Ferry, R. Rindfuss, William J. Reardon, Henry A. Kerouack, Daniel O'Brien and Miss Kitty Corcoran.

HUMMEL WOMAN ARRESTED WITH SAILOR COMPANION

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 25—Shirley Lee Hummel, wife of Charles Hummel, and a waitress at the Star restaurant, State street, was arrested Saturday afternoon charged with intoxication and lascivious carriage, on complaint of her husband, also employed at the restaurant. Shirley's companion, Clayton N. Gates, 21, seaman, first class, stationed at the submarine base, was arrested charged with a lascivious carriage. The Hummel woman was released on furnishing a surety on her bond of $100 by Max Fern, her employer, and Gates secured Louis Elfenbein as surety on his bond of $100. Both will be presented in the police court Monday morning.

The Hummel woman and Gates were at Ocean Beach about 5 o'clock. They had been drinking and most noticably displayed the effects of the liquor. Their conduct was such as to attract attention, particularly that of the woman's husband, who entertained suspicion that his wife had gone to the shore resort. When he found his wife in company with Gates and both being in a condition of intoxication, he made complaint to Patrolman Dennis Murphy, who with Patrolman Walter O'Neil and Sergeant Samuel Hick arrested the pair. The Hummel woman, who was recently married, has been arrested several times within the past two years charged with either intoxication or breach of the peace.

DARING THEFT OF A CAR ON STATE STREET SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 25—A Nash roadster, owned by James M. Miner, Huntington street grocer, was stolen and in the boldest possible manner this afternoon. Mr. Miner drove his car southerly on State street to a point between Union and Green streets, where he parked the car while he made a purchase. He had hardly alighted from the auto when a bystander, leaped into the car and starting the engine, drove away. The thief observed Traffic Officer Frank Linehan on duty at the corner of State and Main streets, and but a block away and wisely refrained from driving towards the officer. Instead the thief turned the car around, which is a violation of the law, and stepping on the gas, the car passed through upper State street and at a fast rate of speed entered Broad street. Officer Linehan saw the car as it was turned on State street and blew his whistle, but the thief failed to heed the signal and speeded away. A few minutes later Miner appeared before the officer and informed him that the car Linehan had observed making the turn on State street, was his auto and that it had been stolen. The police of Norwich, Westerly, Hartford and New Haven, as well as the State police at Groton and Centerbrook were requested to be on the lookout for the stolen auto and the thief.

Stanley Faulker, about 23, of Waterford, was arrested this afternoon by Sergeants John Cavanagh and Nelson Smith and while there is no specific charge made against Faulkner, he being held a prisoner at the police station on suspicion of having stolen the sloop Francis, owned in Hartford and after grounding the sloop at Crescent Beach, looting the boat. Captain Julius Ortman, master of the sloop, declares that the plunder taken is worth $1,000. Faulker, it is understood, is known to employes of the Thames Towboat company and an employe of one of the tugs of the company has stated that he was seen in a dory in the vicinity of where the Francis had been moored a short time before the sloop was discovered missing. He has a court record and has served time in the reformatory at Cheshire and was released from there but a comparatively short time ago.

COULSON, SOON TO MARRY IS CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 25—Charles Coulson, 24, of 17 Mather court, was arrested Saturday afternoon by Patrolman James McKenna, charged with assault upon Evelyn Malloy, 17, of 56 Franklin street. He was released following his brother, William Coulson becoming surety on the bond of the accused in the sum of $500 for his presentation in the police court Monday morning. Coulson, who is a lineman employed by the Connecticut Power company, was arrested at Ocean Beach, when he was taken from a group of bathers and locked up.

A week ago, it is alleged by the Malloy girl, she was walking along Ocean avenue with Coulson on their way to Ocean Beach, she having made an appointment with Coulson earlier in the day at the beach. When the couple reached Glenwood avenue, the girl has stated, the couple walked through Glenwood avenue until the bridge of Alewife cove was reached. The couple then started to walk along the shore to a point where, if they continued, would bring them to the bridge leading to Ridgewood park. Before they had continued far, the girl alleges, Coulson attacked her, disarranging her clothing and bruising her. She managed to make her escape and was picked up by a pedestrian near the Farnam estate and later taken to the police station by a passing autoist.

Coulson, it is understood, is engaged to be married and the ceremony is scheduled to take place next month.

Frank May of New London and John J. Hoey of Worcester will appear in the police court tomorrow morning to establish which was responsible for the collision on Ocean avenue at the junction of Bank street Friday afternoon. They had a crash there and the Hoey car was badly damaged. The May car was driven away after the mishap.

Mrs. Joseph Lanze and infant son, patients at Home Memorial hospital, returned to their home, Starr street, Saturday.

An automobile driven by William Gragan, 24 Adelaide street, in passing through Crystal avenue Saturday night struck and killed a dog owned by Patrolman Patrick Sheehan.

Simbroski is described as being 36, about five feet seven or eight inches in height and weighs about 135 pounds. He was dressed in a light coat, brown hat and brown shoes.

The annual picnic of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen was held today at Red Top, on the Thames, and was attended by about 30 members of the order and their friends. Included among the guests were officials of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad located in New London.

The residence of Morris Lampert, 203 North Bank street, was entered by a thief Saturday night during the absence from the house of members of the family. The burglary was discovered about midnight when the family returned and complaint was made to the police. Entrance to the house was obtained by the thief finding a rear window open. The only plunder known to have been taken was a handbag containing $10 in bills and a small quantity of silverware belonging to Lampert's daughter, Patrolman Frank Philopena was assigned to the case.

An automobile owned and driven by John McGarry, 302 Williams street, crashed against a telephone pole on Pequot avenue, between Montauk avenue and Lower Boulevard Saturday midnight. The car was made a complete wreck but Mr. McGarry escaped injury. Mr. McGarry had been to Ocean Beach and was returning to his home when he suddenly lost control of the steering wheel with the result that the automobile leaped across the highway and against the pole.

The police Saturday morning in making their reports at the police station, reported over 60 electric lights as failing to illumine during Friday night and Saturday morning. The lights many of them arc lights left several sections of the city in total darkness and caused an element of danger to pedestrians. It's almost a nightly occurrence for several electric lights to be out, but the number to fail to illumine Friday night was exceptionally large.

The city is again in partial darkness tonight because of a large number of electric lights failing to function. After hitting the cyclist the automobile struck a traffic beacon and moved it out of position, slightly damaging the automobile.

A boy cyclist was struck by an automobile driven by James W. Johnson, of Mystic, Saturday afternoon at the corner of Huntington and Washington streets. The boy, Vance Holmgren, 14, of 58 Shaw street, was knocked from the wheel which was badly damaged, but did not sustain injuries more serious than bruises and scratches, as was found at the office of a physician. Throughout the night desk sergeants at the police station were continually notifying the power house of the Connecticut Power house of the lights being out in various parts of the city.

TWO BAD AUTO SMASHES DURING SUNDAY AFTERNOON

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 25—An automobile owne dby Albert Menghie, 581 Pequot avenue, and driven by his brother, Augustus Menghi 15, of the same address, and an automobile owned by Joseph Banise, 30 Grove street, Chicopee Falls, Mass., and driven by Frank M. Banise, 34 Taylor street, Chicopee, Mass., collided this afternoon at the Junction of Glenwood avenue and Lower Boulevard. Menghie was ordered to appear in the police court tomorrow morning and answer to charges of operating an automobile without having a license and taking an automobile without permission of the owner. The Banise automobile, a Chevrolet sedan, was completely wrecked, while the Menghie auto sustained but slight damage.

The Banise automobile in which were Banise, Stella, Sophie, Adeline Banise, Cora Sibia and Antone Kirby were enroute to Ocean Beach by way of Lower Boulevard. At the corner of Glenwood avenue, the Menghi automobile, headed northerly on that avenue, struck the Banise auto when the latter car had passed the intersection of the two thoroughfares, the left rear wheel of the Banise auto being struck and wrecked, causing the car to be dragged about 30 feet. When the two automobiles came to a stop, the Chevrolet was damaged about the top and body and could not be moved. Stella Banise and Cora Sibia were removed to Lawrence hospital suffering from severe lacerations and bruises.

An automobile driven by Lester Perry, 34 Mercer street and an automobile driven by Miss Norbeta Dilion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Dillon, Ridgewood park, Waterford, collided this afternoon on Montauk corner of Gardner avenue. Both cars were wrecked and three of the occupants, were oinjured, but not seriously. Perry and Miss Dillon were taken to Home Memorial hospital where their wounds, consisting of lacerations and bruises were dressed, after which they returned to their homes. Harold Howard, passenger in the Perry automobile is a patient at the institution suffering from severe bumps and bruises and will probably be under treatment there several days. The automobile driven by Miss Dilon was emerging from Gardner to enter Montauk avenue, when the auto driven by Perry was proceeding southerly on Montauk avenue. Before either driver could bring the cars to a stop they crashed, both wrecked, on the tracks of the Connecticut company. The two autos were hauled to the side of the avenue and later towed to garages for repairs.

An automobile owned by Horace Chappell, pitcher for the Socony team of the City league, was wrecked this afternoon when it collided with a car carrying New York registration, in Waterford. Although Chappell's auto was left in condition for the junk pile, the driven escaped injury other than bruises and slight contusions.

POETRY

To a Water Lily

"Israel shall grow as the Lily," Hos 14: 5
Flower white and gold, and mirrored on the river—beaming!
Wavelets of love encircle thee from charmed, enchanted hearts.
Their tenderest admiration of thy beauty quaiting, streaming—
O Lily of the Waters, speechless delight thy bloom imparts!

Loveliest of all varied blooms, on lake or river drifting,
Opening at gentle finger-touch of earliest morning light,
Up to the violet skies thine eyes thou'rt golden lashes lifting,
Yet art thou anchored deep in muddy soil darksome as night.

Emblem thou art of what our lives, ourselves, a-bloom should be,
Afloat upon this never resting River of Swift Time—
Pure, beautiful, and fragrant with each virtue God would see,
Rooted in earth, yet heavenward springing, with hopes sublime.

—Rev. George G. Phipps.

The Blacktail Deer

The blacktail held his tawny marble pose,
With every supple muscle set to spring,
Nosing the tainted air—his slender limbs
And sinews like corded copper quivering.

Ponderous the minutes, while his smoldering eyes
Went burning over me, and marking mine
His heart ticked off each moment as he stood
Waiting an ominous word, a sound, a sign.

I tossed a friendly gesture! The sinews snapped,
And flung his bulk of rippled tawny stone
Over an alder, as when a bended pine,
Released from pressure, catapults a cone.

Bending an arch above the aldercrown,
In a stream of whistling wind the great buck went,
Flirting his tail in exclamation, mark
To punctuate his vast astonishment.

The features seemingly those of a female, were carved from shells. They were of the Mongolian type. The body was fashioned from wood. Prehistoric Indian designs have been successfully adapted to modern textile purposes by H. R. Goodwin, of the Ohio State museum. Using conventional designs found in copper pieces and on engraved bones from the famous Hopewell Indian mounds of Ohio, Mr. Goodwin has constructed patterns suitable for rugs, draperies, dress material, lace curtains and has even made one attractive design for chinaware from a Indian motiff. The original patterns were for the most part made by the prehistoric Indians from thin sheets of pounded copper and were placed in burial mounds, from which they have recently been recovered.

FRENCH FRANC IMPROVES WITHOUT AID OF THE GOV'T

Increased Value of the Franc Reflects Change in the Political Situation—From Additional Indirect and Direct Taxation the Government Expects to Obtain 2,500,000,000 Francs During the Next Six Months—Ten Principal Clauses Comprise the Financial Plan Drafted by the Poincare Cabinet—Measure Will be Presented to the Chamber of Deputies Today.

PARIS, July 26—(AP)—Premier Poincare's financial plans for the redemption of the franc and the restoration of the French treasury, which the cabinet council for three successive days has been elaborating, comprises ten principal clauses, according to semi-official information available after the ministers separated at 7:30 o'clock this evening.

The advice of the experts committee has been followed in many respects, notably regarding the necessity of additional indirect and direct taxation From these sources alone, the government expects to obtain 2,500,00,000 francs during the second six months of 1926.

Railroad, freight and passenger's rates will be increased; a readjustment will be made in taxes on imports of foodstuffs from the colonies, such as coffee, rice and vanilla; the tax on the busines turnover will be made uniform at two per cent. and customs tariffs will be increased. These four items are expected ot bring in about two billion francs additional.

Concerning the changes in direct taxatin, the new schedule is left in the hands of M. Bokanowski, minister of commerce, who will report to the cabinet in due course. The other clauses have not yet been announced either semi-officially or officially.

It is reported on good authority, however, that the changes in direct taxation comprise revision of the income tax and a levy on inheritances. And the expected revenue from these will be devoted to a sinking fund.

The cabinet intends to make a strong effort to reduce the expenditures of the administration. The premier on this point alone will request powes to legislate by decrees, with the probability that many employes will be discharged.

The behavior of the franc on the Paris bourse today was interpreted as indicating a general belief that the cabinet will receive a good majority in the chamber and practical unanimity in the senate Opening at 40.40 to the dollar and 196.50 sterling, the franc rose steadily until it was quoted at noon at 38.67 and 188.50. A slight reaction then set in. The official closing figures were 39.075 to the dollar and 190 sterling.

An official statement announced that there had been no intervention in the market on the part of the government in behalf of thef ranc. Its improvement was due solely to the changed political situation in the country, it was averred in bourse circles.

CABINET TO DEMAND VOTE OF CONFIDENCE TODAY

PARIS, July 26—(AP)—Premier Poincare's newly formed cabinet, having agreed on its ministerial declaration today, will go before the chamber of deputies tomorrow and demand that the government be given power to solve France's pressing financial difficulties by decrees instead of having its bills debated at length in parliament.

According to several of the best informed members, the cabinet has decided to let ratification of the Washington and London debt agreements go over until parliament reconvenes next autumn. This also is accepted as meaning that Premier Poincare will not seek foreign credits in rehabilitating the franc.

Meanwhile the slogan of the ministry of "national reconciliation" is: "France must save herself by her own means." This is accepted in political circles as indicating that direct and indirect taxation must be increased and that production must be intensified throughout the country.

The ministerial declaration, which was agreed upon at today's meeting of the cabinet, will be short. Minister of the Interior Saraut and of Pensions Marin will ask the rules committee of the chamber tomorow morning to accord urgent treatment to government measures which are designed to increase the influx of taxes and thereby to help in improving the exchange.

The sudden arrival before the end of the cabinet council of General Gouraud, military governor of the Paris area, gave rise to numerous alarmist rumors. These persisted until it was given out officially that he was merely paying a courtesy call on the new premier before going on a month's leave and that it was only an accident that he happened to arrive before the cabinet meeting had adjourned.

Both the ministers of the interior and of colonies denied that his call concerned the questions of reinstating General Gouraud as high commissioner in Syria to replace High Commissioner Henry De Jouvenel, as was reported in the afternoon papers.

DWYER FOUND GUILTY IN NEW YORK RUM CASE

NEW YORK, July 2.—(AP)—William V. Dwyer, head of an alleged $40,000,000 rum running syndicate tonight was found guilty of conspiracy to violate the national liquor and customs law.

The defendants acquitted were Arch M. Eversole, George Clyde, Walter Wieder, James J McCambridge, Edward Gallagher and William B. Maloney.

The jury reached an agreement after deliberations lasting since 11:45 o'clock this morning.

Federal Judge Julian W. Mack immediately after the verdict was returned, sentenced Dwyer to the maximum penalty of two years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine. Stating that there was a degree of difference in the guilt of Dwyer and Cohron, Judge Mack then sentenced Cobron to two years in the penitentiary and a fine of $5,000. The judge refused to delay passing sentence despite the pleas of attorneys for the defendants.

Admission to bail for the convicted men was also denied by Judge Mack. He permitted them to go to their homes accompanied by United States deputy marshals, however, after which they were taken to the Tombs prison to remain pending an appeal in their behalf.

EVELYN NESBIT THAW DOES NOT APPROVE HARRY'S BOOK

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—(AP)—Evelyn Nesbit doesn't entirely like the forthcoming autobiography of her former husband, Harry K. Thaw, but Thaw thinks she ought to.

"Well, she did here and she didn't there," he told his publishers when asked if she had liked the book after reading the advance proofs. "But she ought to be glad all those things are going to be brought out, because they give her a lot of credit that she has had coming to her for a long time."

In a statement issued by the publishers today Thaw denied "reports that he had been helped in writing the book or that it had actually been written for him.

"Do you think I would allow anyone else to describe for me my relations with Evelyn Nesbit?" he asked.

Thaw, who was committed to Matteawan after killing Stanford White, noted architect, in old Madison Square Garden, later to be released as cured of insanity, is calling his book "The Traitor."

SENATE INVESTIGATION OF ILL. SENATORIAL PRIMARY

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP)—Lauching its long-heralded investigation into the Illinois senatorial primary, the senate campaign funds committee today struck several snags.

After testifying he had contributed $125,000 to the candidacy of Col. Frank L. Smith, republican nominee, and chairman of the Illinois commerce commission and $15,000 to the successful democratic candidacy of George E. Brennan, Samuel Insull, Chicago public utilities executive, declined, pending conference with counsel, to say whether he had given financial aid to the Crowe-Barrett political organization in Chicago, which supported Smith.

Previously Allen F. Moore, of Monticello, Illis., campaign manager for Col. Smith and republican national committeeman, had declined to say who, beside himself and Insull, were the chief contributors to the Smith campaign fund. He himself spent about $5,000 in Smith's interests, he said.

BRISTOL, July 26.—(AP)—Less than one third the numbers of worshippers who attended the novena to St. Anne at St. Joseph church, were able to enter the place of worship during the afternoon service at 3 or the evening service at 7 o'clock tonight. A conservative estimate of the number who filed through the church to have the relic applied was set at 15,000. Yesterday the crowd of worshippers was estimated at 10,000.

Rev. Oliver T. Magnell, pastor of the church, declared that the attendance was the largest in the 20 years that the relic has been here. There were several rumors of cures effectd, which Rev. Father Magnell admitted he had heard, but he declined to make any statement until he had been able to verify them.

For the first time in the company's history it has sold every bale of the old crop before putting the new crop in the drying sheds. The new crop will come on the market the first of the year.

ROBERT TODD LINCOLN PASSED AWAY IN SLEEP

MANCHESTER, Vt., July 26—(AP)—Robert Todd Lincoln, eldest son of President Abraham Lincoln and the last surviving member of the Civil war president's immediate family, is dead. He passed away in his sleep at his summer home, Hildene, early today. Had he lived until August 1st he would have been 83 years old.

Although he never sought public office he rose to high position in both public life and the business world. He served as secretary of war under two presidents, was United States minister to Great Britain under President Harrison. He served for years as counsellor for the Pullman company, becamep resident and later chairman of the board of directors.

Advancing age and declining health caused Mr. Lincoln to retire entirely from business activity between two and three years ago. This year his health had been feeble and since he came to his summer home last May he had ventured out of doors but once each day and then only for an automobile ride. His health within recent weeks had not been noticeably poorer, however, and he took his customary ride yesterday. But this morning when servants went to awaken him, they found he had died, probably several hours earlier.

Mrs. Lincoln, two daughters and three grand children survive him. Mrs. Lincoln and two of his grand-children, Mary Lincoln Beckwith and Robert Todd Lincoln Beckwith, were at his summer home here when he passed away. Mrs. F. E. Johnson, daughter of Mr. Lincoln and mother of the children, was said to be in Washington. Mrs. Charles Isham, his other daughter, is passing the summer at her home here. Mr. Lincoln first came to Manchester 63 years ago, this summer, long before this Vermont village won fame as an exclusive summer resort. With his

BERNARD SHAW'S VIEWS AS GIVEN AT BIRTHDAY PARTY

LONDON, July 26—(AP)—None of the smaler rooms in the house of parliament was large enough to accommodate Bernard Shaw's 70th birthday party tonight, except perhaps the house of commons itself. But as the members could hardly be expected to adjourn their debate on the national coal strike, G. B. S.'s friends and admirers, headed by the former labor premier, Ramsay MacDonald, gathered at the Metropole hotel.

Mr. MacDonald, with Mr. and Mrs. Shaw seated on either side of him, presented the guest of honor to a distinguished company of labor movement leaders, literary figures and intellectuals.

Mr. MacDonald voiced a strong protest against the British government's refusal to permit Mr. Shaw's speech to be broadcast unles a pledge was given that it would not be controversial on public topics.

Speaking with marked vigor, after a tremendous ovation, G. B. S. said that the dreadful fate of being treated as a great man seemed about to overtake him.

"The labor party," he added, "had discovered the secret there are no great men and no great nations. All that kind of humbug was left to the 19th century, where it properly belongs. Get rid of the great men and you will get rid of the great nations, and then perhaps we shall all be happy."

STRIFE BETWEEN MEXICO AND THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

MEXICO CITY, July 26—(AP)—For more than 50 years there have been acute periodic differences between the Mexican government and the Catholic church. The government's determination to strip the church of power and property in this country caused six years of civil war—the Reform war, 1855-1861—and has been a contributing factor, historians say, in others of the succession of wars and revolutions that have given Mexico so much turbulence and bloodshed.

Wars have been waged in the name of religion in Mexico for all recorded time. When Cortez, the Spanish conquistador, came here 400 years ago he found native tribes fighting each other both for territorial aggrandizement and for the glory of their various pagan gods. The Spaniards wiped out all these religions and substituted Catholicism. During subsequent centuries, Catholic church became so tremendously rich and powerful in Mexico. When Mexico won independence from Spain in 1821 the church is said to have owned one-fourth of Mexico's wealth. Opposition to that wealth and power, long smouldering, was fanned and fostered under independence beginning in 1855, the governments of the Mexican republic began to curb the power of the church by laws and decrees and to confiscate its property. This caused the Reform war, a struggle between clericals and liberals, the latter supporting the governments anti-Catholic policy. The liberals won and the church in Mexico has never regained its previous power or been able to retain its former wealth.

The constitution of 1857 and the laws and degrees of the Reform war period declared all church property confiscated for the benefit of the state, curbed the activity of the church and its orders and placed strict limitations upon the activities of priests, nuns and clericals. Subsequent constitutions were reaffirmed these policies although there have been periods when enforcement was lax or lapsed. The 1917 constitution which is the present organic law specifically proclaimed them and the administrations of President Obregon and Calles have from time to time enforced various of these religious limitations. Beginning about six months ago the Cales government has been very active in such enforcements.

During these years of controversy the governments have expelled from Mexico Papal Nuncios, Catholic bishops, priests and nuns, have seized and sold church property, closed Catholic churches, convents and schools. As a result, there was organized in 1925 the Schismatic church, or Mexican Catholic church, which declares itself separate and independent of the Roman church, and denies the Pope's authority. Most Mexicans, however, continue to be members of the Roman Catholic church.

This apparent anomaly of an anti-Catholic government policy being tolerated in a country where most persons are Catholics is difficult to explain, or even to theorize about, without entering the field of controversy. Few of the presidents or government leaders of Mexico, since independence, have continued in adult life to be in practice devoted Catholics. Although as children they may have been taken into the church. Most of them have indicated they believed the Catholic church had attained a power, material and political, too great for the good of Mexico.

One explanation given of the toleration of an anti-Catholic policy on the part of those in political power is that Mexico is largely populated by rural Indians utterly ignorant of world affairs. With unshakable intensity they adhere to the devotions and ceremonials of the Catholic church. They are unswervingly loyal to that church—but to them the church means just their village place of worship. Rome is not even a name to most of them. As long as the government does not close their local church, does not interfere with their own individual devotions, they know little and care less what the government is doing. Opposition in the cities alone, is not strong enough to swerve the government, according to this theory.

OBITUARY

Mrs. A. Montgomery Ward

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP)—Mrs. A. Montgomery Ward, widow of Chicago's pioneer mail order merchant and widely known for her philanthropies which amounted her into the millions of dollars, died here today, another victim of the terrific heat which last week overspread the middle and farwest. She would have been 70 years old this month.

Mrs. Ward returned here from Pasadena, Calif., only last night. She chose the southern route to avoid the higher altitudes of the northern route, but by so doing, encountered excessive heat which cost her her life.

"MA" FERGUSON TO RESIGN AS GOVERNOR OF TEXAS

Concedes Her Defeat by Moody in Saturday's Primary—Has Called a Special Session for September 13—To Insist That Certain Matters be Disposed of Before Resigning—Announcement Made After Returns Assured Moody of a Majority.

AUSTIN, Texas, July 26.—(AP)—The political fortunes which raised Mrs. Miriam Amanda Ferguson from a quiet home in Temple, Texas, to the governorship are soon to turn her footsteps back to domestic life.

Governor Ferguson announced late today she would resign as a result of Saturday's primary in which Attorney General Dan Moody led her by more than 100,000 votes. She had promised to resign if Moody beat her one vote, and he had promised to resign if she led him by 25,000 votes.

Moody will be the next governor of Texas, nomination in the democratic ticket being equivalent to election.

Simultaneously with her resignation announcement, which also carried with it withdrawal from any possible primary run-off with Moody, Governor Ferguson called a special session of the legislature to meet September 13 to validate Texas district road bonds and to "investigate any department or the state government that the legislature may see fit to investigate."

Her resignation will be effective just as soon as this special session has disposed of these matters, the governor announced. She said she hoped to retire from office not later than November 1.

"I have determined that the lead of the opposition is so decisive that I would be doing violence to my own interests as well as to the interests of the people were I to further insist upon my candidacy" said her statement. "And I have no desire to further embroil the people in another campaign."

If the legislature acts with dispatch, Mrs. Ferguson will step out of office about 21 months after the people raised her to that position with an overwhelming vote. The usual custom of giving the incumbent a second term in this state is to be denied the first woman governor.

The governor's announcements came as Moody's totals continued to creep up with each tabulation of election returns and as it became evident that the "back country" vote, usually conceded to favor the Fergusons, could not wipe out his majority. When Mrs. Ferguson announced her forthcoming resignation, Moody had a majority over all gubernatorial candidates of 2,182. His vote then was more than 116,000 over Mrs. Ferguson's.

Prior to her decision, the governor conferred with her husband James E. Ferguson, who had done most of her campaigning, and their friends, one of whom was Joseph Weldon Baily of Dallas, former United States senator and staunch supporter. The validation of Texas Road bonds, which had been declared invalid by the United Supreme court in the celebrated Archer county case, was one of the principal issues in the primary of the legislature to validate these bonds. Governor Ferguson replied the demand was a political move, and in a speech several weeks ago at Wichita Falls, Mr. Ferguson declared that only the people of the Road district involved could validate the bonds.

While the Archer county bonds total about $90,000, there are about $100,000,000 worth of bonds affected by the supreme court decision.

Mrs. Ferguson promised during the campaign, however, that she would call a special session soon after the election.

The man who will succeed Mrs. Ferguson upon her resignation is Lieut. Gov. Barry Miller, an attorney of Dallas and a Ferguson supporter. Miller was an opponent of Ferguson, during the impeachment trial of 1917 when James E. Ferguson was stripped of his governorship by a vote of the state senate and placed under a ban never to hold public office again in Texas. But when Miller began his campaign for lieutenant governor two years ago, he found that both he and the Fergusons were fighting the Ku Klux klan and their political fortunes naturally joined.

With Attorney General Moody's election in November a foregone conclusion, he will succeed to the governorship January 18, next.

Mrs. Ferguson said she had hoped to be relieved from office prior to Nov. 8. "But in justice to myself and to my friends who have elected me, as well as the completion of unfinished departmental matters I will not resign until the incompleted matters of the office are disposed of," she said. A phrase in the governor's proclamation calling the legislature referring to investigation of "any department of state," is believed to have significance only as it might apply to the State highway department, alleged irregularities in which were the initial cause of Moody entering the campaign. The department has been repeatedly attacked. Two members of the commission resigned when the American Road company confessed judgment for $600,000 in the attorney general's suit to recover alleged "unconscionable profits", and Moody centered his campaign attack on high affairs.

Moody would make no statement early tonight. He is the youngest man ever to be nominated for governor in Texas. He is 33. His vote as attorney general two years ago was the largest ever given a Texas office seeker, and it is believed his vote in this primary is one of the largest ever recorded in a primary.

BLUSH OF YOUTH TAKEN AS AN INDICATION OF GUILT

MUNICH, Bavaria, July 26.—(AP)—Blushing when spoken to without introduction by a good-looking girl on the street is not sufficient evidence to show guilt of a crime on the part of an unsophisticated young man, the Munich court of appeals has ruled.

Lola Springer, a typist out shopping for her employer, lost a 50-mark bill. Retracing her steps she accosted Emil Junge, the first person she happened to meet, and asked him whether he had found the money. Junge stammered that he had not. His face reddened. So Lola had him arrested.

Junge maintained that he had not found any money. He blushed, he said, because he was naturally a shy boy. But the municipal court fined him 100 marks. Junge's counsel appealed.

The higher court in dismissing the case held that while blushing nowadays is a rare phenomenon and might arouse suspicion, it is not as yet accepted as legal evidence of guilt.

All of the counts embodied in the indictment charged Green with the embezzlement of government property.

Federal Judge Frank H. Kerrigan, who accepted the jury's return, fixed theb all at $5,000. The amount immediately was posted by a representative of a bonding company.

The parents of the boy and girl shielded them from interviewers after their arival here. Both added that they would not be happy until they were permitted to marry.

GIVES DETAILS OF PLANE STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

BERLIN, July 26—(AP)—A graphic story has been told by a dying man of an airplane being struck by lightning in a great storm and its fall to the earth. The plane carrying four passengers fromt he Island of Borkum to Norderney, in the North Sea, encountered a storm Saturday night and fell in flames on Island of Juist, which lies between the other two.

The pilot and three passengers, including a woman, were killed outright, and the sole survivor, a manufacturer, was seriously injured. He died soon afterward in the hospital, but was able before his death to give an account of the tragedy.

"The machine was flying at a height of 1,000 feet when the storm broken," he said. "Thick clouds encircled us, while lightning flashed incessantly and torrents of rain tossed the machine in all directions.

"Suddenly we were blinded by a dazzling flash. A blast of heat and suffocating smoke rendered us all unconscious. The airplane began to drop with increasing rapidity. Horror-stricken, we seized the handstraps. Everything seemed to happen in a few seconds. I remember just about the moment we struck the ground. I attempted to jump, and I only recovered by senses in the hands of the doctors."

MISS CLIFFORD APPEALS FROM $25 FINE AND COSTS

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 26—Miss Annie B. Clifford of South Windham took an appeal to the superior court this morning from a fine of $25 and costs, amounting to $34.15 imposed in police court, when she was convicted on a charge of reckless driving. She had pleaded not guilty. A bond of $100 was furnished by J. E. Sullivan. The case results from a collision of her automobile Saturday night with a buggy driven by Howard Palmer, 70, of North Franklin. Palmer, limping and with a bandaged forearm and left hand, was the principal witness for the state. He said that he had his wagon to the extreme right of the road when it was struck, opposite the Ellsworth filling station on the South Windham road. He hung to the reins and was dragged some distance when the horse ran away. The buggy was partly turned over and damaged. He had required medical attention.

Constable Alfred P. Abbe who made the arrest, said that Miss Clifford's car, which was traveling in the same direction as the buggy, had run 102 feet after the collision. The road is straight and there was no other vehicles coming from either direction.

Horace Smith said he heard the crash, saw Mr. Palmer being dragged, and the automobile continue quite a distance before coming to a stop.

Miss Clifford contended that there were two or more cars coming from both directions. One machine was practically in the middle of the road coming from the opposite direction. She pulled to the right to allow the car to pass and did not see the buggy until her car crashed into it. She was considerably excited and brought the car to a stop as soon as she could. She did not notice the lighted lantern which Palmer testified he hold out on the left side of the buggy. Judge Foss then announced his decision.

BOTTLES, JUG, SPLITS, ADJUDGED NOT UNLAWFUL

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 26—Giving his opinion that three pint bottles of alcohol and a quantity of alcohol splits in a jug did not constitute a violation of the liquor for transportation or possession of liquor with intent to sell, Judge Foss found William C. Barker, 61, of 30 High street, South Manchester, not guilty, when the accused was in the police court Monday morning. Barker was arrested by Officer Montie on Walnut street here shortly after one o'clock Sunday morning. The jug, bottles and a funnel were found in his car and the conclusion was reached that he had been peddling liquor at some dance hall. No evidence of a sale could be introduced, however, and the quantity of liquor carried was insufficient for a conviction for illegal transportation. Barker said that he had been attending a dance with friends. Some of them borrowed his car and made a trip to Bolton, returning with the liquor. He then came to this city in the machine without knowing that the car contained liquor. He was changing a tire when accosted by the officer and he claimed that he had not been doing the driving. He said the driver was a friend named Stevens who was in a restaurant while the tire was being adjusted. The youth was represented by Attorney W. J. Shea, of South Manchester.

Frank Marcelle and his son-in-law, Daniel Mauckese, of Windham Road, when charged in police court Monday morning with breach of the peace pleaded not guilty. Samuel Spector and his son, Morris Spector, Quarry street junkmen, were the complainants, testifying that the trouble started when Mauckese demanded his money back on a second-hand automobile fly wheel he had purchased from them. Two dollars was returned and then Mauckese struck Morris Spector. Stanley Plante, a neighbor, said he saw the money being returned and then Mauckese struck Spector.

Mauckese said that his father-in-law was not mixed up in the affair at all and Marsell was discharged. Judge Foss found Mauckese guilty and imposed a fine of $5 and costs, amounting to $19.15 which was paid. A counter-complaint filed Sunday night against the Spectors by Marselle and Mauckese was not taken up.

Benjamin Strong Bliss, 83, died at his home in Storrs early Monday morning after a long period of illness. He was a farmer and had been a resident of Storrs for many years. He was born in Oswego, N. In court Monday morning he pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced to 30 days at the county jail.

Hermidas Ferner pleaded guilty to intoxication when presented in the police court Monday morning and was fined $10 and costs, total of $17.15. The police arrest Ferner and three companions out of a room in the Corporation Boarding House but the accused waited outside to argue the matter.

A request for a continuance of their cases was granted in court Monday to Maurice Duplesse and Armand Duplease, brothers, charged with breach of the peace. The case was set for next Friday and bonds of $100 each named. The men were arrested by Officer Marrotte late Sunday night.

BEAUTIES OF BEACH POND BEING RECOGNIZED

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, July 26—Many more Jewett City people are visiting Beach pond this summer some just for the day, and others for longer times than during any previous season. It is as picturesque a sheet of water as can be imagined. Most of its northern and southern shores are densely wooded with heavy timber, principally oak, while some of its eastern shore is bordered with a thick fringe of black alder, other portions being heavily rock-bound. The water is clear and cold and having an analysis free from objectionable mineral and vegetable matter, it would be and may yet become a valuable water supply.

Previous to the building of the dam at its outlet, by the Briggs company, the pond was not so deep as it is today, and nearly all the southern and western shores, were a beach of fine white sand. Hence its name, although an authentic story tells of its having been named Paucamac by Connecticut's early Indian tribes. The pond has an area of about two and one half square miles. It is about three miles from Hope Valley, eleven from Jewett City, four from Voluntown, 16 from Westerly and 12 miles from Norwich. Sunday there were over 200 bathers in the clear water at the natural beach. All available parking space was occupied by those who had come to fish, swim or enjoy other features of the lake's surpassing beauty.

Although it was sometime after the Briggs cottages were built, yet F. H. Gilbert, might be said to be among the pioneers, who, recognizing the rugged beauty, built permanent bungalows and summer homes. Today there are 25 cottages, including the Finn colony and the Providence, Briggs and New Bedford sections. Camp Tippecan, the Boy Scout summer quarters, has added its attraction. Mr. Gilbert is now constructing an electric light plant at a convenient point for the residences. A part of Lake Paucamac, for so it should be called, is in the town of Voluntown in the state of Connecticut; the state line crosses the eastern end diagonally, leaving the other part in the town of Exeter, Washington county, R. I.

A little more to the eastward it is crossed by the historic ten rod road, which the state of Rhode Island once voted should be laid out ten rods wide. The locality first began to be famous close to 75 years ago, when each year, on the last Friday in June; farmers from all the country round, congregated at Beach pond to get a supply of the clean hard white sand on the beach, which they attached to a suitable stick with tallow and hard soap, thus making a sort of primitive rifle with which they used to whet their scythes. While gathered here in the afternoon, horse racing helped to fill out the pleasures of the day. It is said that many a sturdy, steady farm horse has surprised even himself by a forty clip, or better. Along in the late 90's Ekonk grange was accustomed to hold picnics at Beach pond and they became of great numbers and much importance. There were often 4,000 to 5,000 people there from all over Rhode Island and from New London and Windham counties in Connecticut.

It is told that if one removed the elephant and other wild beasts from Barnum's circus, a fair idea will be had of what these picnics were. An old fashioned R. I. clam bake would be "got up," at which Representative Charles A. Russell and the unwashed native, would eat their fill setting side by side on the ground. There was always speech making at which time some aspiring candidate would mount a really bedecked platform and harangue the crowd on the tariff, or other issue. At that time it was said the real natives were few and possessing an outstanding affinity for plug tobacco and hard cider.

A party of Standard Oil Co. employes from New London were week end guests of William Symington and Everett H. Hiscox, Jr., at Camp Sunnybrook, one of the Quinebaug camps. A steak supper cooked by "Dug" Rathbun ably assisted by "Deacon" Haven, was one of the enjoyable features of the outing. The party included E. E. Chapman, M. B. Haven, J. W. Mace, E. P. Rathbun, A. Krauth, C. C. Clark, D. C. Beaney, R. Bray, J. Haynes, H. Holmes, Mr. Stephenson, O. A. Foote. The use of Gordon Willis' bungalow was also given the men, which aded to the pleasure of the outing.

George Comager was in Andover, Conn., Saturday to attend the funeral of his aunt, Samantha Wells, R. N. Althea Comager of this place, over 90 years old, now a visitor with her daughter, Miss Belle Comager, of Stafford Springs, and Samantha Wells, were half-sisters. Of the local family, only George and his sister, Belle, were able to attend.

ROBERT T. LINCOLN DIED WHILE ASLEEP

mother, he registered at the Equinox House. It was said that the president hoped to come here for a rest but he never was able to make the trip owing to the war. After various visits, Robert Lincoln bought several hundred acres of mountain and valley land in 1902 and developed the estate that he had made his summer home ever since.

Mr. Lincoln was an enthusiastic amateur astronomer and passed many hours in the observatory thich he built on his estate. The property included gardens, lawns and woodland.

A simple funeral service will be held at the summer home here on Wednesday. Members of the family said it would be distinctly private. The body will be placed in the vault at Dellwood cemetery, Manchester and later will be taken to Springfield, Ill., for interment in the family tomb.

Fate and circumstance so united that Robert Todd Lincoln, last of the great emancipator's immediate family to bear the name, was present at the assassination of two American presidents and within sound of the shots that mortally wounded a third.

When young Lincoln was graduated from Harvard in 1864, his father granted his request to enter the army. As a captain and member of General Grant's staff, he witnessed the fall of Petersburgh and the surrender of General Lee at Appomattox.

Hurrying to Washington, the captain arrived there on April 14 and gave his father the first definite news of the surrender. On the evening of the same day, he was in Ford's theater when John Wilkes Booth shot and fatally wounded the president.

Later in life, Lincoln, although adverse to holding public office, became secretary of war in President Garfield's cabinet. He was supposed to accompany the chief executive on a trip to the New England states, July 2, 1881, but a last minute development prevented. He went to the station to explain, arriving just as Guiteau shot Garfield.

Lincoln was among the many prominent men invited to the Buffalo exposition in 1901 and was nearby, September 6, when Leon Czolosz, an anarchist, fired twice at President William McKinley from close range, one of the bullets causing the executive's death eight days later.

Robert was Abraham Lincoln's first child, born August 1, 1843 in Springfield, Ill. He not only was the eldest of five children, but he outlived them all. Before attending Harvard, he was a student in the University of Illinois and Phillips Academy, Exeter, N. H.

Inheriting virtually none of the physical characteristics of his father, Lincoln also was widely different in other respects. He preferred the practice of law to politics and the glamor of public office and finally became head of the Pullman company after being its counsilor for many years.

Besides serving in Garfield's cabinet, however, Lincoln was minister to Great Britain four years under President Harison. Previously, he had been mentioned for the presidency, but discouraged efforts in his behalf.

His retiring nature sometimes made it appear to many that he was taciturn, but his close friends described him as a "warm-hearted, lovable, charming gentlemen." He was a delightful conversationalist, a great reconteur and if he knew his companions well, he would talk without reserve.

On september 24, 1868, he married Miss Mary Harlan, daughter of James Harlan, who served as senator from Iowa. Three children were born in them, two girls and a boy, Jack Lincoln, who died while attending school in France.

The murder of his father threw upon Lincoln the management of affairs of the family. After the funeral he left Washington with his mother and went to Chicago, as he felt the necessity of entering immediately upon a business career. He had studied law and was admited to membership in a leading law firm of Chicago, resigning his army commission.

Lincoln continued the practice of law until he was called to Washington by President Garfield, in 1881, to be secretary of war. He served in this position four years under President Garfield, and President Arthur and then returned to his profession.

In 1830, Lincoln was elected delegate to the republican national convention of that year, but his place in the convention hall was filled by Stephen A. Douglas, Jr. Lincoln was mentioned for the presidency and received a few votes for the nomination. In the campaign that followed he was chosen a presidential elector for Illinois.

Appointed United States minister to Great Britain by President Harrison in 1889, he served until 1893, when he returned to his home in Chicago.

Upon the death of George M. Pullman, founder of the Pullman company, Lincoln was chosen president. He held this position until 1906 when he retired to become chairman of the board of directors.

While actively engaged as president of the company, Lincoln, for recreational purposes, indulged in the working out of algebraic equations. He also was an amateur astronomer, and, when he gave up his Chicago residence in 1910, he had a thoroughly equipped observatory in his home in Manchester, Vt.

He also was a devotee of golf and told his friends the game had saved his life many years ago when he lost his health.

The Manchester place was conducted along the lines of an estate of an English gentleman. Lincoln spent his summers there and went to Washington for the winter. He seldom appeared however, at public functions in the latter city.

CARRIED HER HOOCH IN HOT WATER BOTTLES

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 26.—Mrs. Rita Trunken, 50, wife of Peter Trunken, Butlertown, Flanders, was arrested by Constable Frank Peabody, of the Waterford constabulary this morning, charged with transportation of liquor, also to maintaining a still at her home. She was arraigned before Judge Frederick Dimmock in the Waterford town court this evening, but the case was not tried, being continued to Friday night next. Mrs. Trunken was seen to leave her home in an automobile by Constable Peabody, who held up the car and made search of it as he believed that Mrs. Trunken was violating the law. No liquor was found, but there was a strong odor of alcohol. Constable Peabody finally searched Mrs. Trunken and found a novel method of transporting, for Mrs. Trunken had four one-quart hot water bottles containing the hooch about her person. Two of the bottles were suspended from the neck to the front of the body and the other two were attached to her legs. A search warrant was secured and a search of the Trunken house made with the result that the still, a quantity of home-made whiskey and mash was found. Mrs. Trunken was brought to the New London police station and made a prisoner until her presentation in court this evening.

Mrs. Marion Cleveland Bell, daughter of the late President Grover Cleveland, was married at Tamworth, N. J., to John Harlan Amen, son of the late Harlan Page Amen, former principal of Phillips Exeter Academy.

EXPERIENCE OF WESTERN GIRL

Found Cannery Work Too Tiring

The fertile valleys of Oregon help to supply the tables of America. This is possible thru the magic of the humble tin can.

In one of the canning establishments, Julia Schmidt was employed. It was complicated work because she did sealing and other parts of the work. It was strenuous work and she was not a strong girl. Often she forced herself to work when she was hardly able to sit at her machine. At times she would have to stay at home for she was so weak she could hardly walk. For five years she was in this weakened condition.

She tried various medicines. At last, a friend of hers spoke of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Miss Schmidt gave it a trial.

"Everyone says I am a healthier and stronger girl," she writes. "I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to all my friends who tell me how they suffer and I am willing to answer letters from women asking about it." Julia Schmidt's address is 852 North Front St., Salem, Oregon. For sale by all druggists.

DEFOREST APPEAL MAY TEST LAKE BATHING RIGHTS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 26.—An appeal which Arthur DeForest of Danielson has taken from a fine of $1 and actual costs, imposed upon him in the Killingly town court by Judge W. Fenner Woodward, is regarded by many as forecasting a test case of the right of persons to bathe in Alexander's lake.

DeForest, a World war veteran and a former member of the Danielson borough police, was ordered into court by State Officer Ross V. Urquhart, to answer to a chrage of violating a statute forbidding bathing in bodies of water in use as reservoirs. It has come to light that state officers have been keeping watch of the lake from time to time to apprehend anyone found bathing there, for it is the reservoir supplying water to the village of Goodyear, with nearly 1,000 residents.

It will be recalled that there has been, recently, some demand for bathing privileges at the lake, as there also has been in other years, and that the granting of any such concession is most strenuously opposed by the Goodyear Mills, Inc., owners of the Williamsville Water company.

Only a nominal fine was imposed in the DeForest case in the town court and it now appears that the matter will be before the superior court in due time for consideration with the possibility it may eventually find its way before the supreme court of errors for decision. It is held by the Killingly town court that DeForest's bathing in the lake was a clear violation, or at least a desire to ascertain what the higher courts of the state will say about the matter, is indicated by the appeal. Mr. DeForest has retained Attorney J. F. Carpenter of Putnam as his counsel.

A similar controversy arose a few seasons ago over the matter of people bathing in Roseland lake, from which water for the city of Putnam comes. The Roseland lake case was clearly intended as a test case, but it was dropped before it got into the higher courts and nothing more has been heard about it. Meanwhile bathing continues at Roseland lake, the land surrounding it being owned by private interests.

Whatever becomes of the appeal in the DeForest case, it will not be decided during the present outdoor bathing season, as the superior court will not be in session sufficiently early and there is always the possibility of taking it up to the supreme court. Meanwhile thosew ho attempt to bathe in Alexander's lake will be liable to arrest and presentation in court.

Upon the roofing structure built on the north wing at the high school the past week boarding was being put in place Monday and likely by the end of the present week the roof over this wing will be ready for the final roofing work to be done upon it. It is hoped to have this wing ready for occupancy when the new school year opens in September.

Attorney and Mrs. Arthur G. Bill left Monday morning for a ten days' stay at Silver Bay on Lake George. During the absence of Mr. Bill, who is the prosecuting attorney of the Killingly town court, Attorney Harry E. Back will act as prosecutor pro tem. Mr. Back took up his court duties Monday morning, when there were some matters awaiting attention.

Probably another fortnight will elapse before there is any further action in probing the Raymond Wetherbee-Agnes Pytka case. Weatherbee remains at Brooklyn jail without bail and Miss Pytka is also held surveillence. Her recovery has not been as rapid as it was indicated at one time it might be. They are to be asked to tell Coroner Arthur G. Bill all they know about the circumstances leading to the death of Miss Pytka's new-born baby, whose body was found in a river in the town of Thompson. As Coroner Bill left Monday for a vacation trip, his finding in the case will likely be deferred for at least two weeks.

Thousands of dollars are represented on principle business streets of building permits granted during the past week in July by Westerly Inspector Louis J. Rossi. Substantial buildings or commercial and office type are included in the blocks to be erected on principle business streets of Westerly. The Nardone building, corner of High and Canal streets is already well under way in that a large amount of excavation work for a basement has already been completed. A good indication of sustained activity in the building industry in this state is the week's total of 397 permits issued during the past week in the building costs totaled $1,060,125, slightmercial Record. The week's total of permits issued compares with 326 for the same week of 1925. NEW LONDON

With 15 building permits issued by the council Monday night a slight increase in the number was noted over those of the past two weeks. Four applications were made and granted for the construction of dwellings, one for a gas station, one for a garage, one for a greenhouse and the rest for minor additions or alterations.

A review of the building situation during the past three months shows conditions to be about normal with a total of 24 permits being granted for the construction of dwellings. This is an average of two a week and represents an estimated outlay of about $150,000.

Thirty-seven permits have been issued during the past three months for the construction of garages. Most of the new garages are for private use of the one and two car variety in various constructions while a few are for commercial purposes. Estimating the average cost to be $500, which is extremely conservative, the new garages will represent an outlay of $18,500.

Altogether there have been 133 permits granted during the past three months. Besides those for dwellings and garages there are 81 permits that have been granted mostly for alterations and additions of more or less significance.

Work has been started on a two story frame dwelling for H. R. Griswold at Connecticut and Garfield avenues. The new house will be 27 by 40 and of modern design from plans by the builder. When complete the house is estimated to cost $10,000.

Bids will be received soon for the addition to the third district school of Groton, from which $2,500 recently was appropriated. The addition will be 24 by 20 and will approximately double the present capacity of the school.

Ralph E. Barry of New York has plans for a cottage to be built on a tract of land recently purchased in Pequot avenue through the agency of Hardwick and Walter. Mr. Barry now is receiving bids for the new cottage, which will be of frame construction with six rooms.

To the MAN who never looks under the hood

YOU are the man who thinks of his car solely as transportation. A convenient means of getting from here to there and back. You expect the most service from your car, with the least care, without fuss, with economy. And you have a right to expect such service—provided you remember these few facts:

Fact 1—Heat and friction cause 75% of all motor repairs.

Fact 2—Heat and friction can only be overcome by the motor oil you use.

Fact 3—Motor oil guards your motor from heat and friction by forming a thin film over vital parts.

Fact 4—The film of ordinary oil far too often fails.

Fact 5—The film of one oil, Veedol, is a "film of protection," thin as tissue, smooth as silk, tough as steel. A film that masters deadly heat and friction and keeps a motor always sweet-running and free from repairs.

Fact 6—You can get Veedol wherever you see the familiar orange and black Veedol sign. Ask for Veedol by name.

If the "man who never looks under the hood" will always remember Fact 6 when he buys oil, he'll rarely need to look under the hood.

TESTING GAS STATIONS

In these days when so much money is being spent at gas pumps one cannot help wondering how frequently the situation disclosed at Washington is repeated elsewhere. In the national capital an inspection of 55 gasoline stations has recently been made with the result that it was found that 32 of them were delivering short measure to the customer. The amount ranged from a few ounces "due to faulty operation of the pumps, failure to properly drain the hose and a too speedy shutting off the valve, to a full gallon."

To the individual, except in the case where he was being taxed for five and only given four gallons, the shortage amounted to little but in the aggregate it meant much to the stations.

Just how much of the shortage is the result of international plans is difficult to say. In most cases the amount is so small that one would hardly be willing to deliberately take changes of being caught for what is at stake, but in view of the fact that half of the stations inspected in Washington showed the customer getting a shortage it indicates not only the need of close and frequent inspections, but the testing out of the pump deliveries each day by the owners of the stations themselves.

This is a condition which rests upon the inspectors of weights and measures, but no station can afford to engage in a practice that will permit it to be branded with the charge of giving short measure, for it is difficult to explain what is done in that way even though it may be accidental. Any station can much better afford to give a few ounces over than a few ounces less than the gallons paid for. The motorist who gets a bad impression is no longer a customer and the withholding of his trade from any particular station is a bad advertisement.

Pumps are supposed to be accurate. The buyer has to rely thereon, and in fact probably pays only passing attention to the automatic registering device other than to see that the quantity he wants is indicated. Whether he actually gets what he pays for he has no way of knowing. He trusts in honest treatment and it is only right that he should be fully protected therein.

FIGHTING CRIME

In the fight against crime it is not to be supposed that victory is going to be gained solely by curbing the small arms. That is one method of attack which gives promise of good results but it will need to be reinforced by equally effective work in other directions.

When the national crime commission turns its heavy artillery on the pistol used by the criminal it nevertheless tackles a big job. It involves a nationwide fight and possibly more than that as legislation aimed at the same target has already disclosed.

The desirability of keeping pistols out of the hands of the criminally inclined is admirable. Accomplishing it is something different. In many of the states there are laws at the present time restricting the sale of small arms, requiring permits for those possessing them and obligating dealers to keep a record of sales and the names of those to whom such goods are sold. The idea is good as far as it goes, but it fails to keep guns out of the hands of the criminals.

In New York a heavy penality is attached to the possession of small arms without a permit, but here again the law operates more against the law abiding citizens who seeks to protect his household than against the criminal who snaps his finger at the law, is able to get a fake permit or can buy his gun in some other state or has been able to get it through the mail.

Help has even been given by certain mail order houses which have refused to sell pistols any more. Suggestion has been made to the national crime commission that high taxes should be placed on pistols, a system for registering their sale and the restriction of sale to police, army and navy officers. That is about the most drastic plan, short of prohibition of manufacture, that has been urged. It of course has its possibilities of success, but after the pistol is curbed there is still going to be plenty to do in the curbing of crime, but the harder the fight the greater the effort that needs to be put forth.

FOREST INCENDIARISM

Even if the work of the incendiary could be checked there would still be forest and other fires but it has been shown by statistics kept concerning the former that more than half of the fires are caused by the human agent and could be prevented. That tells a story which should cause all those who have anything to do with woodlands, whether tramping through them, working in them or motoring over the highways, to stop and consider what responsibility rests upon them to do their part in this preventive work.

Throughout some of the western states huge losses have been recently sustained. Government forest reservations have experienced some of their worst fires in the state of California and in the opinion of those who know the situation the torch of the incendiary has been busy in many and remote sections, so much so that fires have been started where it was most difficult to reach and fight them and thus where losses would be the heaviest.

When such fires are started, or even when they are kindled with no intention of being allowed to spread and cause destruction, it means that serious inroads are being made into the timber supply of the country. It means not only are reserves being seriously depleted but tremendous wastes are being caused.

The difficulties involved in catching such firebugs can be appreciated, but there is an invaluable service which the individual can render in the exercises of greater care while in the forest territory to see that fires are actually prevented instead of started. At that time one person can do what it is impossible for hundreds to accomplish a little later.

Fires which are started through carelessness or by accident are bad enough but when it is found that they are deliberately set for some ulterior purpose too thorough efforts cannot be made to discover those responsible and speedily bring them to justice. Those engaged in such destruction cannot feel the effects of the proper penalty a bit too soon.

MOODY SCORES

As the tabulation of figures in the Texas primary continues the demands of the people of that state are more and more emphatic for a change. By giving, as it now seems, a majority to Moody over all the other candidates, the voters have determined the next governor, for such a majority will establish him as the candidate of the democratic party and such a nomination in Texas means election. Likewise it means a repudiation of the policies and methods of the Ferguson regime, predicted as long ago as when the figures showed Mrs. Ferguson to have been chosen as governor a year and a half ago.

The primary contest has been a hotly fought one with the two leading candidates promising to resign from office in case the opponent got more votes. Mrs. Ferguson was so confident that she would win that she agreed to step down and out if Moody should get one more vote in the primary than she did, while Moody promised to leave the attorney generalship if she got 25,000 more than he did. How the electorate felt about the situation in Texas as the result of the Ferguson term is shown by Moody's big vote.

Texas has disclosed its disgust and taken the remedy into its own hands. The governor can do nothing else than carry out her promise, and it is apparently what the people want. They are sick and tired of the conditions which have been thrust upon them and their experience as the result of the first woman governor is not one that encourages the belief that another experiment of that kind will be made right away. It has been a costly but enlightening lesson for Texas.

PROHIBITION ABOUT BUFFALO

One of the results of prohibition is pointedly illustrated by the death of 30 persons in and near Buffalo and Lockport, N. Y., from the drinking of liquor that contained wood alcohol and the subsequent closing of 20 soft drink stands at which such beverages were obtained.

The condition equals, if not exceeds, that which developed in the Connecticut valley one Christmas following the enforcement of the dry law when many were sent into eternity through indulgence of similar beverages.

It is self apparent that those persons who lost their lives might have been living today had they refrained from indulging in such concoctions and taking chances with the kind of liquor, but the outstanding fact is, nevertheless, that liquor, whether it means a quick or slow death, is obtainable, that the demand for it is large and the supply is adequate. Those with the money to buy are able to get it and they must take the chances of living to tell their friends about the fine stuff they had of furnishing business for the undertaker.

When it is necessary to close soft drink parlors in order to prevent the dispensing of liquor, some of which is known to be poison, it discloses a sad situation. This indicates that the soft drink stands are even worse than the saloons used to be.

Does this condition prevail just about Buffalo, either as to the extensive manner in which such beverages are being dispensed, or as to the character of the beverages that are being served, or is that situation characteristic of prohibition conditions elsewhere?

EFFIE GETS WOUND UP

A group of girls who work in the basement dress section are gathering at the foolish morning hour when business mistakenly begins, and Effie, a black-haired, bobbed sliver of a girl, is addressing her especial chum Cora, who is 20 pounds overweight and lamentably fond of ice cream, cake, pie, cream and potatoes.

Effie—"I thought I never in the wide world would get here this morning—uh huh, Clarence and me were out. You need't say 'as usual,' Cora Jones, either! I have plenty of boy friends, and Clarence is merely one of them, and I guess at my age and with my looks—that is, I'm far too young to tie myself down to just a clerk, when, goodness knows, if I wait something marvelous may happen! I saw a movie about that t'other night—jes'nt? No, this is the dress section and the china is five aisles over and turn left. Dumbbell! Trying to buy cups and saucers among else 38s new-spring-chiffon-models!"

Cora (mechanically going through the stock on the rack)—Say, I heard that if you eat only a tomato and a lamb chop for a month you can lose—"

Effie—"I'll say you would! They'd be placing lilies in your crossed hands; don't be foolish, girlie! This movie I was telling you about had the loveliest heroine who was poor an' oppressed and worked for her liv—Yes'm? Oh, sure, these full styles are becoming when you're stout? And you're not really fat, you know, just sort of bulgy here and there—sure, take in right in there and slip it on and I'll be in! As I was saying, this movie that Clarence and me—Yes'm? Why, madam, these full styles are exactly what you want to wear! You see, you're sort of thin and tall and they'd hide—why, of course, I wasn't trying to be insulting! I was just pointing out—well, I had no intention—if you want to report me you'll hafta go to Mr. Schultz in the next room! Good night! Didja see that old crowbait, Cora, and me trying to be just as nice and courteous to her? She hasn't got brains enough to find Schults, so I should worry!

"What? In there? Oh, my grief, if I didn't forget the fat woman who was trying on! Why, I declare, you've got it on and it looks as though it was made for you, honest! Cora, come look at this! Isn't it slenderizing with all those plaits! Oh, yes, madam, when you wear it a few times that bulge will sort of shake down and disappear. You let me send it on home for you and see if your husband doesn't think it's the best-looking dress you've had! Oh, yes, it'll be delivered tomorrow!

"Yes'm? No, everything is comin' in full like these—yes, they're short, but why not be in style and wear 'em short? Now, if you'd turn up about six inches of that skirt you have on you've no idea of the change it would make! Take off ten years with your nice legs—no'm, I wasn't trying to be fresh. * * * Golly, wasn't she spittin' fire, Cora? You'd think legs was actually something queer!

"No, not that it's any of your business, Cora Jones, and I have no idea why you think you have any right to ask, but Clarence has not proposed to me yet! Not that I mean I expect him to, or anything, us being just good friends and not seeing so much of each other—well, it's only four times this week we've gone out to dance! Don't you think he has swell hair? And he stands so sort of straight and different, and—the idea, of course I'm not crazy about him! My ideal is a far handsomer, sadder man, more like that one we saw in the movie, sort of as though he had suffered and didn't believe any more in women! Yes'm, these are exactly the style you otta wear—oh, for your aunt in Decatur? Well, I know she'd be just wild about this terra-cotta model with the gilt buttons! Why, lotsa ladies of 70 wear terra cotta, yessum! Well, everything's right there, just look around and mebbe—ain't women the limit, Cora? Say, it's time for lunch, and I wants tell you what Clarence said when we was coming home las' night—he looked so earnest and sort of noble—"

Cora—"Let's go to the XZ tearoom. They have swell meringue butterscotch pie and choclut cake. What'd he say, Effie, tell me!"

Effie (as they pass out of hearing, heads close together)—"He said—now I'm not jioshing, Cora, he said—"—Exchange.

AS OTHERS SEE IT

The Country Churches

(Salem News)

A news report from Ohio states that more than 1000 churches in the rural districts of that state have been abandoned, and the people are feeling that something rather radical needs to be done about it. All through northern New England also, the abandoned church is a familiar sight and a pathetic object. One thinks of the good people who used to find inspiration there, of the many helpful and uplifting thoughts there uttered. If one were to canvass the families that once supported these churches, it would be found that most of them are scattered. The young people have gone to cities and manufacturing towns. Many of these rural districts are largely depopulated. And so an influence that these country districts needs, has in many cases vanished.

The remedy in many cases is a perfectly simple one, and that is to federate or unite the churches. With automobiles becoming common, people can travel a longer distance to church. They will do so if they are given sufficient inducement. If wide-awake young men are called to these pulpits, if enough of these various elements join together so that their combined resources will be sufficient to maintain work on an attractive basis, they will yet be prosperous.

The old-fashioned country village, with from two to half dozen little churches straggling for bare existence was a pathetic example of futile sectarianism. It is not surprising that such movements lost their hold on the young crowd. On Sunday morning, as the congregations sat in their poorly filled pews, the sound of singing and preaching would drift in through the open windows from the church across the common, and these little groups seamed to be engaged in a kind of competitive race, in place of co-operating for a common end. It is not surprising that a movement based on such a divisive spirit has failed to win support. Modern rural churches, formed by union of former competitors, which give spiritual unlift and which provide some practical benefits for the people of their communities, will still find support, and they are much needed as a basis for social welfare.

TRAFFIC

By the Albert Russel Erskine Bureau for Street Traffic Research University of California, Los Angeles

Congestion Cuts Business Rentals. Breaks Up Retail Districts. Adds to Cost of Necessities of Life.

The increase in street traffic congestion during the past few years has seriously threatened established rental values in the retail districts of practically every American city.

The marked decentralization of retail business which can be observed in many cities is due largely to street congestion, which has rendered business districts less accessible to the buying public.

It is natural and desirable that in the larger cities there should be a decentralization of what may be called staple merchandising. Subbusiness districts and neighborhood shopping canters, including drug stores, groceries, hardware stores and similar establishments, show in many cases a normal development of retail service. They dispense staple merchandise to the residential regions in which they are conveniently located.

There is a marked tendency, however, for a decentralization and breaking up of large retail establishments which deal in specialized or varied merchandise. This adds to costs.

Large department stores, for example, are finding that their location in the central retail district renders them inaccessible to the buying public because of the inconvenience resulting from street congestion. In many cases they are opening branch department stores. Specialty shops are following the trend. This decentralization is to be found not only in the retail field but also in the financial and professional field.

Whereever the establishment of a branch activity in a neighborhood group is justified by the local requirements of the district, it is probable that a real economic service is being rendered.

When the move, however, results from an artificial condition of street congestion which has rendered establishments in the central business districts less accessible, the decentralization can scarcely have any other effect than a substantial increase in overhead, and an ultimate cost burden which must be passed on to the consumer.

The artificial and hasty decentralization of business which has been encouraged by congestion has in many cases, had a threatening effect upon central district rental values. Thus a real danger to the economic structure of the city is created, for the stability of the entire community often depends upon the confidence in the established values in the central business district.

In a very real sense, therefore, street congestion which threatens the accessibility of central business districts is one which goes to the very bottom of the city's economic structure. Unless it is solved in time, it will revolutionize the structure of property values in any city.

HOW WOULD YOU GO

From Norwich to Madison?

Madison is located in New Haven county and along the shore of Long Island sound.

For people desiring to visit the several beaches near Madison, such as White beach, Crescent beach, Madison beach and Hammonasset beach which is part of the state system and is two miles in length, making the trip from Norwich, two routes would be best, the first covering roads entirely finished, the second, several miles shorter, carrying one over about 5 miles of unimproved trunk line roads.

The first route would be No. 12, from Norwich to New London, or, at present, the Military highway to New London, both of about 13 miles, then through New London west on Bank street over Route No. 1, across the Connecticut river and through Saybrook and Clinton to Madison. The trip would approximate 45 miles.

The second route would be over the Norwich to Salem road to North Plain, a distance of about 16 miles, then through Hamburg to the Saybrook-New London road, a distance of about 9 miles, and then west to Saybrook, Clinton and Madison, a total of about 43 miles.

About 4 miles of the second named route is unimproved state road, the remaining 4 miles being improved.

From Madison, or before reaching Madison, roads to the left would take one to any of the beaches desired.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

George Foster Peabody, who today enters upon his 75th year, is a New York philanthropist and retired banker who has been a notable American citizen for more than a generation. For years he was one of William J. Bryan's most loyal supporters and he was treasurer of the democratic national committee from 1896 to 1905. His personal service and his wealth have been for many years devoted to altruistic enterprises, like Hampton institute, Tuskegee institute, the General education board, and the Southern Education board of which latter organization he has been treasurer. Mr. Peabody's active interest in educational affairs in the south is due in part to his being a native of Georgia. At the close of the Civil war he went to New York and began his business career as a dry goods clerk.

Stories That Recall Others

A Rush Order

John has implicit faith in his mother, but he stepped over the edge the other day. He is in school yet but has reached the age of quick decisions.

"Mother," he said, "can you devil me a dozen eggs, fix me ten sandwiches and bake me some beans in 45 minutes? I've got to have them that quick."

"Well, John," replied the smiling mother, "I've always jumped for you, but I can't do that. I can fix the eggs and sandwiches, but you'll have to get your beans elsewhere. There is a limit to what mother can do."

Thoughtful

A little boy went into a barber shop to have his hair cut. Seeing a barber chair empty he walked over to it and sat on the footrest.

"Hop up here in the chair, sonny," said the barber.

The boy looked at him and said: "But where are you going to sit?"

Rising in the World

A well known man went to New York on business and stopped at a widely known hotel of many floors.

Late in the evening he returned from a conference and entered the elevator, saying: "Floor 18, please." The elevator was swished up the long narrow shaft.

"Here you are, son," blithely announced the cherubic lad operator.

"How do you get that 'son' stuff?" asked the man feeling a bit nettled.

"Well, I brought you up, didn't I?" replied the elevator boy.

CHILD TRAINING

ADAPTING GOOD IDEAS

Minerva Hunter

Aunt Katie found the young mother almost in tears. "My baby is so handicapped;" she confided, "the poor little fellow has no nursery to himself and we have no porch where he can get fresh air. I have to dress and take him to the park every day no matter what else needs to be done. And as for those things they tell us to do at the Mother's Club, a poor mother simply cannot afford to do half of them."

"It seems to me," Aunt Katie remarked mildly, "that your baby is blessed in having two strong young parents. Of course it would be nice if you had a porch or a yard of your own, but maybe the lack of them is a blessing. Too often women put their babies out for fresh air and stay indoors to work. As it is, you have to go to the park and so get the benefit of the fresh air yourself. If you take along a bit of sewing or a book, the time is not wasted.

"That is true," the mother nodded, "and I've made several good friends at the park. Friends are hard to make in a big city."

"Did you see Eleanor's baby last time you went home?" Aunt Katie inquired.

"Yes, and he is such a lifeless child. He does not seem interested in anything."

"I have wondered," Aunt Katie mused, "if she keeps him alone in the nursery too much. Eleanor and Charles are such lively, interesting people."

"All the books approve of nurseries," the young mother reminded.

"Yes, but a nursery is generally understood to include a nurse, the mother part of the time, or at least other children."

"I had not thought of that."

"When taking a nap," Aunt Katie continued, "a child needs to be in a quiet place, but when he is old enough to notice, I believe it is well for him to be where he can observe other people when he cares to. When there are no older children for a baby to watch, he is not hurt by watching older people when he is not busy playing with his toys or his toes."

"You are right, Aunt Katie. Books recommending nurseries presuppose companionship there of some sort for the baby, part of the time at least—of course many homes have several children. Really the thing I need to do is to adapt the nursery idea only as far as it fits by circumstances. I rather suspect that following this same plan with regard to the things they suggest at the Mother's Club will give me many good ideas for my baby. I have been trying to do things just as told me, rather than finding the underlying ideas and adapting them to my needs."

Quaker Oats "stands by" you through the morning

Feel hungry and "fidgety" before lunch?—try this

TO feel right through the morning, you must have well-balanced, complete food at breakfast. At most other meals — that is, at luncheon and at dinner—you usually get that kind of food.

But at breakfast the great dietary mistake is most often made—a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder; 58% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamines and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning. Food that should start every breakfast in your home.

Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers.

A vote was passed at the meeting appointing a committee, that on administration, to take the matter of the purchase of the machines and to consider procuring the supply the city will need. It was pointed out that the machines would save the expense of hiring election officials such as counters and assistants at the polls and that the adoption of the machines would be in the nature of economy in the conduct of elections.

POLICE ENFORCING FIVE MINUTE PARKING RULE

The five minute parking rule on Main street, Franklin square, from Rose place to Ferry street, is now being strictly enforced by the police.

Speaking of the enforcement Monday night several autoists mentioned that the ordinance could be made clearer, especially for strangers, if an additional five minutes sign was placed on the pole in front of Mora's drug store. They state that the one already on the pole can be seen only when approaching from the west and that another should be placed on the easterly side of this pole as a matter of guidance between the Rose and Ferry street could also a sign when stepping to the sidewalk after parking.

The five minute rule it was pointed out, is somewhat unusual and the signs at Rose place and on the pole about midway between Rose place and Ferry street, could be interpreted to mean five minute parking in that section and not from the pole to Ferry street.

A standing sign nearer Ferry street, painted warning on the curbing or a second sign on the easterly side of the pole would give every driver a chance to play safe and not violate the rule unintentionally, the drivers who were discussing the matter, pointed out.

JOINT MEETING VOTES TO ESTABLISH CIVIC COUNCIL FOR NORWICH

In order to stimulate greater interest in community problems and obtain the greatest co-operation possible in local efforts tending to promote the general welfare of Norwich the directors of the Norwich chamber of commerce and representatives of various non-sectarian organizations of the city, at a joint meeting Monday evening, at the Chamber of Commerce rooms, voted to establish what is known in other sections of the country as a civic council. The purpose of the civic council is to establish a clearing house of information with reference to activities of community concern. The organizations which compose its membership retain their own identities and control their own policies. The council is a formal point of contact with other organizations in the community. It will provide an excellent inter-organization method for the discussion and understanding of the community's needs and problems.

Accordingly, invitations were extended recently to the presidents and secretaries of the following non-sectarian organizations to discuss the question of forming a local civic council; manufacturers, retail merchants Central Labor union, Rotary, Lions local posts of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars, D. A. R., College club, Art association, representatives of the town and city governments, and the chamber of commerce.

Eleven of the thirteen organizations invited were represented at the meeting Monday evening. President James L. Case outlined the purpose of a civic council and a general discussion of the needs and purposes followed. At the first June meeting of the directors of the chamber, President Brun of the Syracuse, N. Y., chamber was present upon invitation from Mr. Case. Mr. Brun stated that a council was formed several years ago in Syracuse and had proven of great merit and is still going strong.

Those present at the meeting held Monday night were unanimous in favor of the establishment of a similar council in Norwich. It is obvious that a clear understanding of the community's needs and problems can best be made through the co-operation of many organizations rather than a few. The council will be an open forum wherein queations affecting the general welfare can be better understood and appreciated.

JOE SIMBORSKI IS STILL AT LARGE

Joe Simborski, alleged cattle mutilator, who escaped from the New London county jail in this city Sunday afternoon, was still at large Monday night. The local police and police in surrounding towns are on the watch for the jail breaker but so far little or nothing has been learned as to his whereabouts.

The theory is advanced that he is being kept concealed by friends in the city and that he will make an attempt to get out of town under cover of night. Meanwhile cattle owners in and near the city are keeping a strict watch over their barns and pastures to forestall mutilations of their animals.

One cattle owner who resides near the tuberculosis sanatorium notified Constable Lucius Fenton that his cow had been missing all day Monday. The call came in early Monday evening. Constable Fenton immediately started an investigation into the disappearance of the cow and shortly afterwards the missing animal was found tied up in nearby woods. The cow was returned to its barn. How the cow happened to be tied up in the woods is something of a mystery.

Simborski made his getaway from the jail about 1.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He was put to work cleaning up a room at the jail and the room in which he was working was locked. As Turnkey Charles D. Tracy opened the door to place a pail of water in the room, Simborski, who is of strong physical build, jumped on him, pushing him on to the floor and made his escape.

Simborski ran down Cedar street and as soon as Mr. Tracy could get to his feet he put after him. Simborski outdistanced him and disappeared. Mr. Tracy notified police headquarters and an immediate search for the jail breaker was started but without result.

"NEW HAVEN" TO SPLIT FOOT PASSAGE COST

Urged by the Pawcatuck Board of Trade to build a tunnel with an eight-foot passage for pedestrians at the West Broad street underpass in Pawcatuck, near the Westerly line, the New Haven railroad is declared to have offered to assume one-half the estimated cost of $34,500. The town of Stonington, it is declared, would have to stand the expense of condemning the property of Franklin Cella, needed for the improvement.

Frank Furness, chairman of the Board of Trade committee, has received specifications for the project, and a petition is being circulated to call a special town meeting of Stonington taxpayers. The village of Pawcatuck, being a part of the town of Stonington, will present the project to the taxpayers. It is declared that the offer of the railroad must be acted upon within 30 days.

As planned, the new underpass would afford a passage seven feet wider than the present one, which would be adequately lighted. The Cella property at Mechanic and West Broad streets would be rounded off, enlarging the square at this junction considerably.

EMPLOYE IS GIVEN AWARD OF $1,200

In a workmen's compensation find- Commissioner J. J. Donohue, and filed with Clerk George E. Parsons of the superior court, a lump sum of $1,200 is awarded to Thomas M. Doucherty of 195 Main street, New London, against his employers, Arthur Jackson & Co.

The claimant, contended the as the result of an injury sustained March 2, 1925, he is permanently and totally disabled, or will be permanently disabled. The dispute between the parties was as the extent of the disability, the insurance company contending that the disability if any was slight.

By an agreement to settle for $1200 Dougherty releases and discharges his employers from any further claim for medical and hospital services and payments of compensation, either total or partial.

GARDNER LAKE "Y" CAMP PROVING POPULAR

The various Y. M. C. A. camps in Connecticut all have large enrollments this summer.

Many hundreds of boys are enjoying the outdoor life under splendid christian leadership. Camp Woodstock in Tolland county, conducted by three county Y. M. C. A. secretaries is filled to capacity with a fine class of Connecticut boys.

Camp Hazen, at Chester is more popular than ever as evidenced by the large number of campers who are enjoying life to the full. F. A. Stanley the state boys' secretary and a group of young college men are maintaining wonderful supervision.

The Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. boys camp at Gardner Lake has what might be called a capacity number of boys from Brooklyn. This camp has added two new buildings to its equipment since last summer.

The summer camps for boys conducted by the Y. M. C. A. all over America have become a most important factor in the American boy life.

GAVE PARTY FOR THEIR DAUGHTER'S THIRD BIRTHDAY

Mr. and Mrs. William Ducharme gave a birthday party Monday evening at their home, Jewett City, in honor of the third birthday of their daughter, Imelda Ducharme. Relatives and friends were present from New Bedford, Norwich, and Jewett City. The small hostess received many gifts, including a large birthday cake, the gift of her grandmother, Mrs. Kate Perry.

About 40 guests were present. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Ducharme.

USES SIX LANGUAGES IN GOVERNMENT WORK

Miss Julia H. Hoffman, of Washington, D. C., who is spending her vacation with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hoffman, of 16 Winchester street, Laural Hill, has been doing most remarkable work for the government for about 20 years. Miss Hoffman, a former resident of Norwich Town, has had valuable experience in Washington affairs and in several departments of national service.

Her knowledge of languages has been put to good account in her work and she ranks high among the dependable government employes. While a teacher in the West Indies she acquired a practical command of Spanish and gradually she has added the knowledge of other tongues, so that at present she is translating claims for the government which come in six languages—Spanish, French, Italian, German, Portuguese and Dutch.

The wide range, accuracy and practical character of her work has won highest commendation from her superiors in the department—Earl Taggart, chief of personnel, and John I. Willis, chief clerk of the general accounting offices.

For a number of years before leaving for Washington Miss Hoffman acted as Norwich Town correspondent for The Bulletin, putting the same care and thoroughness and accuracy into her work in that line which has since established her ability and faithfulness in her important service for Uncle Sam.

The claims against the government for one matter and another imply much correspondence and a flexible working knowledge of the languages involved; so that it is manifestly a great compliment to Miss Hoffman's acquirements that she so acceptably fills her present post.

ROBT. LINCOLN'S DAUGHTER WIFE OF NORWICH MAN

Robert Todd Lincoln, 82, the last survivor of the five children of President Abraham Lincoln, found dead in bed Monday morning at his home in Manchester, Vt., was father-in-law of Frank Edward Johnson, son of Mrs. Edward Whiting Johnson, of Norwich.

Their marriage took place at "Hildene," summer estate of the Lincoln family, Tuesday, June 22nd, 1915. The bride was then Mrs. Jessie Lincoln Beckwith, and had divorced her first husband, a man prominent in baseball circles, by whom she had two children, a daughter and son.

Mrs. Beckwith and Mr. Johnson had met in Washington, after the return of the latter from a notably successful exploration visit to Tunisia, when he not only represented the National Geographic Magazine, but also the United States Department of Agriculture. At that time he was a prominent figure in Washington social and literary and scientific life, artist, traveler, writer, lecturer and linguist.

After their marriage they spent some time at Hildene, a fine estate where the bride did much to aid her father in his favorite pursuit of rare flower cultivating and development of the fine gardens in general. Later, however, Mr. Johnson went to Havana as an attache of the United States legation utilizing his knowledge of languages during the World war; and gradually it became known among his friends that there was an estrangement between his wife and himself. He is still in Cuba and his wife has continued to make her home with her father, at the Vermont estate in the summer and in Washington during each winter. As far as known to Mr. Johnson's friends here in Norwich, neither has ever sought a divorce.

Mr. Johnson's mother left Norwich a few weeks ago and is passing the season at Siasconset, Nantucket.

The news of the Johnson-Beckwith marriage in 1915 came to friends here through formal announcements sent out by Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln, who, it was always understood, greatly favored the union, although their daughter's first marriage had been deeply displeasing to them.

SENATOR BINGHAM TO SPEAK AT FARM BUREAU PICNIC

Arrangements have been about completed for the annual picnic and field day of the New London County Farm Bureau which will be held at the same place as in the past two years. This place is located on the Great Neck Road, Waterford, opposite the residence of W. Ellery Allyn. The property is known as the Strand and has been kindly loaned by Valentine Chappelle of New London. It is a very accessible location and affords a good bathing beach as well as a place for land sports.

Senator Hiram Bingham will be present at the outing and will address the gathering at one o'clock, standard time, which will be immediately after lunch. The field day will probably be one of the largest events of the year for the Farm Bureau. In past years there have been about 400 people present at each field day. With Senator Bingham present a still larger crowd is looked for. This year awnings will be put up along the bank by the beach to furnish shade for those not participating in the bathing.

Another feature of the day will be a clam chowder dinner served by the ladies of the Jordan Baptist church.

From 1:45 to 3:30 the sports events will hold away. These will be field and track events which will be for both one young and old. Barn yard golf will continue throughout the day.

The same scoring system as used last year will be used again this year. That is, the first five places in each event will count towards the total score for the respective towns represented in the event. First, second and third place silk banners will be given to the towns having the three high scores. The attendance record on a percentage bases will be added to this score.

The committee in charge of the field day comprises Arthur H. Davis, Waterford; Russell Waldo of Lebanon, Mrs. H. H. Leland of Waterford; Miss Gladys Stratton, home demonstration agent, and W. T. Clark, county agent.

BELA LYON PRATT RANKED WITH GREAT SCULPTORS

There has just been dedicated at Chicago the magnificent Pere Marquette monument, on Marshall Boulevard and 24th street, Hermon A. MacNeil, sculptor, Holobird & Roche architects. The superb piece of work was unveiled July 26th and is provided for through the will of Benjamin Franklin Ferguson, who made a bequest, the income from which is to be devoted by the trustees of the Art Institute of Chicago to the erection and maintenance of enduring statuary and monuments in the whole, or in part, of stone, granite or bronze. These are to be placed in the parks, along the boulevards, or in other public places within the city of Chicago, commemorative men or women of America, or important events in American history.

It is of Norwich interest that one of these grand work of art, the Alexander Hamilton monument, dedicated Sept. 28, 1918, was designed by the late Bela Lyon Pratt, famous sculptor, whose home was for years in Norwich and who had a summer home in Salem although the later years of his life were spent in Boston.

Other Chicago monuments of same high standard are the Theodore Thomas memorial, Albin Polasek, sculptor, Mountain of the Great Lakes, Lorado Taft sculptor, Statue of the Republic, Daniel Chester French, sculptor, Illinois Centennial monument, Evelyn B. Longman, sculptor, Eugene Field monument, Edward McCartan sculptor and Fountain of Time, Lorado Taft sculptor. This gives an idea of the class of artists with whom the brilliant Pratt ranked during his all too short career.

The Pere Marquette memorial, the latest of the grand monuments, perpetuates the fame of Father Jacques Marquette, Jesuit missionary among the Indians, who, in 1668, established the first mission at Sault Ste. Marie. Count Frontenac, governor of Canada, wishing to open a route to the Mississippi, entrusted the task to the brave priest.

Father Marquette, who was accompanied by the adventurous pioneer, Louis Jolliet, opened a route to the Mississippi. Twice he made the hazardous journey by canoe, portaging through the wilderness from river to river and helped by friendly Indians. He returned by way of the Illinois and Chicago rivers, on the land where now stands the city of Chicago. Falling ill on his homeward trip, he died and was buried in the wilderness, May 18th, 1675. The Indians, because of their love for the gentle and heroic priest, afterwards took up his body and carried it to St. Ignace, north of Mackinaw, where it now rests beneath the floor of the chapel.

PRELIMINARY SWIMMING MEET AT PARK TODAY

This (Tuesday) afternoon at Mohegan park lake, the third and last of the preliminary swimming meets is to be held, when members of the Elizabeth street, Greeneville and Lake street playgrounds will strive for honors.

The winner in his meet is to compete with the winners of the two previous meets, which were won by East Side and Hobart avenue respectively. The final meet is to be held at the park on Tuesday, August 3rd.

The meet today is to be supervised by John P. Murphy, swimming instructor at the playgrounds and William Browne, life guard at the lake.

Owing to the fact that the Dowell athletic field is in use this week the field cannot be used for playground activities and it is expected that the Academy campus will be in shape later in the week, in time for the inter-playground contests.

Everything is ready for the circus to be given this (Tuesday) evening at the Jail Hill playground, arrangements having been completed by Instructors Leslie Carroll and Beatrice Ableman.

NORWICH TOWN

It is this (Tuesday) evening, instead of Thursday evening as stated, that the Congregational Young People's Christian Endeavor society, is to meet in the chapel at seven o'clock, to do work for Miss Gertrude S. Avery, of Ahmednagar, India, and Rev. Edward Huntington Smith, of Ingtal, China.

At the Sunday morning worship at the Congregational church, the pastor, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey chose for his text I Corinthians 13:11, When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child, but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

At the Sunday evening service conducted by the Young People's Christian Endeavor society, with the missionary committee in charge, the leader was Miss Jessie E. Hyde. At this meeting most interesting letters were read from Miss Gertrude S. Avery, about her work and school at Ahmednagar, India, where she has served nearly two years of her five year commission as a missionary. She left Norwich in the fall of 1924.

Rev. Edward H. Smith wrote concerning his work in the mission field at Ingtal, China. Rev. Mr. Smith with Mrs. Smith, has been engaged in this line of endeavor for many years in China where they have reared an interesting family, which on several occasions has returned to the United States for leave of absence among relatives.

A continuation of "The Book of Isaiah," will be the theme for the study period at the First Congregational prayer service, Thursday evening.

Lawn Fete, Wed. evening, July 28 First Methodist church.—adv.

For his Sunday morning sermon at the First Methodist Episcopal church the pastor, Rev. Albert E. Whitten preached from Luke 21:19. In your patience, posses ye your souls. Sunday afternoon at the Gardner Lake Methodist church, the religious service conducted by Rev. Mr. Whitten had for its text Lamentations 3:27. It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth.

Mrs. William H. Whitman was the leader of the Methodist Young People's Christian Endeavor service, Sunday evening, when the topic was: How Are We Supplying Africa's Need for Christ? Acts 8:26-40. (Missionary meeting.)

Mrs. Richard Carter is chairman of a lawn party, to be given on Huntington Green, under the auspices of the Methodist Y. P. S. C. E.

There was an attendance of 40 or more at the annual Sunday school picnic of the Methodist church, held at Mohegan park, the latter part of the week. Those present included the pastor, Rev. Albert E. Whitten and family.

A picnic supper was prepared at 6 o'clock under the direction of Mrs Carter and assistants and included salads, sandwiches, cake, lemonade and ice cream. The company of children and a number of adults assembled at the church at 1 o'clock and were conveyed by bus to the park. Others went by automobile. Although prizes had been provided for the several games planned, these contests were omitted because of the extreme heat. The bus conveyed the picnic party back to the starting point at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Kennedy and daughter, Miss Alice H. Kennedy of Town street, are passing several days this week at the home of Mrs Kennedy's mother and sister, Mrs Mary White and Miss Annie White of Webster, Mass., former residents of Brooklyn, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carter and children John and Mildred Carter, of Pleasant street, spent Friday at Atlantic Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. William House and Mrs. Elizabeth R. Kinney and other members of her family, motored Sunday to Rocky Point, where they were met by Mr. and Mrs. Allen Kinney of Providence, son and daughter-in-law of Mrs. Kinney.

Home Economics Notes

Three home economics meetings have been held in this section this month under the direction of the New London county farm bureau. Upholstery demonstrations featured the meetings which were held as follows.

July 1st—Lebanon. Ten women attended the upholstery meeting and one very large easy chair and two straight chairs were done. This easy chair was a reclining chair and was a large problem but turned out quite satisfactory. The home demonstration agent supervised two reed seats and one of Hong ong grass upholstery.

July 2nd—Norwichtown. Eight women were present and the most difficult problem was a couch which was done in leatherette. A straight chair and a rocking chair which were upholstered in horsehair were the other two problems. All the women helped and expected to do some of the work at home.

July 17th—Leffingwell. Ten women attended the upholstery meeting. Two arm chairs and a sofa were done. One of the arm chairs is to be loaned for an exhibit during farmers' week.

SUSIE HAS HECTIC TIME TRYING TO KEEP COOL DURING HEAT WAVE

Susie in her weekly letter to the sports editor comments freely on the recent heat wave and her endeavors to keep cool which were not entirely as successful as she anticipated. Her letter follows:

Dear Sports Editor:

Ain't it been hot? Gosh anybody what got a kick outa them hot days there is something wrong with them! I worked so hard trying to keep cool that I was all the hotterer. The feller what writ that song about "The Good Old Summer Time" and about them shady lanes etc. musta lived up around the North Pole and did know nothing about hot weather, or he'd never wroted them. Trying to keep cool ain't no cinch when there ain't no cool places nowhere.

During one of them hot days the boy friend didn't do no work, not that he ever does much, but he was doing less than usual, suggests that we get out into the country and have a picnic. Now picnics is my meat and if there was anything what I like its picnics, so for once I was agreeable and refrained from vetoing his motion on general principles. He says for me to put up a lunch while he goes and gets a watermelon and something cool to drink.

Well I tells me what I wants knowing she can put up a better picnic than me and while the boy is gone I gets all dolled up in my sports clothes. When the boy gets back I has the lunch all ready and we gets in and drives off. The boy says kinda mystery-like when we gets going that he has a surprise for me and right a way I gets curious. Finally he says he's got a dozen bottles of home-brew in the machine. Well, good home-brew ain't so worse on a hot day and I ain't such a prohibitionist that I don't relish a real cooling drink on a hot day. Well, me and the boy strikes out for them wide open spaces up around Voluntown or some what they call Beach Pond and sorta unknown reason. Everything goes along fine until we gets to Ja Voluntown where Ja Bitgood is mayor and then our troubles start. I don't mean to say Ja Bitgood had anything to do with them it was them darned wild west roads what them people has got that almost wrecked us and the bus.

When we turns off the main drag into the cart paths things warn't so rosey. We goes bumping along over rocks and through sand and the old bus is about ready to quit on us and we is about ready to quit on the bus too. We come out in the country to get cool but believe me, Ed., we is plottern than lots of places I've heard tell of. We is going along and first thing we heard is a bang and the kid says "H—l, there goes a tire," and he stops the car and starts to get out. He ain't more'n outa the back than there's a couple more bangs and he gets madder and madder thinking all them tires is blowing up. He walks around the car looking at the rear tires and then at the front ones with kind of a funny expression on his face. "Them tires is all right" he says. Just about as he gets them words outa his mouth there's a couple more bangs and he runs around in back of the car and there's astream of something running out of the bus. "Oh, gosh," he says, "the gas tank is busted."

I climbs outa that back in a hurry and runs around in back, not wanting to be in no auto whats going to blow up. I looks at that stream running out of the machine and it don't look like no gas to me so I tastes it and by golly it ain't gas. I says to the boy "Open that cover." Well he does and just as he does there's a couple more bangs and he is covered in what looks like soap-suds but it aint. Well what do you know, them home brew bottles has went crazy with the heat and when we looks every last one of them has busted and we 40 miles from nowhere and almost dying of thirst. What I told that boy ain't nothing that should be writ in this letter.

Well we drives on and by and by we don't get very far for we has visited the lunch and I spreads a blanket on the ground and starts getting out the lunch. Well, that lunch was a mess. It was so mixed up I couldn't tell whether it was goulash or just the plain garden variety of hash. Them sandwiches was soaked in home brew and the pickles was mixed up with the bananas and peaches like a fruit salad. The butter had melted and run all over the cake and pie which was covered with salt and pepper. Well being hungry we sails in just the same but we don't get very far for we has visitors. A couple cows with a gentleman cow comes strolling along and the male of the species kinda resents our picnic. Well you can bet I don't stop to argue the matter with him and beats a retreat which is more discreet than graceful. I hot foots it for a barbed-wire fence which I almost jumps over but not quite and a nice pair of linen knickers is shot full of holes. It lands on what looks at first glance like a pile of sawdust but it ain't its one of the darned ant hills. Well in about a second I is as busy as a one-armed fish peddler with a armful of eels. I is ants from head to foot and there ain't no chance of getting rid of them so I hops back in the lot with the gentleman bovine and makes a Charlie Paddock for the lake. When I reaches the lake I just keep on going till there ain't no more ground under my feet. Well it got rid of them ants but it didn't do no good to my looks or disposition. I may have been cool on the outside but I was boiling on the interior. I looks around for the boy friend but he ain't no where's around and them two cows is eating all our lunch. By and by I hears somebody thrashing around up in the woods and I hollers and the boy answers. Well I gets outa the water and goes looking for him and finds him knee deep in bull briars and considerable the worse for wear. And believe me he ain't cool either. Well we gets back to the car eventually and picks up our things and comes back home.

The only thing what we saved was the watermelon and we has that on my front porch that evening. Believe me, Ed. picnics is all right but they ain't the coolest things that ever were. Well we was better off than Jimmy, Billy and Donnie Peduce and Charlie Williamson and Cutey Leonard and a couple of them East Side fellers what went to Watch Hill and had their auto blow up with them and have to walk back.

Well Ed. so long there ain't no place like home on a hot day. I'll say there ain't.

Yours Truley

SUSIE.

BOY CHAMP DEFEATS FOR COLLEGE CHAMPION

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)—Frank Shields of New York, National Boys tennis champion, defeated Phil Neer of Seattle, Wash. 6-4, 4-6, 6-1, in the outstanding match of the Metropolitan championships at the Crescent Athletic club today.

Neer, intercollegiate king in 1921 and for some time ranked No. 1 player in the northwest, could not cope with the aggressive style of the youngster after winning the second set.

Another feature of today's play was the determined stand made by Berkeley Bell of Austin, Texas, against the New York veteran, Dr. George King. Dr. King won the match, 3-7, 9-6, but in each set Bell had a lead of 5-2 before the Metropolitan played came through to win in extra games.

Tomorrow's matches in the third round bring together Tilden and S. Onda, a member of the Japanese Davis Cup team; Vincent Richards and Herbert J. Brown and John Doeg and B. I. C. Norton.

ASHLAND HANDS ROSSIE A. A. SOUND TRIMMING

Sunday at Rossie Park, Mystic, the Ashland A. A. defeated the fast Rossie A. A. 25-7. Kiddy pitching for the Velvetmakers was hit hard being touched for nineteen hits. Stanley, on the mound for Ashland pitched nice ball keeping the twelve hits registered against him well scattered. The outstanding feature of the game was the hitting of the Ashland team with "Dee" Gaudette leading the attack with three hits out of four trips to the plate. The score:

OVER THE TOP DEFEATS TAFTVILLE TOWN TEAM

The newly organized Taftville Town team lost its first game of the season to the Over the Top of North Grosvenordale, Sunday afternoon at the latter's grounds by the score of nine to eight. Coderre of the Over the Tops had two bad innings, the first and seventh when the Towners scored three runs in their first time at bats and piled up five more in the seventh to tie the score, only to have Grosvendale go ahead again in the eighth. Lannery and P. Flinn divided the hitting honors for the Towners, while R. Ravernelle featured for the Over the Tops. Lemieux and Burrele featured in the fielding, both making wonderful catches of balls which would have went for extra bases. The second game of the series between the Town Team and Hanover was called Saturday because of rain but the Towners would like to hear from them in regards to playing next Saturday. Twilight games with some of the teams in the Norwich Twi league are also desired. The score:

CHAPMAN-HERMAN BOUT HEADS BOXING PROGRAM

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)—The first of two important tests this week among contenders for the featherweight title relinquished by Kid Kaplan will take place tomorrow night when Red Chapman of Boston boxes Babe Herman of California at the Queensboro stadium.

Chapman has been designated informally by the State Athletic commission as the outstanding aspirant for Kaplan's crown and the outcome of his bout tomorrow will have a vital bearing on his status. The bout is of added value as a test because the Boston boxer meets in Herman a rugged foe who has waged several sensational battles with Kaplan on close to even terms. The match is for 12 rounds.

The other featherweight encounter of importance occurs Thursday, at Madison Square Garden with Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, regarded by many critics as the best of the 126-pounders, opposing Frankie Parr of Cleveland in a ten-round match.

RUTH FAR AHEAD IN RACE FOR HOME RUN HONORS

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP)—A four-base hit by Babe Ruth yesterday spelled victory for the Yankees. It also gave Ruth his 30th home run of the season and brought the total for his career to 339.

American league players lack two of leading the Nationals by the margin of Babe Ruth's circuit drives. The former have scored 279 home runs, against 251 by the rival league. During the past week 16 home runs were scored in the American and 11 in the National.

Leading home run hitters:

American League

Ruth, New York	30
Lazzeri, New York	13
Simmons, Philadelphia	13
Williams, St. Louis	10

Bottomley, St. Louis	14
L. Bell, St. Louis	11

Not the least brilliant among the baseball feats of the present season was that of Eddie Wells, the Detroit southpaw, in pitching 18 successive innings against the Cleveland Indians without yielding a run.

PIRATES STRENGTHEN HOLD ON FIRST PLACE

BROOKLYN, July 26.—(AP)—The Pirates strengthened their grip on first place in the National league pennant chase today by choking a ninth inning Brooklyn rally to win at 3 to 2.

Dazzy Vance yielded only six scattered hits, but he gave seven passes and two of them were turned into runs. Only four Pirates were retired on strikes.

Emil Yde started for the Pirates and the Robins made only four hits off him until the ninth. When he weakened and was replaced by Adams with one out, one run over the plate and two men on the bases. Bohne fled to Cuyler whose accurate throw to the plate doubled Butler trying to score after the catch.

CORBETT POSITIVELY DENIES HE WAS KAYOED BY JEFFERIES

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)—Although nearly three decades have elapsed controversy still rages about what happened when Jim Corbett, then the heavyweight champion, and him Jeffries, only a husky Tyro, first put on the gloves in a sparring match at Carson City, Nevada, where Corbett was training for his title fight with Bob Fitzsimmons.

Corbett today took sharp issue with his version that he was knocked out by Jeffries, as published in a chapter of the latter's life history in the current issue of Liberty.

"I knocked Jeffries out on that occasion," declared Corbett, "and no one knows it any better than he does. He fell into my arms after taking a stiff punching. Jeff didn't know the least thing about boxing in those days; He couldn't have hit me with a handful of rice, let alone his fists."

"I don't belief Jeff ever made the statement that's credited to him," continued Corbett. "The writer of the article misquotes him. I believe, whether intentionally or not. Jeff and I always have been good friends and I don't think he would have any object in saying anything like that."

MISS ORCUTT IS MEDALIST IN QUALIFYING ROUND AT SHENECOSSETT

EASTERN POINT, Conn., July 26.—(AP)—Miss Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., metropolitan and New Jersey women's champion, came whacking through the short grass of the Shenecossett country club course today in the most economical number of strokes to become medalist of the eighth annual women's invitation golf tournament for the Griswold trophy. She finished the qualifying round of 18 holes in 82, two better than Miss Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis., Wisconsin champion, who turned in a card of 84 for second lowest.

Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, R. I., national women's champion, and four times winner of the tournament, did not play her usual steady game today and finished well down in the list of 32 who made the championship flight. Her score of 89 was bettered by 11 of the 232 others who teed off. It was the first time in six years that Miss Collett failed to win medalist honors.

Four players who finished with a 94 today are to have an elimination tomorrow morning to determine which one shall drop out of the qualifying number. As the contestants finished today 23 were qualified, if the four who finished in 94 or better were to play in the championship. The playoff is to be held at 9 a. m.

The four who completed the round today in 94 were: Mrs. D. M. Belcher, Arlington, Mass.; Mrs. Philip Stevenson, Westbury, L. I.; Mrs. F. J. Doyle, Philadelphia; and Mrs. Florence Freeman, Nantucket, R. I.

The prominent golfers entered in the tourney which this year attracted more entries than has any other women's tournament in the world, finished well up among the qualifiers. Mrs. D. C. Hurd, of Philadelphia, former United States, British and Canadian champion, Mrs. E. H. Fitler, Rosemont, Pa.; Mrs. J. S. Cassriel, of Chicago, former Illinois champion, Miss Helen Payson, of Portland, Me., Florida champion, and Miss Marie Jenny, former metropolitan champion, as well as Miss Orcutt and Miss Wall, completed the 18 holes in an 86 or less.

The stars drove off between 10 and 11 o'clock this morning, Miss Collett, paired with Miss Wall going out first. A small gallery followed them.

Not all of the 216 who turned in cards had as good luck over the difficult course as did the leaders. Mrs. George M. Bissell of Bridgeport, who went out in 58, came home in 85. She took a 39 for the 125 yard 18th hole. Her score of 143, however, was not the highest turned in. Miss Kitty Doyle of Philadelphia took two strokes more than Mrs. Bissell to stick out the round.

Several families have more than one member entered. The Paysons of Portland, Me., are represented by mother and two daughters, as is the Doyle family of Philadelphia.

Miss Helen Payson, whose 86 was made on her second trip around the course, is the star of the one from Maine. Mrs. R. C. Payson, her mother, turned in a 99 and her sister, Emma, a 102.

Mrs. F. J. Doyle of Philadelphia is one of the four who turned in a 94. Her daughter, Dorothy, came through with a 98 while another daughter, Kitty, won honors in reverse order, having taken the greatest number of strokes.

Mrs. Carleton Smith and her daughter, Dorothy, metropolitan junior champion of New York city, failed to keep among the leaders. Mrs. Smith went round in 117, and Miss Smith in 96.

The first pair to tee off was Mrs. A. H. Vail and daughter, Patricia of Wynewood, Pa. Neither had a good time.

The players found the course heavy. Attendants said it was "not nearly as fast" as when the men's tournament was held here several weeks ago. Those who played in last year's tournament found the going much heavier this year, they said. But there was no wind to bother with and the sun's rays were not as direct as last week.

Scores of first 16:

Miss Maureen Orcutt, Englewood, N. J., 82.

Miss Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis., 84.

Mrs. J. S. Cassriel, Chicago, 85.

Mrs. E. H. Fitler, Rosemont, Pa., 85.

Miss Marie Jenny, New York, 85.

Miss Jane Brooks, New York, 86.

Mrs. D. C. Hurd, Philadelphia, 86.

Miss Helen Payson, Portland, Me., 86.

Mrs. N. K. Toerge, Locust Valley, L. I., 86.

Mrs. Courtland Smith, Glen Ridge, N. J., 87.

Mrs. C. D. Smithers, Glen Cove, L. I., 88.

Miss Glenna Collett, Providence, R. I., 89.

Mrs. Mary Mayberry, Portland, Me., 89.

Mrs. G. L. Austin, Hartford, 89.

INVITATIONS SENT TO EVERY POLICE DEPARTMENT

NEW HAVEN, July 26.—Invitations have been issued by the New Haven police department to every bona fide police and fire department in the state to send representatives to the fourth annual athletic meet and field day of the local department. The mammoth event which is scheduled for Wednesday, Aug. 11, is expected to surpass the three previous affairs, and Tom Tracy, chairman of the general committee, is confident that it will.

Entry blanks have been sent to the police headquarters of the several large cities in Connecticut, and will be available there for all the members of the police and fire organizations who care to compete in the events which will be closed to them. The meet is sanctioned by the A. A. U. and has an extensive program which is sure to be attractive to both athletes and the general public.

Two of the members on the schedule are closed to firemen. One is a 100 yard dash for members of the New Haven department only, while the other is a 100 yard dash open to members of the municipally maintained departments all over the estate, the only restriction being that the entrant must have served at least six months with his organization.

For policemen there are six events, only one of which, a 100 yard dash, is closed to the New Haven bluecoats alone. The other numbers are a 100 yard dash open to all cops, 100 yard dash for ten year service men, 50 yard dash for 15 years service men, 50 yard dash for 20 year service men, and 12 pound shot put. All those desiring to enter any of the events can obtain entry blanks from their own police headquarters or from T. J. Tracy at police headquarters, this city.

Handsome prizes are being offered to the winners of the big events, and with a comprehensive schedule of activities to work on, the big state-wide meet this year will prove the largest one Lighthouse Point has yet seen.

JEFFRIES ONCE KNOCKED OUT JIM CORBETT

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)—Disclosing a bit of previously unwritten fight history, Jim Jeffries, in a chapter on his career published in this week's issue of Liberty, relates how he knocked out Jim Corbett while the latter was preparing for the fight in which he lost the heavyweight title to Bob Fitzsimmons in 1897.

The knockout, as Jeffries tells the story, occurred when he first put the gloves on with Corbett in the latter's training camp at Carson City, Nev. Accounts of the meeting at that time and since, however, have credited Corbett with knocking out Jeffries, then a raw but powerful youngster recruited from a Los Angeles boiler shop to serve as a sparring partner for Corbett.

"Corbett didn't knock me out. I knocked him out," Jeffries is quoted as saying. "The story that he knocked me out was just a ballyhoo for the fight—to worry Fitzsimmons and boost Corbett's stock by crediting him with a knockout punch.

Delaney (Corbett's manager) told me to say nothing and to be sure not to contradict it if anyone asked me and I never did, but there's no reason why the truth shouldn't be told now."

According to Jeffries' version of the affair, which occurred behind locked doors, his temper was aroused by an attempt to have him expose his chin for a knockout blow from Corbett.

"They wanted to see if Corbett had a punch and they got me to step in and leave my chin uncovered while he took a punch at me. It made me mad to know I'd been tricked; my lip was cut against my teeth but Corbett never knew it. I rushed him and mixed him for a minute, then I got a punch over. I hit him and knocked him against the wall so hard he nearly went through. Then I pasted him a couple of good ones to keep him there and his hands dropped. He was done for and another punch would have finished him. They rushed in and pulled me away and gave me time to cool off. There wasn't any more boxing that day."

RICKARD OPTIMISTIC ABOUT DEMPSEY-TUNNEY BOUT

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP)—Tex Rickard without revealing what had transpired, to bolster his spirits, seemed to be highly optimistic last night over solving the legal entanglements and smoothing the way for promoting the heavyweight championship fight between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney here next September.

Rickard declared the first "definite announcement" may be made tomorrow.

"Things are looking brighter," Rickard said. "and I think everything will come out O. K. I may have something to positively announce before tomorrow night."

B. E. Clement, the Chicago promoter proceeding with his announced plans for holding the fight between Dempsey and Harry Wills, also here and also in September, said that Paddy Mullins, manager of the negro challenger, would arrive here tomorrow and that Wills would come on the scene Tuesday, at least that is what Mullins advised him over the telephone from New York city.

Jack Kearns, Dempsey's former manager, entered into the contract controversy with a suggestion for a way out. In conference with Rickard he broached the suggestion that overtures be made to Dempsey to have the champion recognize Kearns' managerial contract, which does not expire until August 8 Then, Kearns said, the contract Clements is relying on, will have no value because the champion's manager has not signed it.

Kearns previously had signed with Rickard for Dempsey to meet both Tunney and Wills, and if the champion will recognize Kearns as his pilot again, the Clements' contract will be superseded and the tangle can be cleared immediately. Rickard's comment on Kearns' proposition was not divulged.

Unabashed by Dempsey's assertion in Colorado Springs that the champion "wouldn't fight for Clemente now if he had twenty-five million dollars," the promoter said he had instructed the champion to be here August 6. He said he would have ready when Dempsey preceded Wills into the ring the $500,000 prescribed by the contract.

COOLIDGE REFRAINS FROM COMMENT ON WAR DEBTS

PAUL SMITH'S, N. Y., July 26.—(AP)—The position of President Coolidge in refraining from comment on political conditions in other countries or on the settlements of foreign war time debts to this country was emphasized today when a statement was issued at the executive offices asserting that he "has made no statement and authorized no interview concerning our foreign debts."

The statement was made after the Syracuse Herald in a dispatch from a representative who had come here to see Mr. Coolidge, had indicated that the president now regarded trade agreements as the logical recourse for an adjustment of foreign debts.

"The president has made no statement," the official announcement said, "and authorized no interview concerning our foreign debts or trade agreements. Any claim to the contrary is without foundation. He did remark to a social visitor that foreign debtors could pay their debts in part from foreign trade. He has not mentioned trade agreements."

Since Mr. Coolidge came to the Adirondacks he has maintained silence on the political situation in France, holding that it would be improper for him to discuss the affairs of another country. He also has refrained from entering the discussion which recently developed between British officials and officials of the United States treasury concerning the funds borrowed by England from this country during the war and their uses.

Undetermined damage resulted from the high wind and waves to the fashionable Roney plaza at Miami Beach while several houseboats moored at bay front docks were smashed.

Crab Steele pitched h's best game of the season getting only three hits from him and striking out 18 men. P.A.
was a revelation to me!
FOR a long time, I wouldn't admit that anybody could tell me anything about tobacco. I was satisfied with the brand I was smoking. At least, I thought I was. And then one day, I borrowed a pipeload of Prince Albert from a fellow passenger in the smoking-car.
To make a long story short, that experience revised all my previous notions about tobacco. The very first puff told me that I had been missing something good up till that moment. It was cool and refreshing as a breath of mountain air. It was sweet and fragrant.
I was ready to admit right then and there that you can teach an old dog new smoke-tricks. When the train pulled in at the station, I bought me a tidy red tin of P. A. for myself. Since then, I've thrown away enough empties to make a fair-sized tin garage.
Maybe you think that you are all set on a smoke-program. I just want to leave this thought with you: until you have smoked P. A., you have no idea of how that old pipe of yours can perform with real tobacco. Give Prince Albert a chance in your jimmy-pipe.
P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

A Queer Looking Clam

Clams there are of several kinds,
But all alike in lacking minds.
—Old Mother Nature.

But clams are not alike in other ways. No, sir. There are clams and clams. And if you think all clams are helpless, you are quite mistaken. Ask Greywing the Gull, he knows. There isn't much that Greywing doesn't know about the seashore. It's his business to know. Greywing likes clams to eat. You remember how Danny saw him get a clam dinner by carrying clams high up in the air and dropping them on the rocks. These were the so-called soft-shell or long clams. If you have ever been to a clambake and had steamed clams, you know what they are. You see, Greywing knows what is good.

But there is another member of the clam family quite as delicious eating, which Greywing is seldom smart enough to get. Often he sees this clam but usually that is all. This clam is long, quite six inches long, and narrow, and shaped very much like the handle of an old-fashioned razor. It doesn't look as if it were able to take care of itself. It doesn't look one bit smarter than any other clam. But try to catch one, as Greywing has tried more than once.

Greywing knows just where to look for the razor clam. He knows a certain sand bar where at low tide this clam may be found with the upper end of the shell projecting from its hole in the sand. Always it is very tempting and Greywing, many times, has yielded to temptation and darted at one of these clams in the hope of catching it. But at the first move, down it goes, and Greywing has nothing but an exasperating hole in the sand to look at.

Now, the surprising thing is that this clam can go down into the sand faster than you could dig down with a spade. Yet he has no feet, he has no hands, he has no claws; to look at him you wouldn't think he had a thing to dig with.

Greywing knows just where to look for the Razor Clam

I said this clam has no feet. This is true. But it has what is called a foot. It isn't like the foot of a bird, or an animal, or any one else you know of. It isn't shaped like any foot. It looks like merely a long fleshy part pushing out from the lower end of the shell. But it is with this that this clam can burrow so fast in the sand. This queer so-called foot pushes out until it is a point. With this it pushes right down in the sand. Then through the other end of the clam draws in water and forces this water right down into the foot, so that the foot swell out and pushes away the sand around it. Then that point becomes a little disk that clings to the bottom and the clam pulls its shells right down. Then does it all over again so that it goes down in the sand very fast.

This clam is also considered very nice eating by other than Greywing the Gull, but it is so clever in getting out of sight in the sand that it is not often obtained as food.

While this particular clam is an exceedingly good digger, there is another little clam which is a good swimmer. Wouldn't Danny Meadow Mouse have been surprised if he could have seen a clam swimming? You know, a clam doesn't look a bit as if he could swim. Most of them cannot. But this particular little clam, which is only about three-quarters of an inch in length, can swim for quite a distance without once touching bottom. There is still another clam called the Sandbar Clam, which comes to the surface of the water and skips along by means of its powerful foot and the flapping motion of the valves of the shell.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." SOMERSVILLE

Last Saturday evening in Somersville, Tolland county, about 1,800 people were enjoying themselves at a lawn festival given by All Saints' church. Several hundred members of the Ku Klux Klan robed and hooded, in automobiles, drove up in front of the celebration and encircled the grounds. The parishioners were told by their pastor, Rev. D. J. O'Brien, to pay no attention at all to the visitors. As is usually the case, the excitement only brought a larger number of visitors to the fete and increased the financial receipts considerably. Last Sunday, at the masses, Father O'Brein completely ignored the matter.

WANT POWER EXTENSION IN NORTH STONINGTON

Residents of North Stonington interested in projecting high power transmission to the farms along the turnpike and on Shunoc Hill gathered at the bungalow of Mr. Crider, North Stonington, recently to meet representatives of the electric power company and to determine what united efforts of the residents could accomplish in bringing this convenience to all. Those present were Herbert Vincent, Silas Lee, Felix Magnus, Irving Maine, David Stillman, Charles Elias, Joseph Crider and John Wilkinson.

It was explained that the company was ready to extend the power along public highways for as many as would subscribe to it, but there would be a service charge in addition to meter charge where there were less than 25 subscribers to the mile. For each subscriber the service charge would be $1 per month with 25 to the mile $2.22 with 10 to the mile; $5.50 with five to the mile; $30 with only one to the mile. It was wholly evident to all that the proposition could not be attractive in cost unless at least 10 subscribers to the mile could be found. During the discussion the official made the statement that the company would not refuse to grant to any individual along the line the right to a power transformer for individual use without service charge, should he demand it. This knowledge seemed to break the unity of the residents, for obviously several could maintain private lines across lots to the power line at less cost in the long run than by paying service charge for use of a company extension.

Hem-Roid has a wonderful record for quick, safe and lasting relief to Pile sufferers. It will do the same for you or money back. Cotton: Higher; too much rain southwest.

MARKET WAS STRONG

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)— Stock prices displayed a distinctly stronger undertone in today's market. Speculative interest was confined, however, to about a score issues, lack of interest in the general list being reflected in total sales of less than 850,000 shares, the smallest of any full session in about two months.

Professional traders appeared to be marking time pending the outcome of the meeting of U. S. Steel corporation directors late tomorrow. While no change in dividend rate is expected in conservative banking circles hope is still held out in some quarters that a stock dividend distribution would be made at the meeting.

Reports from Paris that the new Poincare government would attempt to save the franc by means of taxes, instead of loans, had a cheerful effect on financial sentiment, which was immediately reflected in the higher rate for French exchange.

Another increase in the price of lead and the publication of additional favorable June earnings statements by class one railroads provided ammunition for those working for higher prices.

Motors again received strong buying support despite the unfavorable showing of the Studebaker company second quarter report, compared with the same period last year.

Oil shares held relatively steady but fear of another period of crude overproduction contained to restrain trading in that group. Transcontinental oil was bid up to its high price of the year on buying influenced by the discovery of a new well in Niger Creek field, Texas, which, company officials believe, proves up an area of 1,600 acres.

Coppers advanced in further response to the recent stiffening of nonferrous metal prices.

Sharp gains also were recorded by a number of tobaccos and specialties.

Rails were quiet but strong with the best gains registered by Atlantic Coast Line, Chesapeake and Ohio, St. Paul preferred, Delaware and Hudson, Louisville and Nashville, Missouri Pacific preferred and Reading.

Commodity prices were mixed. Active wheat futures advanced a cent or more a bushel on reports of continued dry hot weather over the spring crop area in Canada. Cotton rallied 10 to 17 points with buying influenced by the belief that the crop has materially depreciated since the publication of the government report. Raw sugar advanced 1-32 of a cent a pound while coffee futures declined 13 to 29 points on increased offerings of the produce.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent and held steady at that figure all day, with a plentiful supply of funds available. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges showed more stability, with speculators apparently awaiting further developments in the french financial situation before extending their commitments. Demand sterling was steady around $4.85 3-4 and French francs were slightly firmer around 3 1-2 cents. Belgian francs ruled about 8 points higher around 3.52 cents.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)—Curtailment of activity in the bond market today corresponded with the dwindling interest in stock trading, but prices maintained a firm tone. Several erratic price fluctuations marked dealings in domestic bonds, but changes as a rule were held within narrow limits.

With the French financial outlook becoming more encouraging, the trend of foreign obligations was more uniformly upward. French issues extended their recoveries by substantial fractions and marked improvement was noted in Swiss, Belgian, Czechoslovakian and other continental bonds.

Railroad liens followed the upward movement of the carrier stocks, with buying of the merger issues stimulated by the recent progress in completing consolidation plans.

Public offering will be made this week of $15,000,000 Silesian-American corporation 15 year 7 per cent bonds to finance the acquisition of the Giesche zinc properties by American interests. A $12,500,000 offering of Gatineau Power debentures was oversubscribed today.

CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)—Extreme dullness again characterized today's curb market, with prices drifting irregularly lower. With public interest at low ebb and no news developments of sufficiently outstanding importance to influence the general price movement, professional operators found little incentive to either buy or sell.

Oils continued sluggish with indications that many disappointed holders of several issues were getting on every rally. Among the high grade shares, Standard Oil of New York and Tide Water-Associated improved fractionally.

Motors were quiet and fairly steady. Baking and coal shares held firm.

Utilities pointed downward despite the publication of some excellent earnings statements recently. United Gas and Improvement, which recently announced the proposed declaration of a 25 per cent stock dividend, fell back nearly 2 points. Washington Railway and Electric soared 16 points on a few sales.

From a letter to us, Mr. J. Henry Rorebach, President of the Company, summarizes as follows:

BUSINESS: The Connecticut Light and Power Company supplies electric light and power to a population of about 350,000 in an important industrial section of Connecticut, including the cities of Waterbury, New Britain, Meriden, Norwalk and the Naugatuck Valley district. The properties operated, including new construction now in progress, will represent an installed generating capacity of 184,620 horse power, of which 64,600 horse power is hydro-electric (three plants); about 173 miles of high tension transmission lines; 22 substations, and distributing systems in 28 cities and towns.

SECURITY: The First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds are secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a first mortgage on the new hydro-electric development now under construction on the Rocky River, on the existing hydro-electric plant at Stevenson on the Housatonic River and the large steam-electric plant at Devon on tide water, which together will have an installed generating capacity of 145,000 horse power; 148 miles of important transmission lines, and valuable undeveloped water powers; and by a second mortgage, subject to $1,000,000 divisional bonds, on the Company's third hydro-electric plant (9,600 horse power) and 25 miles of transmission lines. They are also a first lien on a 999 year lease of the electric distributing systems in Waterbury, New Britain and a number of other towns.

The Company's present property investment is valued at $43,371,637, or more than twice its $21,107,000 funded debt. The existing owned property alone is valued at $34,380,660, of which over $31,000,000 represents the property on which the $20,025,000 First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds are a first mortgage. The above valuations do not include net current assets of $11,159,608, of which $10,633,804 consists of cash, the greater part of which will be provided from the sale of these $8,000,000 of Bonds and $1,000,000 of 6½% Preferred Stock, and is to be applied toward the Company's construction program for the next two years.

EARNINGS:

	1923	1924	1925	Year Ended June 30, 1926
Gross Earnings	$5,151,859	$5,656,131	$6,488,238	$7,689,799

Net Income	$2,217,900	$2,340,446	$2,816,735	$3,297,530

Present Annual Bond Interest and Rental Requirements, including interest on this issue, $1,570,890

The above net income does not reflect the benefit from the large investment to be made in additional plant and power facilities through the use of the proceeds of this issue of $8,000,000 Bonds and the $1,000,000 Preferred Stock.

SINKING FUND: Annual Sinking Fund, first payment November 1, 1927, to be applied to the purchase or call of Series C bonds, will be sufficient to retire, prior to maturity, about $2,250,000 of the Series C bonds.

We Recommend these Bonds for Investment

MANY BOYS ENJOY "Y" SWIMMING POOL

This summer, the management of the local Y. M. C. A. has arranged to give the junior members the privilege of the Osgood Memorial swimming pool every morning except Sunday, and proof is not lacking that the lads greatly appreciate the daily plunge. Not only is there plenty of splashing, but merry voices make the pool enclosure ring as the large number of boys jump and dive and swim to their heart's content. Under close supervision and with sparkling pure water the conditions are well nigh perfect. The men also enjoy the large "Y" pool in large numbers these hot days. The donor of this beautiful swimming pool has certainly bestowed a real blessing upon countless numbers of men and boys who fully enjoy its hospitality from year to year, said General Secretary Edwin Hill Monday.

FAULKNER AND BEEBE STOLE SLOOP, ARE BOUND OVER AT NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 26—The police court was a busy place this morning for there were nearly a [illegible] of cases when Judge Prince took his seat and Court Officer Frank Corcoran called for order.

Stanley Faulkner and Charles Beebe, young men, the former with a long court record, were charged with stealing the sloop Frances, a 35-foot pleasure craft owned by Dr. Arthur Heublein, of Hartford, and on which he and his wife and son do considerable cruising. The crooks who took the craft had arranged for the theft and after setting out in the boat ran her ashore or where they could leave the boat in some nine feet of water at the stern. Faulkner was the brains of the schemers. He said when he was given the chance to talk that he was guilty, and speaking for Beebe he said he, too, was guilty. Capt. Orton told of mooring the sloop in this harbor, going ashore and leaving everything fast and snug, then returning to the craft's anchorage and finding that the boat had disappeared. He thought the Frances might have gone adrift, so he sought the Coast Guard and then the police station to represent his case to them. The Coast Guard could not help him, but the police started right in and Sergeant Smith learned that a boat had been seen to leave the Frances where she was ashore. He learned that Faulkner was in the boat so he sought out Faulkner and after a talk with him accused him as the thief. Faulkner weakened and confessed his crime, implicating Beebe, who was employed on the towboat Miles Standish. Faulkner told Sergeant Smith where he had hidden a pair of field glasses and a searchlight and gave the officer a note to the attic of the Faulkner home to Faulkner, Sr., telling him to go where he would find the field glasses under the floor. Young Faulkner directed in a note that the glasses should be turned over to the officer. The whole robbery was cleared up by the confession of the robber and the goods and boat were recovered. A sweater and a slip-on are the only property missing from the boat. Faulkner was bound over to the superior court for trial and so was Beebe. The latter was held in the custody of Probation Officer Mansfield in a bond of $3,500, but Faulkner was sent to jail, because he was unable to supply a bail bond.

NEED 937 SIGNATURES TO RENDER PETITION VALID

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 26—The circulators of the referendum petition requesting that a special city election be held for the purpose of permitting the voters of New London to cast their ballots and decide whether the present form of city manager government shall continue to function, or whether the city shall return to the former municipal form of government, started the task today of obtaining 987 added signatures, which number is necessary to secure in order to make the petition valid. City Clerk Julian D. Moran threw out that number of signatures as invalid for various reasons and in conformity with the provisions of the city charter. The circulators have 10 days within which to procure the added signatures and they are confident that this number will be secured within a week, if not before. After the added names have been obtained City Clerk Moran will determine their validity and if the instrument is found to be valid the petition will go to the council that a date may be fixed for the election.

The funeral of Miss Katherine Goss was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at her home, 41 West Coit street, the services being conducted by Rev. Philip M. Kerridge, rector of St. James' Episcopal church. Relatives acted as bearers. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery. Royce H. Goddard, 51, a former resident of New London, died last night at Norwich State hospital, where he had been a patient about three months. He is survived by two brothers, Louis Goddard, this city, and Fred Goddard, Baltimore, Md. Mr. Goddard was a member of the Thames club and Konomoc Hose company. He was born in New London and had resided in this city his entire life and for many years was employed by the former firm of Lyon & Ewald. About six months ago his health began to fail and when medical treatment did not bring about the anticipated beneficial results, Mr. Goddard was admitted to the hospital.

The right of Joseph Douchette, 152 Willetta avenue to operate a car was ordered reinstated today by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel.

An automobile driven by George W. Kilbourne, 146 Ashcraft road, struck an unidentified man on State street last night. The pedestrian refused to reveal his name and declared that he had not suffered injury.

Mrs. D. W. Jones, 178 Lincoln avenue, made complaint to the police last night that the driver of an automobile owned by S. F. Friedman, of Hotel Mohican, was guilty of evasion of responsibility and that she desired the arrest of the driver, declaring that her car had been damaged as a result of the Friedman automobile striking her auto on Bank street, near the corner of Lee avenue. She claimed that the driver operated the auto away without stopping to determine the extent of damage occasioned. Later, Mrs. Jones informed the police that she desired to withdraw the complaint.

YOUTHS UNDER BONDS FOR ALLEGED ASSAULT

(Special to te Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 26.—Zacchary Korn and James Gorra are in serious trouble for an alleged crime they are accused of having committed. Hilda Johnson, a Swedish girl charges them with having assaulted her with intent to commit rape. She is employed as a domestic in Waterford and occasionally got across the bridge separating the towns of Waterford and New London and appeared at Ocean Beach. Korn had been a peddler of ice in that section, so he made the acquaintance of the girl. Miss Johnson or Jansen was found near the beach in a condition of hysteria by a pedestrian who turned her over to the custody of the police. She is now in a hospital for treatment and for an examination. Both the accused men deny their guilt, but not so forcefully as they might insist that they are innocent. The attorney for one of the men, Korn, represented that his client had told him that he did not see the Johnson girl on the day of the alleged assault, but the story she told to the police was absolutely a denial of that statement, for she declared that Korn was with her as she alleged.

Gorra's attorney told the court that his client was connected with the case only from having the acquaintance of Korn. It has been learned that Gorra has been passing some time at the beach, having came here from New York for that purpose. The young men are held in a heavy bond each for a hearing when the girl is able to appear in court to accuse them.

Shirley Lee Hummell, wife of a restaurant waiter, was charged with intoxication at Ocean Beach. Her husband accused her and reported to the police that she was sporting with a sailor. Shirley was said by the prosecutor to have sought to hire a bathhouse with the sailor, Clark L. Gates, but to have been unsuccessful in that. When she was arrested she was accused of being a person of lascivious conduct, but that charge was not pressed against her in court. She admitted through her attorney that she was drunk at the beach, though. That brought her a fine of $10. She paid it. There were many drunks taken into custody during Saturday night and Sunday. Several were first offenders according to the police record. They were allowed their freedom on suspended judgment.

Frank Greenman, for drunkenness and offensive conduct, was fined $10 and sent to jail for a stay of 30 days. He has often been prosecuted and this time was charged with creating a disturbance at his home.

Thomas Williams came in from Oswegatchie last week and brought with him $200 that he had saved by work there. He got drunk and was relieved of all that which he did not spent and today was "broke." He was shown leniency last week that he might not out of town. Then he fell down the stairs at the court room when he left and for that was locked up till it was time for the train, on which he was to get away from New London, to leave. He didn't depart, but was scooped up in the police dragnet Saturday night. He will not go away now till about the first of September.

Auto law and traffic ordinance violators appeared and answered to their names when they were called on to plead. In aggravated cases fines were imposed while in instances where the offense was of a trivial nature judgment was suspended. Max Soltz, among the autoists, was fined. He was charged with failing to heed the signals of a traffic officer. Though he denied that he was guilty the misdemeanor was proven.

One of the big piles on the municipal pier was wrecked this evening when a line attached to the tug Charles McWilliams, taking on a supply of fuel, strained so much on the pile that it parted, principally because of the decayed condition of the pile. The tug came dangerously close to colliding with launches Griswold and Belleview, which were moored on the opposite side of the pier.

Morris Luchansky, 20 Boardwalk, Ocean Beach, made complaint to the police this afternoon that while his commercial truck was parked on Bentley avenue last night a spare tire was stolen from the auto.

John Castanna, 34 Jefferson avenue, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman David Nagle charged with violation of the city's parking laws on three counts, parking less than 10 feet away from a corner, blocking a crossing and parking away from the curb a distance in excess of a foot. He will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning.

An automobile operated by Miss Ella Phillips, of Waterford, struck Vincent Secrelli, of 17½ Jefferson avenue, on that avenue, near Rogers street, this afternoon. The boy was attempting to run to the opposite side of the avenue when he was struck by the mudguard and knocked down. The child was taken to the office of a physician where an examination revealed that he had received only severe bruises.

Nathan Barlow, of North Stonington died Sunday night at the Mitchell ward of Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, death ending a lingering illness. Although ill a long time, Mr. Barlow had been a patient at the New London hospital but a few days. He was a Spanish war veteran, having served in Company E, Third, Connecticut Infantry of Westerly.

Robert N. Hickey, son of Mrs. Catherine Hickey, 85 State street, and Miss Jane Hendry, daughter of Mrs. Sarah A. Hendry, 207 Ocean avenue, were married this morning at 8 o'clock at St. Joseph's church by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons, the pastor. Edward S. Huntley, cousin of the groom, was best man, and Miss Barbara Hendry, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mrs. Hickey was until recently a teacher at Nathan Hale Grammar school. Mr. Hickey is employed as assistant manager of the Piere Butler, Pierce Co.

Lieut. Raymond J. Manerman, U. S. C. G., of Brooklyn, attached to the U. S. S. Davis, and Miss Ethel Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Murphy, 42 Garfield avenue, were married at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley. Lieut. Raymond Marron, U. S. C. G., was best man and Miss Marian E. Murphy, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mrs. Manerman was until a short time ago employed at the Harbor school.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Edward F. Murray, son of Thomas R. Murray, 9 Jefferson avenue, to Miss Ellen Davidson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Davidson, 15 Blackhall street.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Beach, 82 Truman street, and niece, Miss Edith Morrison, left yesterday for Canada, where they will remain a fortnight.

Richard Warren, of Groton, was fined $25 and costs on a charge of intoxication, Warren pleading guilty. He was arrested July 23 by Officer C. Fay Chapman on Thames street. Warren originally was arrested on Thames street charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. The charge was not substantiated by fact for Warren was arrested when he was seen to alight from his automobile, which was parked alongside the highway of Thames street. The automobile was motionless and no witnesses could be found who would testify that Warren had been driving the automobile while drunk.

George Brown, 8 Grand street, this city, was fined $100 and costs charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Upon recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney Warren Burrows, $50 of the fine was ordered remitted. Brown was arrested the 24th inst., by State Police Officer George Sisson, who found Brown drunk and driving the automobile on Thames street. Brown admitted having had three or four drinks.

Mrs. Clara Scott, of Hartford; Mrs. Charles Ramage and infant daughter, Uncasville; Mrs. Cowle Johnson and infant daughter, Poquonoc Bridge; Mrs. John Muise and infant daughter, 99 Bayonet street; Thomas White, 411 Bank street, and Mrs. Ralph Dennis and infant son, 254 Harrington street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Sunday and today.

COUNCILOR MAY COMES BACK AT CHAMBER AND CHEST

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 26.—Councilor James A. May got after the spokesman for the chamber of commerce and the community chest for his presumption in criticising the city council a week ago for granting permission to out of town people to sell flowers on the streets of the city, the proceeds of the sale to be donated to serving children at Passaic, N. J., where labor troubles were prevailing. He declared that the letters of the chest and the chamber were dictation and criticism that was undeserved, unjustified and unwarranted and such as should be resented by the council.

He asked whether the council must ask the chamber of commerce and the community chest when this body proposes to do anything, or whether these civic bodies must give sanction to the council before the latter exercises its privilege of assisting a worthy charity when the council so desires.

The council voted to lease property at 186 Garfield avenue to A. C. Belleveur & Son company, a machinery concern, at a rental of $420 a year. It was also voted to buy tile pipe, at a cost of about $948.40 from Raymond & Alexander company.

There were 13 applications for permits to erect buildings, or to alter them, and all were granted. They included six garages and four cottages.

Before You Order Lumber
Be Sure You Know Exactly
How to Specify What You Want
THERE are just as many grades of lumber as there are kinds of wood. And the line of demarcation is so fine between the grades that even experts often argue where one grade stops and the next higher starts.
Take flooring, we know of many instances where customers knew exactly what grade they wanted, but did not know the correct terms to use when ordering it. The result was that with every good intent the order was filled from a different grade of flooring than the customer wanted and endless trouble and hard feeling existed.
This can easily be avoided by knowing how to specify exactly what you want. Our grading of lumber is carefully and painstakingly carried out. It is our purpose to give you exactly what you want and we are ready to go to any extreme to see that you get it.
So to be doubly sure that we know what you want phone us or call in and talk over your requirements. Often we may be able to save you money by pointing out how a lower and cheaper grade will do as well.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Connecticut Light and Power Bonds

The Connecticut Light and Power company has sold to a banking syndicate headed by Lee, Higginson & Co. and Estabrook & Co., and including Putnam and company, Hincks Bros. & company and Charles N. Scranton & company, and additional issue of $8,000,000 first and refunding mortgage 4-1-2 per cent sinking fund bonds, series C, dated July 1, 1926 and due July 1, 1956.

Connecticut Light and Power company supplies electric light and power to a population of about 350,000 in an important industrial section of Connecticut, including Waterbury, New Britain, Meriden, Norwalk and the Naugatuck Valley district.

The bonds are secured in the opinion of counsel by a first mortgage on new electric development now under construction on the Rocky river, on the hydro-electric plant at Stevenson on the Housatonic river, and the large steam electric plant at Devon on tidewater, together having an installed generating capacity of 145,000 hp. on 148 miles of important transmission lines and valuable undeveloped waterpowers. They are also secured by a second mortgage subject to $1,082,000 divisional bonds on the company's third hydro-electric plant with 25 miles of transmission lines, and are a first lien on 999 years lease on the electric distributing systems in Waterbury and several other towns. Company's present investment is valued at $43,346,637 on more than twice its funded debt. This valuation does not include net current assets of $11,387,292 in part resulting from the sale of these $8,000,000 bonds and $1,000,000 preferred stock to be applied towards company's construction program for the next two years. Net income has grown from $3,317,900 in 1923 to $3,297,530 for year ended June 30, 1926 although the latter figure does not reflect the benefit from the large investments to be made in additional plant and power facilities through proceeds of this bond issue and the $1,000,000 additional preferred stock. Sinking fund provisions are sufficient to retire prior to maturity at least $2,250,000 of these bonds.

The bonds are legal investments for savings banks in Connecticut and are exempt from Connecticut state tax if held by residents and company will refund to holders. Residents of Massachusetts income tax not in excess of six per cent. The Pennsylvania 4 mill tax will be refunded to holders residents in that state.

The bankers are offering these bonds at 95 1-4 and accrued interest to yield about 4.80 per cent.

Broadway Theater

Rex, untamed, unconquered, is the star or another unique film production directed by Fred Jackman. This is The Devil Horse, showing today and Wednesday at the Broadway theater. In it the fiery, spirited black stallion that Hal Roach found chained in a reformation stall displays his magnificent personality in a story written for him by Mr. Roach.

Rex plays the title role—that of a huge stallion of the wilderness who is feared by the Indians because of his killing power. Surely, they thought, in their superstitious terror, this great beast who stamped out life with his killing hoofs, was no ordinary beast. He must be a supernatural creature—a creation of the devil.

But there comes into the Devil Horse's life a man—a man he recognizes as the friend of his babyhood—a friend of those happy days before the Indians came and made war on the little caravan of home seekers and left him desolate and smarting from his first experience with cruelty and pain. And Devil Horse and man became comrades in dangerous events that follows—events in which figure the girl the man loves and the mare the Devil Horse loves.

Honor among thieves is found to be an axiom throughout the thrilling sequences of the new Associated Exhibitors crook melodrama. The Shadow of the Law, which is the second feature today and Wednesday, starring Clara Bow, Stuart Holmes, Stanley Forrest and Ralph Lewis.

The tense story of society and the contrasting underworld is an adaptation of Two Gates, the popular novel by Henry Chapman Ford, and was directed for the Rayart-Beck Productions, Inc., by Wallace Worsley.

A new Kinograms is also shown.

NORWICH WOMAN GIVEN FINE FOR SPEEDING

At the Monday morning session of the Groton town court, Julia A. Love, of 29 Yerrington avenue, Norwich was fined $10 and costs, $5 of the latter being omitted, for speeding by Judge Cornelius C. Costello. The original charge against Miss Love was reckless driving, but no evidence of reckless driving was produced to the court to convict her.

Miss Love pleaded not guilty to the speeding charge, the plea was overruled, and she was found guilty after testimony revealed that Miss Love in turning a curve going to Groton Long Point, struck another automobile operated by Robert A. Boyd of West Orange, N. J., traveling in the opposite direction.

Both Miss Love and Boyd introduced several witnesses. State Policeman H. J. Albright of the Groton barracks made the arrest after a complaint was registered at the state police headquarters. The accident happened Sunday morning. Miss Love claimed that the accident was inevitable and that she did all in her power to prevent the collision.

The Boyd car suffered the greatest damage of the two. The left front and rear fenders were ripped off the car and the running board was completely demolished. The only damage suffered by the Love car was a slight dent on the left fender.

TWO CHANGE PLEAS, PAY FINES AND START JAIL SENTENCES

At an extra session of the city court at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon William Roderick, 33, Woonsocket, R. I., and Belmiro Rodrigues, 33, East Providence, changed their pleas of not guilty to guilty on charges of keeping liquor with intent to sell. Judge Arthur F. Libby fined each $200 and costs, remitted $100 in each case, and sentenced both to serve 10 days in jail. Judge Libby remitted $100 on each fine in view of the fact that there was no actual sale involved in the case and also because Belmiro Rodrigues has five small children depending on him for support. The men paid their fines and were taken to jail about 4:30 o'clock.

It was after the regular morning session of the court that Judge Libby learned that the men were willing to change their pleas to guilty. He then arranged to call the additional session of the court at 4 o'clock. Attorney T. J. Kelly, represented the men at the morning session.

When the case was called for trial at the morning session Joseph Soares No. 128 Talman street, testified that he rented the basement of the house to Belmiro Rodrigues for $3 per month, that Belmiro had had the three-room basement for three months. Belmiro, when hiring the place, informed him, Soares said, that he (Belmiro) was a dealer in Portuguese cheese, coffee and bologna. The witness stated that he did not see the accused, sell any liquor.

Following Soares' testimony Police Sergts. John T. Casey, and Mathew Delaney and Officer Elmer E. Allen told of finding liquor, empty cans and kegs, in the basement, and of arresting the two accused who were found in the building.

Fidel Williams, who claimed he was summoned to court as a witness in the case, testified that he was aware that the accused were in the liquor business and that he had bought liquor from them.

A local man was in court for intoxication and for causing trouble in his home. He was put on probation for one year. A Greeneville man was in court on a charge of beating his wife with a lash. He drew a fine of $5 and costs and paid a total of $16.05. Another local man appeared before Judge Libby on a charge of beating his wife and blacking her eyes. The case after a partial hearing, went over until Thursday morning.

Two men were each fined $10 and costs for breach of the peace and a transient went to jail as he was unable to pay a fine of $5 and costs for intoxication.

Michael Lybeck, 51, Moosup, paid $3 fiat on a charge of violation of the motor vehicle laws in not having his automobile registration with him.

POETRY

An Idle Hour

'Twas in the month when roses bloom,
And lark first learns to spread th wing;
When God says to His song-birds "Sing,"
And to His flowers, "Give forth perfume."

How long ago? I only know
I whistled, whistled by first tune,
One idle hour in leafy June,
So long ago—so long ago.

I had been chasing butterflies
Down in a meadow near the run,
Which still goes singing to the sun,
And still reflects cerulean skies.

Till wearied, if a boy may be,
I sought the cool embrace of shade,
Where singing brook a circuit made
To bathe the roots of aspen tree.

No marring foot but mine had pressed
The verdin grass that summer day;
No village boys were there at play—
Secure the robin warmed her nest.

And there the linnet piped her lay
To linnet in the sighing birch,
And catbird from his lofty perch
Sang anthems to the listening jay.

The quaking asp, the singing bird,
The wagon rumbling o'er the bridge,
The crowing cock across the ridge,
The rippling brook, I, whistling, heard.

And this vague query added joy,
That idle hour in leafy June,
Long hours ago in life's new moon—
"Could Adam whistle when a boy?"

Granville M. Ballard.

Now You Tell One

I love the sweltering Summer days,
Of them I never tire;
No one can ever know what joy
It gives me to perspire!
The days in Winter are so cold
I do not like them much;
I yearn for dog days, when I stick
To everything I touch!

I like to see the mercury rise
To ninety-six or eight;
I like to feel my collar wilt—
O, that is simply great!
I like to spend the sweltering nights
Beneath a single sheet,
And when I kick the covering off
My joy is just complete!

I like to have the paper say
How hot it's going to be;
I like to hear my friends ask if
It's hot enough for me.
Some may prefer the Spring or Fall—
No bug like that have I,
Give them October, if they choose,
But give me hot July!

KALEIDOSCOPE

Having obtained two tickets to a theater, Louis Rosenberg, of New York stepped into a cigar store just before 8 o'clock to telephone his wife to meet him. While he was telephoning Julius Siebert, owner of the store, decided to call it a day, locked the door and went home. The show was almost over before the police could locate the owner and have him unlock his store.

At Redondo Beach, Cal., there recently was tested a new motordriven life buoy designed to enable a rescuer to reach a drowning person quickly. As described in Popular Science Monthly, it is four feet long and looks like a small motor boat. On the stern is a bar to which one or more persons can cling. A button on the stern bar starts and stops the motor, while the operator acts as the rudder.

An Exeter N. H., woman has a handsome collie which she thinks is possessed of rare intelligence for a dog. The woman rather likes to display her dog's qualifications, so to entertain a friend she called the collie and told him to go upstairs and bring down her slippers. The collie canted his head and listened intently and bounded off, to return quickly bearing a well-worn pair of corsets which he proudly dropped at the feet of his mistress.

In England modest houses all of steel are meeting the needs of workmen of small means. And now, in recent months, steel barns and steel bungalows have been making their appearance in increasing numbers in the United States, according to Popular Science Monthly. In Tarrytown, N. Y., for example, there has just been completed a novel dwelling in which the entire framework is formed of "metal lumber" riveted in the shop, transported to the site and there bolted together. The builders say that any person who knows how to use a monkey wrench, plumb line and carpenter's square can easily erect the frame for the house by following the plans.

TROPICAL HURRICANE IS COMING UP ATLANTIC COAST

In Lower Florida Wind of Velocity of 100 Miles an Hour Caused Distress to Shipping, Damaged Crops and Crippled Wires—Miami Reported Damage of $100,000—Twenty Yachts Anchored at Palm Beach Broke Away and Were Smashed—Clyde Liner Seminole Was Forced to Put Into Jacksonville.

JACKSONVILLE, July 27.—(AP)—Riding on a wind which at times reached a velocity of 100 miles an hour, the storm which came out of the Caribbean sea yesterday hit the lower Florida east coast today and was traveling up the Atlantic seaboard tonight, leaving in its wake distressed shipping, damaged crops and crippled wire facilities.

The storm was reported late today centered between Palm Beach and Jupiter, Fla., apparently moving slowly northwestward.

Miami reported damage of $100,000, three-fourths of which was suffered by the Avocada pear crop. A lineman met death there when he came in touch with a live wire atop a telegraph pole. This was the only loss of life reported late today in the storm swept area. In Miami the rain ceased at noon and the wind had dropped to a moderate force late today.

Palm Beach received the full force of the storm in an 80-mile an hour wind. The barometer went to 29.03, but the blow abated at 3 p. m. Ocean drive and the fashionable sea front boulevard of Palm Beach, fronted by palatial homes was said to have been badly damaged by high waves. Trees were uprooted and the roofs lifted off several houses.

Twenty yachts, anchored at the yacht club pier, broke away and were smashed.

The Italian steamship Ansaldo San Giorgio Secondo caught the full force of the storm off Jupiter inlet and late today was fighting for existence. Five ships, the Gulf of Mexico, West Harshaw, Orizaba, Willett and Avondale, were in the vicinity of the distressed vessel which had broken her steering apparatus.

The gale struck the winter play ground at 60 miles an hour accompanied by heavy rainfall.

CLYDE LINER SEMINOLE FORCED TO TURN BACK

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 27.—(AP)—The Clyde liner Seminole has turned back from its southbound trip, New York to Miami, and will dock here at 6 o'clock, local officials of the company were advised here this afternoon.

Increased intensity of the tropical hurricane which was sweeping the lower east coast waters caused the captain of the vessel to change his plans to again proceed toward Miami.

This morning the vessel had wirelessed Jacksonville that she was turning back but later advices were to the effect that the boat in view of lessening weather hazards, had again proceeded on its way.

Walter J. Bennett, government meteorologist at Tampa announced this afternoon that the hurricane was proceeding north-northwest up the Atlantic seaboard almost parallel to the shore.

SALOONKEEPER ADMITTED ATTACKING CLYDE PETEET

TIA JUANA, Lower California, Mexico, July 27.—(AP)—Luis Amador, Tia Juana saloonkeeper, admitted in court here today he attacked Clyde Peteet, American girl, who visited his resort last February with his sister, Audrey, and their parents.

The saloonkeeper was the first of five defendants charged with criminal assault upon the girls to take the witness stand.

As soon as the jury had been sworn, Amador, under direction from the court walked before the jury, calmly folder his arms and told his side of the story that became public last February, when the Peteet family, consisting of the father, Thomas M. Peteet, his wife and two daughters ended their lives in a suicide pact at San Diego.

He testified that the family had visited the saloon where he was employed and that after drinking the father sought introduction to Chief of Police Llanos, one of the defendants. Amador said he danced with Clyde Peteet, who later, asked him to take her home, as her father was intoxicated.

He took her to a hotel, where the assault is declared to have taken place, but denied any resistance by the girl, who he said was slightly intoxicated.

The court also asked Amador if he he was aware of the fact that a witness was expected to testify later that Clyde was so remorseful over her relations with him that she had threatened to slay herself. Amador shrugged his shoulders, indicating he did not know it.

It was announced that five witnesses, including a doctor, Jack Emery, a bartender, Juanita Kizar, a restaurant owner, Jack Watkins and Miss McGarvie, an entertainer, were expected to testify for the defense.

STATUES IN PARIS MUTILATED IN PROTEST AGAINST U. S.

PARIS, July 27.—(AP)—Nicholas Jarovenko, a 39-year old Russian laborer, today mutilated the figures of a French pollu and an American soldier at the foot of the Alan Seeger statue in the Place Des Etats Unis as an act of protest against the United States.

The monument was erected in honor of the American volunteers who served with the French in the World war and was unveiled in 1923.

Jarovenko admitted to police his act was premediated, and that while he planned to smash the figure of the American soldier, he inadvertently broke the hand of the French pollu. He used a stone mason's hammer.

At first Jarovenko told the police he wanted to demonstrate against the United States because it had refused credits to France, causing an economic crisis serious for the workers. Later he told a rambling story, enumerating alleged grievances of France against the United States ranging from the sentencing of Sacco and Vanzetti to the exchange crisis, which he holds responsible for his being out of work. He threw in a few caustic remarks about Americans wearing tortoise shell rimmed glasses. He considered it his duty, as a Russian ally of the French to seek redress for these grievances.

Fear Confiscation of Churches in Mexico

Saturday the Last Day That Catholic Priests Will be Permited to Perform Their Rites.

MEXICO CITY, July 27.—(AP)—With the government's decision still unannounced as to whether it will declare seditious the pastoral letter issued by the archbishops and bishops of Mexico, and indict those responsible for the document, Catholics today again crowded all the churches eager to perform their devotions before Saturday. This is the last day that priests will officiate by order of the Episcopate.

Additional distress is felt in Catholic circles because of reports, thus far not substantiated that the government may take over the church buildings because the priests have abandoned them, and convert them into schools and libraries or use them for other purposes.

With the object of preventing this, the Catholic authorities have decided that when the priests depart they will leave the churches in the hands of committees of loyal laymen appointed by the priests of each congregation. They are also discussing whether it is possible for such lay caretakers to conduct ceremonials, thereby giving the government no opportunity to say that the churches have been completely abandoned as justification for their seizure.

Standing for hours in the broiling sun thousands, mostly women with babes in their arms, waited patiently their turn today to enter the Mexico City cathedral, where Archbishop Mora Y Del Rio confirmed several thousand children. The cathedral, as on every day for more than a week, was jammed even to its greater capacity. Masses were said almost constantly. Every square foot of floor space was occupied by kneeling, praying humanity.

Outside, long lines anxious to enter, curled through the entire extent of the cathedral courtyard, even into the adjoining plaza on which the presidential palace also faces. The president, if he cared to do so, could have looked from the windows of the palace and seen the great gathering in and about the cathedral.

Between twenty-five and thirty thousand children have been confirmed in the cathedral alone within the last week or ten days. A great wave of Catholics has been sweeping into that edifice as well as all other Catholic churches to fulfill the rites of their religion before the suspension of the functions of the priests in Mexico.

The Mexican government is firm in its determination to enforce its religious regulations on August 1.

OFFICIAL LYNCHED FOR ATTACKING CATHOLIC PRIEST

MEXICO CITY, July 27.—(AP)—The first death from violence in the present conflict between the government and the Catholic church is reported by the Aguascalientes correspondent of "El Universal Grafico." He reports the lynching of the mayor of Nochistan, state of Zacatecas, who had attacked a local Catholic priest.

According to the story as sent by the correspondent, the priest and the mayor, Humberto Cervantes, had an argument in the mayor's office regarding registration. Finally the mayor drew a pistol and fired at the priest, and then ordered him under arrest.

The villagers, on learning of this, became infuriated, formed themselves into a mob and hanged the mayor.

No further details have been received, and the report has not been confirmed from other sources.

ARCHBISHOP OF MEXICO OVERCOME BY EXHAUSTION

MEXICO CITY, July 27—(AP)—The archbishop of Mexico, the Most Rev. Mora Y Del Rio, fainted through exhaustion in the cathedral yesterday during the gruelling hours in which he confirmed about 5,000 children.

The great assemblage of women carrying infants for bpatism, appalled, and fearful that the archbishop had been mortally stricken, dropped to their knees and prayed for his recovery. Distressed attendants carried the venerable prelate to a nearby room and hurriedly administered remedies.

The archbishop revived, and shortly, despite the [illegible] frantic protests of his associates, returned with tottering steps and continued his holy offices through sheer will power dominating his completely enervated body.

COOLIDGE AND EDSEL FORD DISCUSSED CIVIL AVIATION

PAUL SMITH'S N. Y., July 27—(AP)—The development of civil aviation in the United tates was discussed today at White Pine camp by President Coolidge and Edsel Ford, son of the Detroit manufacturer who is heading the aviation activities of the Ford interests.

Mr. Ford, accompanied by Mrs. Ford, arrived at the summer white house this morning to remain until tomorrow, and at the same time Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Italy, came for a visit of several days.

Beyond a brief announcement that aviation and business conditions generally would be discussed, no intimation was given of the conversations between Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Ford. No indication was given as to whether the leasing of the nitrate and power properties at Muscle Shoals, Alabama, was mentioned.

The visit of Mr. Child was described as social and it was said Mr. Coolidge did not expect to discuss the foreign situation with him, as Mr. Child has been out of the diplomatic service for two years and recently had been devoting his attention to domestic matters.

Besought Sentence to the Electric Chair

Request Made in Municipal Court in Philadelphia by Self-Acknowledged Incorrigible Criminal.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—(AP)—A young man of 26, neatly dressed and apparently refined, stepped to the bar in municipal court today and asked Judge William M. Lewis to send him to the electric chair, because he knew himself to be an incorrigible ciminal. The request was made by William M. Moore of Boston.

He explained that since he was two years old he had spent most of his life in various penal institutions, starting with a reform school farm, where he was reared. Further, he declared, he had abandoned hope of learning anything except crime and felt that society would be better off if he were removed permanently. He was sentanced to serve three to six years in the penitentiary.

He admitted the raising of a check given to a store here recently, for which he was arrested, and told also that he had practiced the fraud for years. He said he was wanted in New York, Boston and Mt. Holyoke, Mass., for similar offenses, and that he had served more than half a dozen prison terms.

"I haven't been free for more than five months at a time since I was two years old," Moore stated. "I was reared on a reform school farm. I never learned anything in my whole life but how to be crooked. I associated with master minds in those places. It used to be my keenest leasure to learn a new trick in each jail."

"No, Judge, I really think there isn't any reform for me," the man replied to a question by the court. "I think I'd be better dead. You would be doing the community a great favor if you would send me to the electric chair, and I wouldn't mind a bit. If you send me out of here, I'll do the same thing over again. I can't help myself.

"I am better off dead. I have often thought of suicide. Once I swore off, but the old urge came back to pass just one more check, and before I was finished I had passed many."

"Well," said Judge Lewis, "there would be a chance for you, if you had the moral fibre. But as long as business men cash checks for strangers, so long we will have to protect them from men like you. Three to six years in the Eastern penitentiary."

PROHIBITION DISCUSSED AT SESSION OF GOVERNORS

CHEYENNE, WYO., July 27.—(AP)—It is distinctly the province of the federal government to enforce prohibition and state governments should lend their support and every police force for the upholding of the "dry" law, Governors Brewster of Maine and Trumbull of Connecticut declared today in addresses before the annual governors conference.

Their arguments were seconded by Governors Walter M. Pierce, Oregon, W. J. Fields, Kentucky, and Adam McMullen, Nebraska.

The extension of federal police powers to the field of local government was the remedy urged by Governor Brewster to cuch the increasing crime wave, which he said is "intimately allied with prohibition, the scent of liquor running acros sthe trail of every crime."

Governor Trumbull advocated that officials to enforce the "dry" law be selected with consideration as to their integrity and attitude towadrs prohibition.

A discussion took place among the governors on prison contract labor and its economic effect son the industrial market with Governor Billings of Vermont presiding.

The conference session late today was held in a typical western setting—a cattle ranch 25 miles north of here. The ranch house, surrounded by corrals, filled with cow ponies and with cowpunchers as attendants in chaps and somebreros, gave the eastern and southern state executives a glimpse of the real west.

GUNMAN GETS 35 YEARS IN JOLIET PENITENTIARY

CHICAGO, July 27.—(AP)—Martin J. Durkin, shiek gunman who killed Edwin Shanahan, a federal agent, today was sentenced to 35 years in Joliet penitentiary after a motion for a new trial had been overruled. A jury had fixed the punishment.

Durkin's face bruised and scratched as a result of beatings he received recently at the hands of other prisoners in the Cook county jail, was devoid of expression as the sentence was pronounced. His two sisters were in court but his mother was absent.

"The verdict is a just one and followed a fair and impartial trial," Judge Harry B. Miller said. He granted a 60 day stay of execution to permit attorneys to prepare a bill of exceptions on which an appeal may be based.

Durkin, sought throughout the country for several months after killing the federal officer who was trying to arrest him for transporting a stolen automobile pleaded at his tria that he did not know Chanahan was an officer.

Durkin was caught near St. Louis and still is awaiting trial on a charge of having slain a policeman when he shot his way out of a police trap here during the hunt for him.

They disappeared from Hamilton ten days ago much to the concern of the police and their parents. They reached Worcester today and police, acting on information from Hamilton, found them. They said they were married in Derby, Conn., yesterday. No charge was placed against them pending information from Hamilton.

FINANCIAL RESTORATION OF FRANCE TAKING SHAPE

Poincare Wins 418 to 31 Demand That Bills be Referred to the Finance Committee, With Instruction to Report Them Out for Friday's Session—Indications are That Poincare's Financial Projects Will be Voted Before August 8.

PARIS, July 27.—(AP)—The chamber of deputies today voted confidence in M. Poincare and the new government. On his declaration of policy, the premier received a vote of 358 to 131, the largest any French cabinet has received since the 1924 elections.

M. Poincare then won a second victory, 418 to 31, on his demand that his bills for financial restoration be referred to the finance committee of the chamber and that the committee be instructed to report them out for Friday's session.

The national union character of the new ministry was never better illustrated than when Poincare, Herriot and Briand, sitting in that order from left to right, listened impassively to the extreme left onslaughts on their last political careers, and then exchanged smiles, knowing that their majority was assured in advance.

The new procedure in the chamber, restricting deputies in interventions, which was adopted just prior to M. Poincare's accession to the premiership, worked magicly and allowed the house to adjourn at 5.50 p. m., so, when disgruntled government employes tried to rush the police cordons surrounding the Palais Bourbon and reach the chamber shortly afterward, they learned there was no government there to receive them. Later they attempted a manifestation before the senate. But the approach of the dinner hour caused a marked dwindling of their enthusiasm.

M. Poincare, despite his strenuous efforts in organizing his cabinet last week and in getting his colleagues to agree to his financial measures, appeared as sturdy and vigorous as when he jumped into the chamber as premier in January, 1922, and even younger than when he announced his decision, January, 1923, to occupy the Ruhr. He was calm in the face of communist and socialist demonstrations, and let pass many slurs on his former policies. He stuck strictly to the job in hand.

To Vote Before August 8.

From all indications today, when he presents his ministry to the senate he should be able to keep up his schedule and have all his financial projects voted before August 8.

The financial ills of France, says the premier, have been due in the past to unbalanced budgets, and in the present, to the fall in the currency. The first item will be rigorous economy in the state services. The 1926 budget originally was balanced, but since the heavy expenditures in the Moroccan and other campaigns, increased pay of state employes, the rising cost in living and other extraordinary expenses due to the fall of the franc are all to be consodered, the government will be forced to ask for new credits.

The treasury is no longer in a position to meet normal payments, and the government once more must resort to additional taxation. First will come indirect taxation, because such returns are immediate. Although the sacrifice demanded of the country is heavy, it is pointed out, such measures are less dangerous than inflation. The increased revenues will be turned over to a sinking fund for the gradual redemption of national defense bonds.

Provisions of the Bill.

The bill itself comprises 29 articles.

Article 1 authorizes the government to legislate by decree until December 31, 1926, with respect to the discharge or removal of employes in the state services.

Article 2 gives the government authority to readjust by decree taxes, according to the present value of the currency, in no case higher than six times the existing rates of July, 1914, for taxes existing on that date and six times the original amount of the taxes created since then.

Article 3 provides for a special transportation tax on beers, wines and mineral waters.

Article 4 fixes the tax on railroad passenger fares at 32 1-2 per cent. and on freight rates at 11 1-2 per cent.

Article 5 increases taxes on automobiles.

Articles 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 deal with river and canal freights, imposing a tax of 5 per cent. on the value of the freight.

Article 11 fixes a business turnover tax at the uniform rate of 2 per cent.

Article 12 concerns the turnover taxes on export business, which will pay 12 per cent. on luxury articles, and 1.5 per cent. on other commodities.

Articles 13, 14 and 15 are taken up with the customs tariff, the government is empowered to readjust these dues by decree.

Article 16 increases by 50 per cent. the income tax on stocks and bonds.

Article 17 reduces the tax on stock exchange transactions from 34 to 50 centimes per cent.

Articles 18, 19 and 20 deal with a special supplementary tax on first transfers of realty and good will in business, which is fixed at 7 per cent. and inheritance taxes. It is provided that the taxes on inheritances shall not exceed 25 per cent. in the case of direct descendants, 35 per cent. for collateral and 40 per cent. for non-related, legatees. The proceeds of both these taxes will go to the sinking fund.

Articles 21 and 26 concern direct taxes, principally the income tax. The schedule of income taxe rates is increased all-round. On industrial and commercial profit the increase is 50 per cent. At the same time the incidence of smaller incomes is modified, so that o nsalaries under 40,000 francs there is no increase. Moreover the rate of the general income tax is reduced to 30 per cent.

Article 27 opens a credit of 65,000,000 francs for a provisional increase in the salaries of government employes.

Article 28 opens credits of 1,150,000,000 francs to enable the treasury to meet the charges of the external debt not covered by special revenue and pay interest on the floating debt.

Article 29 provides that the credit of 19 odd millions for printing the famous stock coupon record books, made available by abandonment of the scheme, be devoted to increasing the number of tax collectors.

M'KINLEY'S CAMPAIGN IN ILL. COST HIM PERSONALLY $350,000

CHICAGO, July 27.—(AP)—Senator William B. McKinley's unsucessful campaign for renomination in the recent Illinois primary cost him personally $350,000, it was disclosed today before the senate campaign funds committee.

This compares with the $253,000 which Allen F. Moore has testified was the total expended on bphalf of Frank L. Smith, who defeated McKinley. Each sum is considerably in excess of the $195,000 outlay for Truman H. Newberry in Michigan, which the senate formally condemned in the resolution by which Newberry was confirmed in his right to a seat.

Counting the $20,000 which George E. Brennan, democratic national committeeman, has told the senate investigators he spent to win the democratic senate nomination, the total expenditure in the contest for the senate developed during the two days of the inquiry here is $623,000.

This is exclusive of $129,894 which Roy O. West, secretary of the republican national committee, testified during the day, was spent in Cook county by the Deneen faction of the republican party and which supported Senator McKinley.

West disclosed another $10,000 contribution by Samuel Insull, utility magnate, this one to the Deneen group, and open charged that the Crowe-Barrett republican party faction in Cook county and George E. Brennan had a working agreement whereby they combined to support some republican candidates and some democratic candidates for county offices. He added they usually were able to get the men they wanted.

GREAT BRITAIN TO HELP TO STOP LIQUOR SHIPMENTS

LONDON, July 27.—(AP)—Great Britain and the United States agreed today upon measures designed to stem the tide of illicit liquor shipments flowing into America.

Brigadier General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of dry enforcement in conference with British government officials has framed eight recommendations and concluded the task of what is considered by unofficial observers as the greatest blow struck to trans-Atlantic bootleggers since the enactment of the Volstead law governing the 18th amendment to the constitution.

The recommendations will become effective as soon as the machinery can be set up to put the working agreement in motion.

The regulations, aimed particularly at the Bahama Islands off the coast of Florida, as well as other points along the United States coast where liquor is constantly seeping through will necessarily be kept secret for some time. The first likely to know when the regulations are in actual operation and whether they will be successful, will be the master bootleggers who fall into the traps.

WAS ASKED TO SIGN HER MAIDEN NAME TO CHECKS

HARTFORD, July 27—(AP)—Mrs. Winfield Scott Rogers, of Bantam, probably the only woman who has been the executive head of a Connecticut industry, has been asked by the board of directors of the Bantam Ball Bearing company, of which she is now treasurer, to sign her maiden name, "Nellie M. Rogers," but they lacked official documents, it was said today by her husband.

The latter, founder of the company, is now president, which office Mrs. Rogers resigned at the time of her marriage about two years ago. Her husband was then chairman of the executive board. She had been president about three years and treasurer nearly 16 years, working up from a stenographer's job which she had when the company was started in 1905.

RECORD EARNING MADE BY GENERAL MOTORS CORP.

NEW YORK, July 27.—(AP)—Record breaking earnings by the General Motors Corporation, totaling $92,285,674 in the first half of 1926 gor the first time have exceeded those of the United States Steel Corporation for the corresponding period. The latter's profits for the six months were $82,873,390.

The two companies, both of which are controlled by the Morgan interests and are among the largest of th company's industrial corporations, made public their earnings today and while U. S. Steel's result made the better showing for the second quarter it failed to overcome the lead set by General Motors in the first three months.

RESIGNS FROM TRUMBULL-VANDERPOOL ELECTRIC CO.

HARTFORD, July 27—(AP)—Ralph K. Mason, of Bantam announced his resignation as president of the Trumbull-Vanderpool Electric Manufacturing Company, inc., of Bantam today. It was learned that he has sold out all his stock in the company, amounting to about one third the outstanding capital of $300,000 to Paine Webber and Company, Hartford brokers.

Two Torington men, backed by the brokers, are expected to be elected directors of the company at a meeting tomorrow and a successor to Mr. Mason as president is to be chosen. John H. Lancaster, treasurer, and Harmon J Cook secretary, are mentioned for the presidency, but the selection will probably depend on the attitude of the purchasers of Mr. Mason's stock.

In the account of the conviction of Charles Carpenter, of this city in the Franklin town court Monday on a charge of reckless driving, omission was made of the fact that it was Carpenter's second offense on a similar charge, thus explaining why the maximum fine of $100 was imposed. ADVANTAGES OF SUMMER SOWING OF ALFALFA

The oldest method of starting alfalfa, that of seeding in summer is still widely practised, says a statement issued from the office of the New London County Farm Bureau in this city and prepared by J. S. Owens, crop specialist, Storrs. Summer seeding has several distinct advantages. A crop of oat hay, or even grass hay may be removed prior to the preparation of the seedbed. The sowing may be made in corn and much labor thus saved in the preparation. When lime is applied in the spring, it is better incorporated with the soil by midsummer. Again summer sowing favors the eradication of weeds during the dry season.

Observations made on a large number of fields in this state do not support the popular belief that summer seedings are likely to fail because of drought. Once alfalfa has germinated, the roots reach moist soil so quickly that dry weather is not a serious handicap. The average rainfall during July, August and September is sufficient to grow alfalfa well. Surely no seasons are drier than July one and yet alfalfa sown the first of July was three inches tall within ten days on two fields observed in Litchfield county.

There is much to do on most any farm in the summer and extra tasks such as seeding alfalfa are frequently delayed too long or done hurriedly. The one fatal mistake with summer sowing is that of delaying until too late for the plants to make a growth of some eight inches before winter. Several outstanding examples of this mistake made last year make this need clearer than ever. Alfalfa sown in September started well even wintered satisfactorily though only an inch or two tall. When spring came, it started slowly, more slowly than the weeds, the alfalfa became yellow and the crop was sacrificed.

Land which cannot be thoroughly limed, and prepared for seeding early in August should not be seeded until spring. Even now is an excellent time to plow up weedy land, sow rye, apply lime and thus get ready for an early sowing in the spring. Put lime, take the weeds out now for next year.

Regardless of time of sowing alfalfa, success follows the liberal use of lime, thorough preparation of seedbed, use of acid phosphate, the sowing of Grimm or Ontario Variegated seed, well inoculated.

Mrs. Blanche Wilson, 22, known on the stage as Blanche Pylon surrendered to police in Detroit and confessed to participation in an attempt to liberate her husband, Leonard Wilson, and a number of other prisoners from the county jail.

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 27.—Minus Captain F. C. Armington, the Service battery members are back in town and in many cases, back on their jobs this morning. The outfit arrived about 3 o'clock last night after a three days' motor convoy run from Tobbyhanna, Pa.

Captain Armington is a patient in the Scranton State hospital at Scranton, Pa. He became ill in camp the past week and when he was removed to the hospital it was feared that he would develop pneumonia. However, this possibility was averted as early as last Saturday, when Lieut. Gordon J. Gale visited him as the battery was leaving for home and found him without temperature and resting comfortably. It is anticipated that Captain Armington will be able to return here during this week. Warm days with cold nights at Tobbyhanna is believed to have been the combination that brought Captain Armington down with a heavy cold.

The battery members have been bronzed and physically hardened by their stay in camp. Aside from minor ailments of a few members, the general health of the battery was excellent during the period it was away from Danielson. On the return trip the motor convoy averaged nearly 100 miles a day. The trip was without special incident of any kind other than the opportunity the boys had to attend a dance Saturday evening, after they had stopped and made camp for the night.

RUSHING HIGH SCHOOL WORK DURING PRESENT WEEK

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 27.—A few more than 100 men are this week engaged on the work of enlarging Killingly high school. Bricklayers, carpenters, plumbers, electricians, metal workers, lathers, plasterers, cement workers and members of various other crafts make a beehive of industry about the structure that is to be Killingly's monument to education. The work has advanced to a point where any person can sense the fact that the greater Killingly high school is going to be a wonderfully fine building and one of which the people of this town are certain to be proud.

With the additions that are being built the school will have a frontage on Broad street of just over 200 feet. Its interior proportions are such that there is little exaggeration in saying that pupils who enter it this fall will require a day or two to familiarize themselves in getting about the big structure without losing time in arriving at where they want to go.

Even those who will go back there in the process of continuing a high school course will find the original building radically changed interiorly. For instance, the assembly hall will have disappeared in the sense that the space it occupied is now given over to class room and corridor space and to a store room and other new features. The arrangement of the first floor as they knew it will not be the same and the additions will provide appointments that will make them exclaim in delight.

At this early date, it may be predicted that the people of Killingly will be delighted with the enlarged school.

A construction foreman at the school said today that the north wing will be ready for the attention of the interior finishers in two weeks, if no unforeseen hindrances develop. While carpenters are engaged in covering the roof to make ready for the slaters, lathers have their work far advanced and plasterers are also working in certain parts of the building. Fine progress has been made within the past fortnight on all parts of the work. The new twin heaters are in place and the generally plumbing work well underway. It is going to be a race against time to have the north wing ready for use when the school reopens early in September, but the contractors hope to accomplish this. Practically all the brick work will have been completed within the next two weeks. Bricklayers are now running up the walls of the south wing, which will contain the gymnasium and the auditorium, a spacious, splendidly lighted part of the new structure. Three windows on the south side of the auditorium are ten feet in width by 22 in height.

Equipment for the enlarged school has arrived here in quantities and much of this is stored in the graded school on School street.

Danielson's Boy Scout organization, now recruited to good strength, is showing much enthusiasm for all the various activities that are special to a Scout's life. The boys are trying at all times for better ratings and now include in their plans hopes of having a baseball team and an orchestra, for which seven members have been enrolled.

The headquarters detachment of troops out of Danielson under Major E. L. Darbie are now in the midst of their field service work at Niantic, where they are to remain for 15 days from last Sunday. The local men are engaged largely with clerical work. Some of the group are overseas veterans of the World war.

Danielson is being circularized in the annual appeal of the Salvation Army in the Putnam district for funds to the amount of $2,500, to be used in carrying on the work it has undertaken in the field for a number of years past.

This week employes of the Jacobs Manufacturing company, makers of mill supplies are having a holiday, the plant giving them an annual vacation. Numbers of them have improved the opportunity to spend the period at beach resorts or on other summer outings.

Members of the Nazerene church held a cottage prayer meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Miner.

Those who have books out of the public library are expected to return them in all cases not later than Saturday of this week, as the library will be closed while repairs are being made.

At North Sterling Friday evening, Dr. Nathaniel Hibbard of Reynolds street is to give a lecture on his recent visit in Honolulu.

Members of Danielson Rotary club will be at the Putnam Country club Thursday evening for a meeting with the members of the Putnam Rotary club.

A prize waltz as a special feature attracted a large number to Kum-Along-Inn dance pavilion on the West Side Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Halle are expected home within a few days for an extensive motor trip in Canada.

Dr. Charles N. Fisk, in the naval service and on a visit east from San Diego, recently visited with relatives and friends in this town.

A family of seven skunks rolling in the sand at the edge of the state highway between Danielson and Brooklyn gave passing motorists something to think about as to ways and means of getting by without exciting the skunks unduly.

Supt. W. E. Parker of Killingly's schools has returned to Danielson after an absence of two weeks which he has enjoyed as a vacation period.

Next Tuesday brings the outing of telephone employes in the New London district, at Moosup pond. Upwards of 200 from all eastern sections of the state are expected to attend.

Henry C. Jackson Springfield was a visitor with friends in Danielson Tuesday.

Miss Margaret Burton is to enter Oberlin university.

The quarantine on dogs continues to be maintained in the town of Plainfield and is observed well.

In this season of a short hay crop, grass is being cut in every out of the way place and on hundreds of very small areas that as much as possible may be obtained against possible shortage.

In the Quebec section on the West Side there are scores of fine gardens from which employes of the Quinebaug company are taking seasonable vegetables and from which they will later take further allotments for storage and winter use. The land is owned by the Quinebaug company and employes are permitted to use it for gardening.

Tuesday's maximum temperature in Danielson was 91 degrees, regarded by many as comparatively cool after the scorching weather of the past week.

A house for Harold Baldwin is to be built on the West Side, nearly opposite the Prentice residence.

New fencing is planned by St. James' parish for both St. James' and Holy Cross cemeteries. Sections of the new ornate fencing are in place at St. James' cemetery.

The Buddies continue to maintain what appears to be a safe lead in the Twilight league, and now that some of their players have returned from camp are expected to continue their good showing. They have lost but one game to date and won seven.

Killingly high school graduates are suggesting that it would be nice if they were allowed gymnasium privileges at the new high school, when the work now in progress is completed. Possibly the Alumni association may be able to bring about such agreement under certain conditions.

Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio, Iowa, Virginia and Colorado were represented by automobiles carrying tourist parties through Danielson Tuesday, not to mention various other states whose registrations are seen so often hereabouts as to attract no attention.

More rain is again the cry of the farmers. The general water shortage is reflected in the condition of the brooks and rivers in this territory. Some of the brooks are nearly dry at this particular time.

These two fire escapes will make these two modern wings as fireproof as is possible. Vonsiatsky, $25; Alexander Gilman, $10; Edward H. Burt, $10; John P. Grosvenor, $10; John J. Whitehead, Jr., $10; Jacob Alpert, $10; Hyde Smith, $10; George L. (Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, July 27—Sister Anne, one of the beloved members of the family at St. Mary's convent, died at St. Francis' hospital in Hartford at 12 o'clock midnight Tuesday morning. Sister Anne was born in France and leaves two sisters there. She has lived in Jewett City four years. Her body was brought to the convent today.

Fred S. Campbell, who has not been well for some time, went to Backus hospital Tuesday for rest and treatment.

Friends of Rev. Albert Dounell, a former pastor of the local Congregational church hear from time to time of his progressive work in Newington. N. H. An article in The Congregationalist is of interest to his friends here, who always have appreciated his capability to put over any matter he undertook.

The church at Newington, N. H., with a membership of 36, raised its quota for the building project of First, Washington, and sent it in last week. This effort was made practically at the same time that money was raised for certain historical memorials in the town. Newington church is 210 years old, both the organization and the church building.

The associate minister of First Church, Rev. D. J. Path, was minister of the Newington church during his college course. The effort to raise the quota was made with the enthusiastic backing and financial support of the minister of Newington church, Rev. Albert Donnell. This is the spirit which will make the building project possible for First Church.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

Norwich people experienced the thrills of a riot 75 years ago when the Wharf House was attacked by a gang of rowdies and the fire engine stolen and used to deliver water into the building.

The Thames River Works, a manufactory for hardware, was also organized here in 1851. Articles in part from the Norwich Courier of that year are as follows:

Tuesday, July 22, 1851—A riot took place last evening at the Wharf Bridge house and another is being threatened tonight unless the city authorities watch out. The riot last evening was caused when a gang of touhks in that section pitched on a man from a prominent family and gave him a terrific beating.

Over 200 people gathered around the house which is owned by the New London, Willimantic and Palmer railroad, and has long been known as a vile and infamous den, and determined to clean it up once and for all. Mayor Foster tried to stop the mob from carrying out their designs and David Young, Esq., read the riot act. Finally the mob dispersed. Later an alarm of fire was given and engines of Co. 1 and 5 responded. Mayor Foster met members of engine No. 1 as they arrived at Wharf House and gave orders to return to their station.

Engine No. 5 of the West Side reached the scene and proceeded to drown out the house and its occupants and it was only after Mayor Foster and several constables entered the fray that the firemen ceased their drowning out process and returned to their station. More trouble is expected however tonight.

A New York magazine has offered a prize of $25 for anyone sending in the shortest and most correct English sentence containing the letters of the alphabet.

Thursday, July 24, 181—During the severe electrical storm last evening the house of Isaac Gardner, at Gardner's lake, was struck and Mr. Gardner was knocked to the floor and rendered unconscious. His wife was badly shocked by the bolt and it is feared that she may not live. At Colchester two cows were struck and killed during the storm and the Academy building and Congregational church were struck and considerably damaged.

Henry Peale, foreman of Engine Co. 5 of the West Side writes the Courier and states that the members of his company were not responsible for the outrage at the Wharf House Mogday night. The truth is that rowdies broke into the engine house and stole the engine and took it to the scene of the riot to use for flooding out the building. Owners of the property also claim that the place had been cleaned out some days since and that people now residing there are respectable and fine citizens.

The clipper ship Challenge and Telegraph are to leave New York on Saturday on a sailing match around Cape Horn. The freight bills of the Challenge amount to $60,000 and the captain is to have a bonus of $10,000 if he puts her into San Francisco in 90 days. The Challenge cost about $120,000 and the Telegraph about $70,000 and they are both beauties.

Saturday, July 26, 1851—The Brother Jonathan was boarded the other day at New York, following her arrival from San Francisco, and several trunks containing letters were seized by the postal authorities. It is admitted that an agent for Adams & company placed them aboard the boat at Chagres. The search of the vessel followed information given the post office authorities that large numbers of Californian letters had been for some time past illegally conveyed on the steamers by express agencies.

Over 500 people witnessed the double hanging at the yard of the City prison in New York yesterday, when two men found guilty of murder on the high seas were hung. One of the men claimed he was not guilty and both stated that the third man accused, but whose execution has been held up for a few days, was not guilty of the crime. Both before their death warned people against starting in with petty crimes, stating that this was the beginning for them and ended at the gallows.

Two young men who live in a town not far from Norwich have lost the $3,000 in gold dust which they were bringing home. Both were waylaid in New York and were slugged, their dust being taken from them before they regained consciousness.

Erastus Case, John S. Hall, Harvey Case, Henry Thomas, Jonathan Thomas and H. L. Reynolds have purchased shares and have organized the Thames River Works, for the purpose of manufacturing plane irons, stran hinges and other articles of hardware. The capital stock, all subscribed for, amounts to $24,000.

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 27.—Minus Captain F. O. Armington, the Service battery members are back in town and in many cases, back on their jobs this morning. The outfit arrived about 3 o'clock last night after a three days' motor convoy run from Tobbyhanna, Pa.

Captain Armington is a patient in the Scranton State hospital at Scranton, Pa. He became ill in camp the past week and when he was removed to the hospital it was feared that he would develop pneumonia. However, this possibility was averted as early as last Saturday, when Lieut. Gordon J. Gale visited him as the battery was leaving for home and found him without temperature and resting comfortably. It is anticipated that Captain Armington will be able to return here during this week. Warm days with cold nights at Tobbyhanna is believed to have been the combination that brought Captain Armington down with a heavy cold.

The battery members have been bronzed and physically hardened by their stay in camp. Aside from minor ailments of a few members, the general health of the battery was excellent during the period it was away from Danielson. On the return trip the motor convoy averaged nearly 100 miles a day. The trip was without special incident of any kind other than the opportunity the boys had to attend a dance Saturday evening, after they had stopped and made camp for the night.

RUSHING HIGH SCHOOL WORK DURING PRESENT WEEK

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 27.—A few more than 100 men are this week engaged on the work of enlarging Killingly high school. Bricklayers, carpenters, plumbers, electricians, metal workers, lathers, plasterers, cement workers and members of various other crafts make a beehive of industry about the structure that is to be Killingly's monument to education. The work has advanced to a point where any person can sense the fact that the greater Killingly high school is going to be a wonderfully fine building and one of which the people of this town are certain to be proud.

With the additions that are being built the school will have a frontage on Broad street of just over 200 feet. Its interior proportions are such that there is little exaggeration in saying that pupils who enter it this fall will require a day or two to familiarize themselves in getting about the big structure without losing time in arriving at where they want to go.

Even those who will go back there in the process of continuing a high school course will find the original building radically changed interiorly. For instance, the assembly hall will have disappeared in the sense that the space it occupied is now given over to class room and corridor space and to a store room and other new features. The arrangement of the first floor as they knew it will not be the same and the additions will provide appointments that will make them exclaim in delight.

At this early date, it may be predicted that the people of Killingly will be delighted with the enlarged school.

A construction foreman at the school said today that the north wing will be ready for the attention of the interior finishers in two weeks, if no unforeseen hindrances develop. While carpenters are engaged in covering the roof to make ready for the slaters, lathers have their work far advanced and plasterers are also working in certain parts of the building. Fine progress has been made within the past fortnight on all parts of the work. The new twin heaters are in place and the generally plumbing work well underway. It is going to be a race against time to have the north wing ready for use when the school reopens early in September, but the contractors hope to accomplish this. Practically all the brick work will have been completed within the next two weeks. Bricklayers are now running up the walls of the south wing, which will contain the gymnasium and the auditorium, a spacious, splendidly lighted part of the new structure. Three windows on the south side of the auditorium are ten feet in width by 22 in height.

Equipment for the enlarged school has arrived here in quantities and much of this is stored in the graded school on School street.

Danielson's Boy Scout organization, now recruited to good strength, is showing much enthusiasm for all the various activities that are special to a Scout's life. The boys are trying at all times for better ratings and now include in their plans hopes of having a baseball team and an orchestra, for which seven members have been enrolled.

The headquarters detachment of troops out of Danielson under Major E. L. Darbie are now in the midst of their field service work at Niantic, where they are to remain for 15 days from last Sunday. The local men are engaged largely with clerical work. Some of the group are overseas veterans of the World war.

Danielson is being circularized in the annual appeal of the Salvation Army in the Putnam district for funds to the amount of $2,500, to be used in carrying on the work it has undertaken in the field for a number of years past.

This week employes of the Jacobs Manufacturing company, makers of mill supplies are having a holiday, the plant giving them an annual vacation. Numbers of them have improved the opportunity to spend the period at beach resorts or on other summer outings.

Members of the Nazerene church held a cottage prayer meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Miner.

Those who have books out of the public library are expected to return them in all cases not later than Saturday of this week, as the library will be closed while repairs are being made.

At North Sterling Friday evening, Dr. Nathaniel Hibbard of Reynolds street is to give a lecture on his recent visit in Honolulu.

Members of Danielson Rotary club will be at the Putnam Country club Thursday evening for a meeting with the members of the Putnam Rotary club.

A prize waltz as a special feature attracted a large number to Kum-Along-Inn dance pavilion on the West Side Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Halle are expected home within a few days for an extensive motor trip in Canada.

Dr. Charles N. Fisk, in the naval service and on a visit east from San Diego, recently visited with relatives and friends in this town.

A family of seven skunks rolling in the sand at the edge of the state highway between Danielson and Brooklyn gave passing motorists something to think about as to ways and means of getting by without exciting the skunks unduly.

Supt. W. E. Parker of Killingly's schools has returned to Danielson after an absence of two weeks which he has enjoyed as a vacation period.

Next Tuesday brings the outing of telephone employes in the New London district, at Moosup pond. Upwards of 200 from all eastern sections of the state are expected to attend.

Henry C. Jackson Springfield was a visitor with friends in Danielson Tuesday.

Miss Margaret Burton is to enter Oberlin university.

The quarantine on dogs continues to be maintained in the town of Plainfield and is observed well.

In this season of a short hay crop, grass is being cut in every out of the way place and on hundreds of very small areas that as much as possible may be obtained against possible shortage.

In the Quebec section on the West Side there are scores of fine gardens from which employes of the Quinebaug company are taking seasonable vegetables and from which they will later take further allotments for storage and winter use. The land is owned by the Quinebaug company and employes are permitted to use it for gardening.

Tuesday's maximum temperature in Danielson was 91 degrees, regarded by many as comparatively cool after the scorching weather of the past week.

A house for Harold Baldwin is to be built on the West Side, nearly opposite the Prentice residence.

New fencing is planned by St. James' parish for both St. James' and Holy Cross cemeteries. Sections of the new ornate fencing are in place at St. James' cemetery.

The Buddies continue to maintain what appears to be a safe lead in the Twilight league, and now that some of their players have returned from camp are expected to continue their good showing. They have lost but one game to date and won seven.

Killingly high school graduates are suggesting that it would be nice if they were allowed gymnasium privileges at the new high school, when the work now in progress is completed. Possibly the Alumni association may be able to bring about such agreement under certain conditions.

Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio, Iowa, Virginia and Colorado were represented by automobiles carrying tourist parties through Danielson Tuesday, not to mention various other states whose registrations are seen so often hereabouts as to attract no attention.

More rain is again the cry of the farmers. The general water shortage is reflected in the condition of the brooks and rivers in this territory. Some of the brooks are nearly dry at this particular time.

These two fire escapes will make these two modern wings as fireproof as is possible. Vonsiatsky, $25; Alexander Gilman, $10; Edward H. Burt, $10; John P. Grosvenor, $10; John J. Whitehead, Jr., $10; Jacob Alpert, $10; Hyde Smith, $10; George L. (Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, July 27—Sister Anne, one of the beloved members of the family at St. Mary's convent, died at St. Francis' hospital in Hartford at 12 o'clock midnight Tuesday morning. Sister Anne was born in France and leaves two sisters there. She has lived in Jewett City four years. Her body was brought to the convent today.

Friends of Rev. Albert Dounell, a former pastor of the local Congregational church hear from time to time of his progressive work in Newington, N. H. An article in The Congregationalist is of interest to his friends here, who always have appreciated his capability to put over any matter he undertook.

The church at Newington, N. H., with a membership of 36, raised its quota for the building project of First, Washington, and sent it in last week. This effort was made practically at the same time that money was raised for certain historical memorials in the town. Newington church is 210 years old, both the organization and the church building.

The associate minister of First Church, Rev. D. J. Facth, was minister of the Newington church during his college course. The effort to raise the quota was made with the enthusiastic backing and financial support of the minister of Newington church, Rev. Albert Donnell. This is the spirit which will make the building project possible for First Church.

SENATOR JOHNSON'S LATEST

There may be times when Hiram Johnson makes an impressive appeal but such is not the case when he urges that the United States immediately withdraw from the world court as a protest against the kind of treatment Americans are receiving in Europe.

As a matter of fact we are as yet a member of the world court. We have voted to adhere thereto, but we set forth certain reservations which must be ratified by the respective nations, and as yet there are only a very few which have taken action thereon.

And on the other hand it has never appeared that we were joining the world court for the sole purpose of pleasing the European countries, but with the idea of contributing to a better world condition and to carry out as far as possible what has so long been urged in this country as a means of stimulating world peace. To withdraw from the court before we are in is an impossibility. To withdraw after we are admitted as a protest again what is now happening would be to work quite as much of a detriment to ourselves as to others.

But even in case we were in a position to withdraw and wanted to it would be necessary for congressional action and congress is not in session. The most we could probably do under the circumstances in furtherance of the Johnson idea would be to repeal the decision that has been made to enter the court.

Such a step would of course be pleasing to the opponents of the world court, whether there was any desire to retaliate on the Europeans who are unable to restrain themselves, and it would please Senator Johnson because it is against what the administration has advocated and the senator from California has been keeping himself worked up in that sort of an attitude for some little time.

The manner in which Americans in Europe are being treated will in all probability be found to have its exaggerations, and we have no idea that the suggestion from the western senator will even get serious consideration.

STOPPING DOPE SELLING

Ever since prohibition has been put into effect it has been claimed that it was increasing the use of dope. In view of the fact that it is quite easy to obtain liquor there seems to be no excuse for those who want liquor turning to the use of narcotics. But there seems to be reason for the belief that the manner in which the dry law is being evaded is giving encouragement to the dope peddlers to push their wares more brazenly than ever.

Narcotic laws for the restriction of the sale of habit forming drugs have been adopted but they are difficult to enforce because of the ease with which smuggling can be carried on and the inducement which the large profits hold out to those who are willing to engage in such business.

Some idea of what the illegal traffic in dope amounts to and what the enforcers of the law have to contend with, is furnished by the conditions recently revealed in Washington where a round up was made of the narcotic peddlers with the result that 4 were taken into custody. This raid indicates that the authorities knew that the law was being violated, who was engaged in the illicit business where they could be found and that they had been undisturbed by enforcement activities in the past.

With 40 at work dispensing dope in its various forms in Washington it gives some idea of what is probably going on in other large cities and throughout the country. It shows that the dope peddlers are able to get the drugs and that they find enough who want their goods to make it worth while for them to stay in the business. The fact that they are working to hasten the demoralization of humanity and to contribute to more crime gets no consideration. They are concerned with the dollars that can be obtained through the wreckage of human life.

Such a raid as that at Washington may have its effect in checking the traffic temporarily but it shows that even greater vigilance than has been shown in the past is required. Enforcement of the narcotic laws is by no means an easy task as long as it is possible to obtain dope to sell.

STILL HOPE

On the return of Ambassador Collier from Chile there is brought hopeful news that all is not over in the way of a possible adjustment between Peru and Chile concerning the provinces of Tacna and Arica. He is without information during the three weeks that he has been on his way home but the attitude when he left was encouraging, so much so that he believes that the settlement is not far off.

Ambassador Collier is home for a vacation and in view of the part which this country has endeavored to play in bringing about an agreement between the countries which have been unfriendly for so long much interest attaches to his views. He doesn't give any encouragement to the idea that the plebiscite plan can or will be revived, but he is confident that some one of the plans advanced by Secretary Kellogg for an adjustment that will include Bolivia will finally be accepted.

Such a compromise as would give Bolivia a pathway to the sea and divide the remainder of the territory between the two countries in the dispute would be the ideal settlement. The value of the territory concerned is such that it is not worth fighting over. There should be no objection to Bolivia getting an outlet except over territory of a neighbor and the fact this would separate the two coastal countries would be the best thing that could happen.

Ambassador Collier points out that the countries are recognizing the importance of a complete reconciliation among the ills of nations. It is action which should get the hearty encouragement of the other South America nations for a sore of that character has its affects upon the continent as well as upon the countries directly involved.

Through an accord that can be established through a compromise a better feeling and a lasting settlement can be expected. The reception given by other countries to the bad disposition displayed in connection with the plebiscite may have had its effect upon the situation, but whatever it is the adjustment will be welcomed when it comes.

THE TRAFFIC SIGNAL

The instructions which have been painted on the flashing signal at Shannon corner tardily meets a situation which had cried out for attention ever since it was erected. Strange as it may seem countless drivers have almost ignored the fact that the automatic signal was there and actually been surprised when they have been called upon to stop when about to pass a red signal. Such drivers have been on the lookout for a traffic officer and disregarded everything else, and have even blocked the way waiting from a signal from the officer after the green signal had replaced the red.

Likewise there was a refusal on the part of many to consider it necessary to keep to the right of the signal when going in any direction. This was invariably the act of out of town or out of the state drivers, but there was nothing to warn them to the contrary and when traffic was light and no leaders to follow it was a case of following the nose.

With the instructions "Keep to the right" the same as on the beacons, there will be no further excuse for such actions, whether by day or by night. The instructions as to the means of the various lights will serve to direct attention to the fact that the signal rather than the traffic officer is expected to govern the tide of travel.

Enforcement of the requirements will be made much easier by the painted explanations, while those who can read and see should have no other desire than to give their cooperation in meeting the situation and contributing to safety and a relief of traffic congestion.

ROBERT TODD LINCOLN

By the death of Robert Todd Lincln there passes a worthy son of an illustrious father. He was however in many ways what his father was not. He was a college man, one who had all the advantages in the way of an education, but his tendency was to corporation activities rather than political.

This was demonstrated more clearly following a number of years in political appointive offices, which came to him chiefly through the fact that he was the son of his father, though he was not one who overcapitalized that fact. His duties as secretary of war and as ambassador to Great Britain were not arduous and he will not go down in history as one of the great men of the cabinets or as an outstanding diplomat. Even though at different times there was talk about naming him as a candidate for the presidency he had no ambition in that direction.

That he made a success of his career, schooled as he was in the law and business, is shown by the record he made as general counsel and then as president of the Pullman company. He entered other fields than his father and on his own initiate quietly but persistently pushed his way up among the leaders.

There will be probably much regret that in giving the letters of the great emancipator to the public that he stipulated they should not be opened for 21 years. Whether they contain anything that is really new is a question but they will furnish a great field for exploration although many who lived so close to the Civil war president will never know the result. That this restriction was placed upon them that the proprieties might be fully observed is probably the proper explanation.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Crossing accidents can always be avoided by waiting until the train goes by.

There are those who are anxiously awaiting the days when there'll be blueberry cake and huckleberry pie.

The man on the corner says: The only trouble with larger thermometers is that it would make the hot spells seem hotter.

When an English doctor says that 90 miles an hour is safer than 45 it is easy to understand why so many are striving for greater safety.

With the debt of the nation cut $6,000,000,000 in six years that means the handling of the government's finances in the same masterly manner that would feature a big private corporation.

Those 137 men who were left in prison when three armed men released six of their friends at the Texas council Farm should get their admirers busy and insist on all being treated alike.

Bangor, Me., is complaining of its highest tax rate of $40.50 a thousand. But it should experience the near 5% in Norwich in addition to which the council is arranging to exceed appropriations and thus boost it still higher.

FROM LUCILLE'S DIARY

One evening last week I happened to hear Uncle Bob telling father that he had been trying to find time to run out to Beloit, Wis., to make some inquiries in regard to the timber land adjoining his farm. He said he thought there was a chance to buy it advantageously now, and it would greatly appreciate the value of his farm.

"Of course I could write to a real-estate agent or my tenant," he said, "but there's no use getting up any excitement about that particular strip of timber and aviating the price. I wish I knew some one who would make some quiet investigations for me."

"I'm your man," I said gayly. "I've always felt that I had a latent talent for business. Let me go, Uncle Bob, and show what I can do."

Father and Uncle Bob laughed, but after a moment Uncle Bob said he thought there was no reason why I could not attend to the matter as well as anybody. He said if I could buy the land cheaply he would give me a nice little bonus. He gave me the names of people to see out near the farm and I said in the most business-like manner that I would go the very next day.

Before taking the train I called Dexter Maines and told him I was leaving for Beloit on a business errand for my uncle and that I knew I should perish from ennui during any leisure hours I should have. I asked if I were right in my recollection that he had a cousin there on the college faculty.

"Yes, Tom's there. Look him up and say hullo for me. He's a trifle bookish, but he's a good scout, all right," answered Dexter, and I certainly found Tom Dexter charming. He took me to the movies that evening, and he said he could arrange to drive me out to Uncle Bob's farm the next day.

"If you didn't have to visit that farm this morning," he said the next day when he called for me, "we could drive over to Janesville and lunch at the Colonial home. Have you ever been there? It's a delightfully snug place, with open fires, old books and food for the gods."

"That's simply too alluring to be resisted," I laughed. "It's against my principles to allow business to interfere with pleasure. Let's go to Janesville first and come back by the farm."

Unfortunately we were not able to carry out our plan, for when, after our delightful luncheon, we started back a heavy snow had begun to fall and the storm became more and more violent. Mr. Dexter said he did not think it would be wise to drive off into a rather vague country when we couldn't see more than ten feet in front of the car.

We even had difficulty in sticking to the good highway between Janesville and Beloit, and I was thankful when at dusk we finally stopped in front of my hotel.

We had dinner together there, and Tom, as I had begun to call him, stayed in the evening for a game of double dummy bridge. I feel that my little trip to Beloit was more than worth while on account of making such an interesting new friend, even if I were not successful in the real-estate deal.

"You don't mean to say, Lucile," exclaimed Uncle Bob, when I told him about the severe snowstorm, "that you never went out to the farm, nor saw the timber land, nor talked to the people around there?"

"If I had known that it was going to snow I would have gone in the morning, but, anyway, Uncle Bob, before I left town I saw a real-estate man who will try to buy you that land. I told him that you didn't want to, but that you would pay as much as $250 an acre. Wasn't that what you said?" I asked, as I noticed a queer expression coming over his face.

"That's what I said confidentially to you, for my very highest figure, but I didn't expect it to be published in Beloit. You're some little business woman, Lucile," he said, sarcastically, and when I protested that he should not blame me for the weather he said he did not.

"I blame myself entirely," he remarked in an odd tone that I could not understand at all. I think Uncle Bob is really strange in some ways. For instance, I could not help being hurt because he never offered to pay me for my time. He did not even thank me for taking the trip for him.—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Candidates for Tuberculosis Commission

Mr. Editor: In looking over your valuable paper I saw there were eight candidates in the field for tuberculosis commissioner. With the exception of two there is none of them any more qualified for the position than the humble worker who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow.

Not one of them needs it and I hope the governor will give this matter careful consideration. There are hundreds of men in our state who are unable to perform manual labor, but who could and would perform the duties of the office in a more capable manner than any of the candidates who are in the field for the simple reason that the $2,500 salary per year would mean much more to him than it would to the others.

Before I close my letter I would like to say a few words in answer to Mrs. Robinson's statement that the textile industry had gained 22 per cent over what it was in 1919. The American Thread Co., reports a loss of $552,729 for 1925. Does that showing mean that the textile industry was booming? Mrs. Robinson is a very interesting writer on some things but her knowledge of the textile industry is to say the least very deficient.

If Mrs. R. would take a trip through the towns of Willimantic, Putnam, Plainfield, Jewett City, Taftville and Baltic with the smaller towns between she would learn some things which would open her eyes.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

John F. Nugent, who has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States senator from Idaho is a former member of the senate. In 1918 he was appointed an interim occupant of the seat in the upper house of congress by Governor Alexander and in 1920 was defeated for re-election by Senator Frank R. Gooding. At present Mr. Nugent is holding the lucrative post of chairman of the federal trade commission. He is a lawyer by profession. One of his most important cases in which he won renown was that involving the killing of former Governor Steunenberg at Caldwell, in which he served as one of the counsel of the Western federation of miners. He first came into prominence politically as chairman of the democratic state commission of Idaho.

HOW WOULD YOU GO

HOW WOULD YOU GO From Norwich to Torrington?

Torrington is located in Litchfield county and would provide a fine trip for the motorist who desires a long ride over good roads.

For a trip which would carry the driver over two widely separated sections of the state the trip to Torrington could be taken from Norwich to Colchester and up to Hartford, then north on Main street to Route 17, through Avon and to Canton, then over Route 128 to Torrington, which would take the driver through the beautiful Nepaug state reservation of 61 acres, located about three miles beyond Canton. The distance by this route would be approximately 70 miles.

On the return the driver could proceed from Torrington by way of Route No. 8, south on Main street, to Thomaston, then by Route No. 113 through Bristol and Plainville to New Britain and Middletown, a distance of 39 miles. From Middletown Route No. 111 takes one to Marlboro and the Hartford-New London pike, thence to Colchester and Salem and return to Norwich over the Gardner lake road. This trip would total about 80 miles, giving a round trip of 150 miles, only 9 miles of which would be a repetition.

From Torrington one could also return to Norwich by way of Route No. 8 to Waterbury, then by No. 111 to Meriden and Middletown to Marlboro and home, a distance of about 84 miles, or by Middletown, East Haddam and Salem to Norwich, approximately the same distance.

AS OTHERS SEE IT

Not Competent

(Bristol Press)

One of the most accurate cartoons we have seen of late is that under title of "Rougher on the Ocean." It represents a little Filipino rocking his own canoe hilariously in a smooth pond protected from the tempestuous ocean just outside by the substantial breakwater called United States Protection Wall. That tells the story. The Filipino is not competent to sail the Ship of State and no amount of misdirected sympathy can make him skillful. Nature made him an incompetent. With American protection, direction and guidance removed he would quickly reduce his craft to the condition of a helpless derelict. The fact that he hasn't sense enough to know when he is well off is sufficient to discredit his intelligence and capacity.

CHILD TRAINING

THE GUIDING OF CHILDISH IMPULSE

Josephine Weyman

That day has passed, fortunately, when a child's natural impulses were suppressed by the weight of adult supervision. Fortunately, too, the day is now passing when all adult supervision was removed from the child's unformed impulses. The pendulum, having swung too far each way, is now at last gently swaying between these two extremes, pointing the way to a training of children which will combine encouraging the natural impulsive suggestive supervision by the parent and teacher.

Parents can do a great deal, even with very young children, to turn the experimental instincts to definite, purposeful endeavor. The four-year-old child may still be attracted to blocks, to colored papers, to pictures merely for the pleasure of the passing moment. But as he grows to the age of six, he is ready to use these things for the purpose of some desired end. This is the parent's opportunity to suggest the material's various uses, or to set some simple model before the child so that he can use his materials for copying it; it is, too, the only way in which the child can ever grow away from that choosing of things for their mere passing fascination.

In this, as in everything connected with the training of children, the spiritual are very closely allied to the physical. The child must be helped to see the intrinsic usefulness of these material things, and led to discover their adaptability and connection with each other. In this way his spiritual insight will be strengthened also.

If a child is never allowed freely to experiment with blocks, clay, scissors, paper, or whatever other playthings or play-materials he may have, he will never know how to meet and work out a problem for himself. Nevertheless, unless there is someone to suggest to him new ways of using his materials or show him where he can improve the work of his hands, the time will come when he will become bored with his products and with all his playthings. If he is ever to grow he must be given the chance to adapt to his own work the successful methods worked out by others.

IN DAY'S NEWS

WRESTING A RICH DOMAIN FROM THE GRECIAN MOSQUITO

American engineers have recently sailed from New York to direct the reclamation of the Vardar river marshes. Backed by an American loan of $2,500,000, they expect to win a victory over the greatest enemy to progress in historic Macedonia, the mosquito.

"Everyone is familiar with the heroic part the United States navy played in helping to move 300,000 Greek refugees in two weeks, out of the inferno at Smyrna," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from their headquarters at Washington, D. C. "Reclamation of the Vardar marshes, is solid, constructive work by which Americans are finishing that Smyrna task.

"Out of the reclaimed flood plain of the Vardar will be carved farms for thousands of Greeks deported from Turkey. For there are still many of that army of 1,136,000 refugees who must have land. Twelve acres, experts say, is the minimum for a family to live on, but many refugee huts are set down in two and three acre patches without American and British charity starvation would invade Macedonia.

"When the American engineers land at Salonikk they will be at the mouths of the Vardar. They will also be at the heart of the main corridor from the Mediterranean sea directly into the heart of the Balkans. The Vardar, although only 200 miles long, is the most important stream in these, the stormiest states of Europe. It has carved a channel for itself and a roadway for men through the jumble of mountains and valleys.

"Greece, by international agreement, gives Yugoslavia (post war Serbia) free access to the Aegean sea down the Vardar. Recently Yugoslavia has raised loud protests that her Vardar stock trains take 30 days to go 30 miles from the south Yugoslavia border to Salonikj free port.

"Reclamation plans for the draining of two lakes, Arjan and Amatovo. They lie end to end along the Vardar and measure together about 15 miles. In turning two lakes into farm lands, the engineers will be speeding the process of nature. Most farm sites in these scrambled mountains where there is any agriculture worth writing about are lake beds abandoned by their lakes.

"Lakes Arjan and Amatove are shallow pools with broad mosquito marshes. They have been diked-up by mud released by the Vardar when it bursts through the last chain of hills. The lakes are a handle to the Vardar delta which unfolds fan-wise in a great swamp 20 miles from tip to tip. Salonikj is at the western tip. The delta in fact goes by the name of Saloniki Campagna. The name recalls the more famous Campagna of Italy north of Rome, once the granary of the Imperial City, today a malarial waste. Indeed, it is a question which Campagna raises the most vicious mosquitoes. Fifteen tons of quinine were prescribed for the refugee camp that lived in the tent city at Salonikj. Malaria spread by mosquitoes has deadened the wits of those who try to cultivate the rich Vardar soil—that is those who survive. So if the American engineers can do for the Saloniki Campagna what Goethals did for Panama, southern Macedonia may again earn its reputation, 'the storehouse of the Balkans.'

"Invasion of modern engineering in the homeland of Alexander the Great will, it is to be regretted, conflict with a most primitive and picturesque people, the Vlachs. Added to the complex Balkan human equation of Albanian, Serb, Rumanian, Turk, Bulgar, Greek, Spanish-speaking Jew, and Mohammedan Jew, the Vlach fraction discourages solution. But there are 600,000 Vlachs in the Balkans. A few thousand of them have used Vardar delta grass lands for years upon years.

"The Vlachs are a mystery race. Their own name for themselves is Arumani, similar to Rumanian. Their dialect, like the Rumanian languages, is based on Roman roots. Are they descendants of Roman colonists? Are they some barbaric clan conquered by Rome and culturally stamped with the indelible mark of Rome? Rumania naturally has laid claim to the Vlachs from time to time as her nationals, but those in North Greece and the Vardar region are Hellenized. The Vlach is a shepherd possessing sheep and goats. He is also a nomad. Even as the Laplander drives his reindeer to the Baltic swamps in the winter, and as the Bakhtiari of Persia bring their stock from the mountain pastures to the Tigris flood plain before snow flies, so the Vlach seeks the Vardar. He comes after the mosquito has shut up shop and leaves for his permanent Vlach villages in the Pindus mountains before the dangerous insect soars abroad in spring. The Vlach has depended upon free pasture in the Salonikj Campagna. Draining will bring permanent settlement so we shall again witness the clash of progress with the primitive."

Stories That Recall Others

Ether Waves, Maybe

Bobby had spent nearly an hour in carefully constructing a house of sand at the playground and had nearly completed it when a little ruffian who had no respect for artistic architecture kicked over the structure.

"Say, boy," blustered Bobby, "if you do that again you're going to hear from me, and it won't be over the telephone, either."

From the Mouth of the Babe

In one household a favorite expression used by one member is "under the circumstances." But the user didn't know she was overworking it until recently. She was looking the house over for a portfolio, with everybody in the family assisting, including a three year old niece. Finally she sank down on a chair in desperation.

"We've looked everywhere," she groaned. "Can anyone think of any place we haven't looked?"

"Oh, auntie," said the niece, suddenly struck with a thought, "have you looked under the circumstances?"
